WILSON DEMANDS CURRENCY REFORM AT THIS SESSION

Undismayed by Opposition, He Is Determined That Congress Shall Proceed Without Delay

SENATOR HOKE SMITH DISCUSSES WILSON PLAN

Says It Will Free the Country of Calling on Money Centers in Times of Stress

(BY RALPH SMITH.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21—The publication of the administration currency bill, the outline of which was given in these dispatches several days ago, has completely eclipsed interest in the tariff bill, which is being rounded into shape by the Democratic caucus in the senate. No event in Washington since the inauguration of President Wilson and the general change in administration has attracted quite so much attention.

Interest is intensified by the fact that the president will deliver his currency message in person to congress on Monday and by the further fact that the bill itself will be introduced early in the week by Chairman Glass.

SENATOR SMITH'S VIEWS.

Speaking of the currency today Senator Hoke Smith said:

"You have already published in The Journal an outline of the proposed currency reform. Such system would free the business interests and the people generally from the necessity of calling on the great money centers for currency at times when the movement of their crops or similar reasons require an increase in currency. The reserve banks, not less than twelve in number, will be in a position to meet these demands.

Senator Smith's practical business experience and detailed knowledge of banking is recognized in Washington as making him an authority on currency. His views are eagerly sought, and do not fail to carry weight when they are expressed. The senator is not yet prepared to endorse the administration bill as a whole. He has not had time to study it carefully and master its intricate details. Until he has familiarized himself thoroughly he will withhold a final expression. A more extensive examination of the bill has lead the senator to approve some of its essential provisions.

GOVERNMENT CONTROL.

"I approve thoroughly the plan of giving the control of the currency entirely into the hands of the government, rather than bestowing it upon the banks," said Senator Smith. "I am very glad the plan of interfering at this time with the national bank notes was abandoned. I do not consider an immediate change in the national bank notes as necessary. I would have never supported a measure which called in the present national bank notes and substituted bonds bearing three per cent interest for bonds bearing only two per cent interest which secure the national bank notes.

"After the reserve banks are established throughout the country and the plan by which five million of treasury notes will go into and come out of circulation medium as the demands of trade require, we will then be in a much better condition to retire the national bank notes.

"In a few years it should be practicable to call in all the silver and gold certificates now in circulation, which are nothing more than receipts for the deposit of gold and silver in the treasury. Treasury notes can be gradually substituted for the receipts and then the treasury notes of the government will have behind them an immense gold reserve in the largest in the world.

"With that condition brought about, treasury notes could be substituted for the present national bank notes also. The 2 per cent bonds which secure the national bank notes can be withdrawn and this rate of interest stopped instead of being increased by the issue of 3 per cent bonds."

UNFRIENDLY COMMENT.

All of the comment on the currency bill is unfriendly. There are many Democrats who still think the question should go over until next winter. The most severe critics of the administration bill are the bankers themselves, notably those of New York and other eastern cities. The bill will divest them of their power and confer it upon the president or the United States. They denounce the measure as an encroachment of the Oklahoma and Nebraska state banking laws. They Lobby Probe Has Fully Sustained Burden of Proof, Question Now Concerns Remedial Legislation.

(BY RALPH SMITH.)

WASHINGTON, June 21.—It's no longer a question of defining a lobbyist or of placing the finger of publicity on the insidious, subtle influences that are arrayed against the Underwood bill. In the judgment of the administration leaders, the lobby investigation has fully sustained and overcome the burden of proof and the real question now concerns itself with remedial legislation.

"The investigation is to go on, for there are yet some fertile fields of evidence to be turned up. The sugar letters that have been made public since Tuesday may be startling proof, but there are in existence lots of other letters that would add another astounding and instructive chapter to the investigation. In fact, there is more evidence than the senate committee can go into at this time because it is working under a time limit.

Much good has already flown from the investigation, in the opinion of the administration, and much more good will ensue when congress gets the opportunity to incorporate the lessons of the inquiry into preventive legislation. It is not expected that congress will be able to do any legislating on the subject at this session; but undoubtedly it will come up next December and will have the influential backing of the administration.

The most direct consequence of the investigation will be the enactment of a law requiring lobbyists to register, as they do in England and Georgia, and several other states of the union. Every man who comes to the capitol for the purpose of influencing legislation will have to make his purpose known in a book that will be open for public scrutiny.

The inquiry has had and will have a tremendous influence morally. It will tighten up the ethics that bind members of congress, and set a new standard of action in matters of vital concern.

For instance, there will undoubtedly be less propensity on the part of representatives and senators to be careless if not abusive of the franking privilege, and also their privilege to have printed documents of public interest, at government expense. The abuse of the franking privilege and the leave to print is an old, old story. The disclosure that Senator Lodge permitted the protection sugar interests to distribute "Sugar At a Glance" through the mails under his frank at a cost to the people of $28,000, simply serves to make the abuse more glaring. Mr. Lodge is not the only offender, but the fact that he is a man professing to entertain exalted ideas of ethics emphasizes the callousness which has ensued as to this abuse.

It is believed that Senator Lodge will be recalled for examination that will reveal some more activities of his, and

TELEMON S. CUYLER SUED FOR DIVORCE BY WIFE IN CALIFORNIA

Millionaire Wife of Atlantian Who Changed His Name From Cuyler Smith to Smith Cuyler, Wants Freedom

MR. CUYLER A TRAVELER AND WRITER ON HISTORY

Was Recently in Mexico, Where Wife Sought to Notify Him of Suit—Now at Home Near Wayside, Ga.

Mrs. Grace Barton Cuyler, at present of Almeda, Cal., has sued Mr. Telemon Cruger Smith Cuyler, the well known former Atlantian, for divorce, according to private advices received here Saturday.

Mr. Cuyler himself does not know yet of the suit, says the report that bears this latest bit of news concerning him, in the newspapers of Atlanta, New York, London, Paris or Macon, Ga., he will see a formal advertisement notifying him in legal parlance that his wife has sued him for a divorce in California. For the court has ordered that advertisement, it is said, to appear once each two weeks during three months in the newspapers of those cities.

Mrs. Cuyler is addressing her husband in the world at large with the formal notice required by the court at Alameda, Cal. She does not know, it would appear, that he is at his mother's country home in Wayside, Jones county, Ga., else a deputy might be sent there toserve upon him personally the notice of the suit.

GROUNDS OF DIVORCE.

Incompatibility is said to be the chief allegation of the divorce petition filed by Mrs. Cuyler. The suit further alleges, it is said, that her husband has not supported her. Mrs. Cuyler is reputed to be a millionaire in her own right.

Mr. Cuyler was in Atlanta last week greeting many friends. He gave no intimation of any estrangement between himself and wife to those who talked with him, it is said.

Mr. Cuyler won the hand of Miss Grace Barton, a wealthy heiress of California, who possessed even then fortunes in her own right. He wooed her, and they were married. Their wedding in New York, a dozen or more years ago, was an affair memorable. Europe received the happy bridal coupie on their honeymoon, and they tarried there, visiting first one place and then another, and indulging to the utmost their love of pleasure.

In his early days in Atlanta, Mr. Cuyler was known as Telemon Smith—Telemon Cruger Cuyler Smith, when his full entitlements were given to him. In one of the courts of Fulton county, he appeared as a petitioner with astute counsel and by due process of law he changed that name to Telemon Cruger Smith Cuyler. It is reported, he prefers to be known simply as Telemon Cuyler.

MAN OF MANY TALENTS.

From his youth in Atlanta until now, Mr. Cuyler has enjoyed life,—abroad, at home, in society, among old ruins, on the boulevards, at the beaches, in the operas—everywhere that a cosmopolite might roam and seek diversion. Mr. Cuyler is a collector of antiques. There is a soft place in his heart for every kind of curio.

He is writer of no small attainment. History—particularly southern history—war history—is another of his hobbies.

Just how long ago it was, even gossip does not tell, but some time ago, at any rate, Mr. and Mrs. Cuyler reached a diverging point in their lives. He fared him away, leaving her with their two children, Grace Barton, aged 11 now, and John, aged 5.

HAS ESTABLISHED RESIDENCE.

Slightly more than a year ago Mrs. Cuyler returned from her long residence abroad. She was not at home legally in any state of the union. She established her legal residence in California, with her mother, Mrs. John Barton, and bided her time. Twelve months rolled around, and the courts received her plea for total divorce and the custody of their children.

The other day when Mr. Cuyler was in Atlanta he told friends, it is said, that he had acquired a rich ranch in Mexico.

It is said that Mrs. Cuyler heard he was somewhere in Mexico, recently, and sent an emissary there to secure his acknowledgement of the divorce petition; but that the messenger returned with his quest unfulfilled.

MILITARY LAW TO BE UNDER FIRE BEFORE STATE LEGISLATURE

At Least Three Bills Looking to Repeal of Measure Will Be Introduced as Result of Augusta Strike Last Fall

SCHOOL BOOK QUESTION ANOTHER LIVE ISSUE

Present Five-Year Contract Expires in November—Legislature Meets Wednesday, New Governor Takes Office

If any one imagines that this year's session of the 1913-1914 general assembly of Georgia is going to be a fifty days' vacation for its members, that individual should revise his dope. For if indications can be relied upon, strenuous times are ahead, involving some of the fiercest legislative fights ever staged at the state capitol.

Perhaps the principal fight and the most far-reach g. will be precipitated when an effort is made to repeal the military act passed last year. At least three different bills, having this object in view, will be introduced, and it is more than probable that a joint committee from the house and senate will be appointed to investigate the operation of the present military law as applied to the Augusta street car strike last fall.

All three of the Richmond county representatives are determined upon the repeal of the law based upon an investigation of the part the militia played in the Augusta strike. The shooting and killing of three Augusta citizens who crossed the military dead line, and the subsequent exoneration by military courtmartial of the soldiers who fired upon these citizens, has led to a widespread demand for the repeal of the military law.

The Richmond representatives will have strong support in their fight from the representatives of several other counties. Indeed it is likely that the repealing bills will be introduced by members from other counties. As far as can be seen at this time, it appears that the efforts to repeal the law will will prove successful, but not without a long, hard fight, as the militia of the state, championed by some of the leading members of the house and senate, is opposed to any change.

Opponents of the law, however, will not be satisfied with anything less than an amendment which will restore to the civil authorities the right and power to control the enforcement of the law in instances when troops are called out to aid in preserving peace and order.

SCHOOL BOOK FIGHT.

Another lively fight will revolve around bills which will be introduced providing for the state to print and distribute its own school books. This contest will be waged for two reasons: the fact that in November the present five-year book contract expires.

Considerable time and attention of the legislature will be devoted to measures providing for the creation of new counties. About a half-dozen new counties will be proposed and each will have strong and persistent backing.

The new administration is pledged to enact, if possible, a permanent registration law, supplanting the law passed in 1907.

Other proposed laws which will bring on fighting bills will be introduced are: To abolish the sale of near-beer and eliminate locker clubs, to provide for compulsory education; to create a state banking department; to revise the state's tax system; to put county officers on salaries instead of fees; to rotate judges from one circuit to another; to provide for an inheritance tax; to create a state auditor; to abolish the offices of solicitor general and create in their stead the offices of county prosecutors.

A hundred or more bills of minor importance will be introduced.

At this coming session the general assembly must provide for the refunding of maturing state bonds amounting to $3,690,000.

SESSION OPENS WEDNESDAY.

The general assembly will enter upon its session Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock, but it probably will be the following Monday or Tuesday before it is thoroughly organized and ready for business. However, an avalanche of new bills will descend upon the clerk's desks on the first day.

Clerk John T. Boifeuillet will call the house to order and after members are qualified this body will proceed to elect a speaker. There are three candidates for this office: W. H. Burwell, of Hancock; R. N. Hardeman, of Jefferson; and J. F. Sheppard, of Sumter. Mr. Burwell appears to have the edge on his

ARNOLD DECLARES FRANK INNOCENT AND ENTERS CASE

Famous Lawyer Says He Wouldn't Defend Man Accused of Such Crime Unless Sure of His Innocence

SCORES CITY DETECTIVES FOR HOLDING TO THEORY

Mr. Arnold Says Detectives Have Tried to Prejudice the Case by Unfair Means—Has Studied Evidence

Reuben R. Arnold, famous Georgia lawyer, has officially entered the Phagan case in the defense of Leo M. Frank, as exclusively forecasted by The Journal last Thursday.

Mr. Arnold comes into the case with a ringing statement declaring his firm belief in the innocence of his client, and asserting that he would never defend a person charged with such an atrocious crime if he were not fully convinced of his innocence. Mr. Arnold says that he has reached the conclusion that there is no room to believe Frank guilty, after carefully studying the evidence in the case.

Mr. Arnold declares that it is surprising that the detectives should continue to put the crime on Frank with the incriminating statements of Conley before them. He scores the detectives because of the publication of the Formsby affidavit, declaring that by this and other means they have done Frank a great injustice.

With Mr. Arnold and Luther Z. Rosser working in his behalf a great legal battle is made a certainty when Frank faces a jury in the criminal division of the superior court. Solicitor Hugh M. Dorsey and Frank A. Hooper, who is associated with him, will have charge of the state's case. Lawyers and court attaches predict the most brilliant legal battle ever known in a criminal case in this state.

The date of the trial is still a matter of interesting conjectures, although it may be settled Monday after the return of Solicitor Dorsey to the city.

Mr. Dorsey still expects to set the trial of the case on the court calendar for June 30, but any number of things may interfere. An attorney associated with the defense stated Saturday afternoon that he knew of no reason why there should be a postponement, but would make no more definite statement.

While they know nothing definite it is the opinion of court attaches that the trial of the case will not be reached before July 14 or July 28, and their guess is generally expected to prove correct.

In a statement which he gave the public Mr. Arnold, who has been long regarded as one of the ablest criminal lawyers in the south, intimated that he is thoroughly familiar with all phases of the case, and as a result it is not considered probable that a postponement will be asked on his account.

"It is true that I have accepted employment to assist in the defense of Mr. Leo M. Frank, but I wish to state that before I agreed to take the case, I made it a condition that I should have time to study critically all the evidence delivered at the coroner's inquest and all the affidavits that have reached the public through the newspapers, so I could form an opinion for myself as to Frank's innocence or guilt. I would not defend any man if guilty of such a murder as the one in this case.

"After studying the evidence as critically as I can, I am satisfied that I hazard not a thing in saying that there is no room to believe Mr. Frank guilty of this horrible murder. I do not believe that any white man committed the crime.

"Indeed, it is surprising to me that the detectives should continue to try to put this crime on Frank with the positively incriminating affidavits of Conley before them. People of common sense, unless under great excitement, ought not to give a moments credence to either the Formby or Conley statements in so far as they attempt to implicate Mr. Frank.

"I see the detectives are gradually giving it out that Mrs. Formby will not be called as a witness, although her affidavit has been paraded before the public bearing the unqualified indorsement of the detective department as being perfectly reliable and true. Worse than this, an intimation was published in the newspapers that Frank's friends had persuaded her to leave town. In this and in many other ways our client has been done a very great injustice. The effort seems to have been not to find the criminal but to try by all means to put the crime on Frank.

"However, I think we will be able to clarify the situation in due time."

GEORGIA'S WEALTH AND WAGES SHOWN IN STANLEY REPORT

Impressive Showing Is Made by State's Manufactories in Commissioner of Labor's Summary for Legislature

Valuable statistics of Georgia's manufacturing enterprises, which show enormous capital, output and equipment, the number of employes and their maximum and minimum wages, are given in the first annual report of H. M. Stanley, the commissioner of commerce and labor. That report will be ready for delivery to the legislature shortly after it meets.

Cotton and knitting mills and woolen mills, cotton oil mills, brick, tile plants, etc., fertilizer factories, compresses, foundry, machinery and repair shops, marble, granite, bottlers and brewers, printing and publishing, bakeries, candy, brooms, buggies and wagons, cigars and tobacco, electric light plants, flour and grist mills, furniture, gas, ice factories, leather goods and tanners, are shown in detail.

GRAND TOTAL.

Total number textile mills 177; capital invested, $37,465,846; total value raw material used, $28,828,630; value all manufactured products, $53,540,897; total number employes, male 19,439, female 13,158; total males and females 32,597; total amount paid officials and clerks, $1,287,828; total amount paid wage-earners, $9,301,607.

TEXTILE INDUSTRY.

Cotton mills, 140. Capital, $35,288,-709; amount raw material used 254,325,-679 lbs.; cotton, value raw material $27,-990,307; yards of cloth, 453,621,394, value, $38,136,834; pounds yarn, 61,-776,241, value, $13,064,155; total value manufactured products, $51,200,489.

RAILROADS' SCHEME TO TAX FARMERS TO DIE WHILE FORMING

Committee Headed by Congressman Adamson Proposes to Save Farmers of South $7,500,000 Annually

(BY RALPH SMITH.)

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21.—A cleverly conceived scheme by which the railroads propose to standardize the weight and density of baled cotton at the expense ,it is said, of the southern farmers and ginners may be checked by federal legislation resulting from a series of hearings before a sub-committee of the house interstate commerce committee, of which Congressman Adamson, of Georgia, is chairman. The hearing will begin Tuesday and Judge Adamson is anxious that all persons feeling an interest in the matter shall appear to give testimony.

No congressional investigations with a view to legislation in recent years have been so pregnant with importance to so many people as the inquiry set on by the Georgia congressman. It is estimated roughly that if the plan of the railroads becomes operative in September as per schedule it will cost the cotton farmers of the south at least $7,500,000 annually and possibly a great deal more.

The railroads, it is said, propose to penalize cotton that is not baled and compressed in accordance with regulations that have been adopted by the trans-Atlantic Steamship company.

A penalty of 50 cents a bale is to be levied against every bale of cotton if it is packed to a density of less than twenty-two pounds to the cubic foot and a dollar a bale is to be the penalty against the old-fashioned bale, larger than twenty-two by twenty-four inches.

IMPOSSIBLE TO COMPLY.

The regulations as to weight and density in themselves may be reasonable enough and it is conceded that efforts should be made to standardize baled cotton. But two months is too short a time in which to revolutionize the whole scheme of cotton compressing. It will be impossible for the ginners to comply with the new requirements in the time allowed charge that it will concentrate the banking power of the country in the hands of politicians.

NEWS OF THE WEEK AS SEEN BY CARTOONIST BREWERTON

The New York World, which has been distinctly favorable to the Wilson administration, regards the bill as conferring "a tremendous" power on the president. "It is the greatest single power in its possibilities for good or evil that congress has ever undertaken to confer on the executive," says the World.

"POLITICS IN FINANCE."

The minority of eastern bankers, while inclined to emphasize the numerous good features of the bill, view its concentration of all authority in the hands of a small board of $10,000 per year men appointed by the president and confirmed by the senate, as a step toward making American finance the football of party politics, and wish it were possible to arrange a compromise between those who favor government regulation and private regulation.

It is conceded that either the government must control, or control must be in the banks. The Aldrich Central bank scheme looks to control by the banks, and was vigorously attacked by the leaders of the Democratic party, which ever since the beginning of the Bryan leadership has demanded control by the government. The two plans will not mix any more than oil and water.

It is unquestionably true that under the bill the president becomes a more powerful official than ever before.

PRESIDENT'S GREAT POWER.

Through a reserve board appointed by himself he would control the issue of treasury notes, would remove bank officers, close banks and install receivers, establish and regulate the rate of discount for the country at large, and suspend, at his discretion, all reserve requirements. In other words, the president would have absolute authority over all banks, and would be able to say whether they should continue in business or go into receiverships.

Secretary Bryan, has always claimed that the people can trust their president in a larger way than they can trust the banks. Just how much truth there is in that proposition would, of course, be quickly established, once the new bill should become the law of the land. The idea is not new, but heretofore it has been discussed in an academic sort of way.

Now it is to be practically applied to the financial business of the country.

It is pointed out in numerous places that this bill will not only make the presidency a much greater prize than ever before, but will make it difficult a financial prize, and thus offer the banks a stronger inducement than they ever have had to go into politics to control. Publicity laws and corrupt practice legislation are obstacles in the way of such control, however. Whether this will actually happen nobody knows, but that the centralization of power in the administration bill will have far reaching effects, is not seriously questioned.

WILSON NOT DISMAYED.

President Wilson has taken account of opposition to the bill, inside and outside of congress and says he believes legislation will be possible at this session. His plans are being laid accordingly. He has been advised that this will probably mean that the session will run pretty late into the fall, and may possibly adjourn only a week or two ahead of the regular session, to begin in December; but, he does not mind that and he hopes congress will not mind it, considering the importance of the subject, and the need there is to have something done as quickly as possible.

The executive message on the currency, on Monday, will not go into details, for it is probable that the bill as made public yesterday, will be modified in several respects before it finally is given approval as an administration measure. But the modifications, the president believes, will not touch the main features of the bill, as was true also of the tariff bill, but will leave them in all essentials as prepared under the president's direction by his expert advisers.

The president is not a novice in the art of handling men, and knows that the time to strike is while the iron is hot. If currency reform is difficult now, he believes it will be more difficult in December. If the fight should be postponed two years, that would mean that the country must look to the next administration for relief. And so Mr. Wilson is pushing for something at the present time, in the face of much opposition, in and out of congress, but with a degree of optimism that cheers his followers.

CURRENCY NOW ANTIQUATED.

The strong argument of the president in favor of currency legislation at this time, is his claim that the new tariff will not have a fair chance under existing currency laws. A good many public men have been converted to that view. The currency laws now in force grew up out of civil war conditions, away back in 1863 and 1864. And for nearly fifty years they have not been changed. During that time nearly every other civilized country has modernized its currency. The United States is practically the only one that is hanging back. President Wilson therefore tells his supporters that his insistence upon currency legislation is merely an effort to catch up with the time. The acknowledged defects of the American banking system are lack of provision for concentration to cash reserves and their employment whenever needed in time of financial stringency, rigidity of the borrowed-on national bank note circulation, and the absence of machinery for banking co-operation.

and the result will be that millions of bales of cotton will be thrown into the market or will have to pay an exorbitant penalty.

Congressman Adamson believes that congress should step in and protect the farmers and ginners against the unreasonable requirements of the railroads. He believes the hearing which he has provided will furnish the basis for the legislation.

EXHAUSTIVE HEARING.

He said today: "The hearing will cover the entire subject of preparing, transporting and marketing cotton with a view to harmonizing practices, securing uniformity as soon as possible, and preventing loss while waiting for uniformity. All who know anything about any phase of the subject are invited to appear.

"The published action of the steamship companies appears like a harsh effort to force a change in the presses throughout the country at a time so sudden as to be too expensive. There is no doubt that the cotton ought to be securely wrapped and safely marked for identification, but the rule as to penalizing all bales not of the shape or density described is indefensible.

"We may have to amend the charter act so as to penalize the steamship companies if they attempt to outlaw cotton by basing charges on anything but waste or space occupied.

"It seems to me that the key to the situation is uniformity in the size of a bale, which may be economically and safely reached in reasonable time, but it would be too costly to force it at once.

"The rules adopted by the steamship companies which the railroads propose to follow, prescribe a standard bale. Then they propose to penalize each bale 50 cents if packed to a density of less than twenty-two pounds to the cubic foot and a dollar a bale if it is an old-fashioned bale larger than twenty-four by fifty-four inches. Of course that means that all the old-fashioned bales would have to stay at home or pay the penalty.

"It is noticeable in these various conventions of steamships, railroads and cotton brokers, the ginners and farmers, on whom the burden must fall have not participated.

"In course of time all the box presses can be changed both in size and power, so as to compress to the required size and density at the gin, but it is impossible to do it in two months and the rules go into effect the first of September, and of course if all the old-fashioned bales are penalized the result will be either to increase the freight or restrict the market for the sale to this country, which means further loss to the cotton planter.

"When the reforms are made it is desirable also to adjust at once the questions of tare and tret and country damage, all of which are convenient instruments for speculative marauders to use in reducing the profits of the cotton grower.

"There is no sense in putting twelve pounds of wrapping on cotton and having thirty pounds deducted from it. The spinners and steamship people say that if uniformity is adopted in baling and wrapping those other questions will be largely eliminated.

"The loss of fifty million dollars a year to the cotton grower from successive and liberal sampling and means to prevent it by sampling at the gin is also a proper matter of consideration."

opponents, but they are both busy and a surprise is possible.

There are two candidates for the place of speaker pro tem.—Dr. A. J. Stovall, of Elbert, and John P. Cheney, of Cobb. So little speculation has been indulged in as to this race that the outcome cannot be predicted.

After the election of the speaker and the speaker pro tem., the house will elect its clerk, messenger, chaplain and other subordinate officials.

The senate will be called to order by Secretary Charles S Northen, who will preside until a president is elected. J. Randolph Anderson, of Chatham, and Judge John T. Allen, of Milledgeville, are seekig this office, with the chances slightly favoring Mr. Anderson.

Senator E. L. Smith, of the Ninth district, is a candidate for president pro tem. Like the house, the senate will, after choosing its presiding officers, go into the selection of subordinate officials.

Right here it should be remarked that Mr. Boifeuillet will be elected to succeed himself as clerk of the house and Mr. Northen as secretary of the senate. Neither has opposition.

If the organization of both houses is accomplished on Wednesday, Governor Brown's farewell message will be read before adjournment that day. The retiring governor is expected to include in his message several recommendations which he has made in previous messages but which have never been enacted into law.

Among these, it is said, will be recommendations for a general revision of the state's tax system, the enactment of a state auditor bill, a change in the registration law reducing the time of registration from six months before election to 30 days, an amendment to the railroad commission law reducing the membership of that body from five to three.

Either on Thursday or Friday the house and senate, in joint session, will canvass the state election returns and declare the results.

GOVERNOR SLATON'S INAUGURATION.

Saturday at noon Governor-elect John M. Slaton will be inaugurated. the ceremonies occurring in the hall of the house of representatives. Following the inauguration, Governor Slaton will deliver an address outlining the policies of the new administration, after which an adjournment will be taken and the members of both house and senate will be given a reception by Governor Slaton in the executive offices.

The first bill to be considered by the house will be one relative to the reelection of United States Senator A. O. Bacon. This bill is necessitated by the recent amendment to the federal constitution providing for the direct election of United States senators. It must be read three separate days in the house and three separate days in the senate. Senator Bacon wa snominated in the primary last fall and will, of course, be elected to succeed himself.

Alpha Delta Phis Meet in Chicago

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CHICAGO, June 21.—The national biennial convention of the Alpha Delta Phi Sorority, composing chapters from practically every leading college for women in the United States convened here this week, and will continue its meetings through the early part of next week. The convention is being presided over by Mrs. Jewel Davis Scarborough, of the Alpha chapter of Wesleyan college, Macon, Ga.

The address of welcome was delivered by Mrs. Mary Skaggs Chaves, of Chicago, also a member of Alpha chapter, has elaborate social program is being carried out, and matters of importance to the Sorority are being discussed.

YOUNG MAN SUICIDES IN LEAP FROM TRAIN

W. C. Berner, of Walhalla, S. C., Kills Himself Near Cornelia, Ga

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

CORNELIA, Ga., June 21.—W. C. Berner, aged 25 years, of Walhalla, S. C., leaped from Southern railway train No. 11, one mile above Cornelia, Saturday afternoon, and was almost instantly killed.

He is said to have been in a melancholy state of mind on account of a long illness from which he feared he could not recover.

With him at the time was his brother, J. D. Berner, Jr. The two were sitting opposite, with the seats turned. Both windows were down.

Suddenly W. C. Berner, jumping to his feet, was across the aisle and plunged through an open window before his horrified brother could stop him.

The train was stopped and the body was placed in the baggage car, where efforts to revive the young man were of no avail. At Gainesville the body was placed in charge of an undertaker.

The brothers were on their way to Atlanta.

LOBBY HAS BEEN FOUND; NOW FOR A SURE CURE FOR IT

these activities will undoubtedly be of much interest to the country.

The general talk among Democrats here now is that the opportunity for killing this abuse is here now, and so the probability is that the investigating committee will recommend legislation that will restrict these privileges and thereby bring about much needed economy in the postoffice department and in the government printing office.

It is a matter of common knowledge that lobbyists of one sort or other have had the use of the franking privilege for years. So have both the big political parties, and neither has stinted in using it. It has never been disclosed just how much this practice has cost the people, but it must run into the millions of dollars.

It may come to such a pass that there will be a law cutting off the franking privilege entirely. Such a step is being advocated and those who favor it point out that senators and representatives receive salaries and other allowances, and ought to pay postage just as any other salaried person.

Men's Suits With "Smartness" Needled!

If You Don't Live in Atlanta, Order by Mail

The Daylight Corner

We do not WHEEDLE "Smartness" into our claims---the "smartness" is already NEEDLED into our clothes! We use no pretty pictures to illustrate our ads---because PRETTY PICTURES do not make PRETTY CLOTHES. It's PRETTY CLOTHES that make PRETTY PICTURES ---and, the Men who wear clothes from THE DAYLIGHT CORNER, need have no hesitancy in arranging a sitting with the photographer.

Our Men's Suits of fine, PURE-WOOL materials---with "smartness" needled into 'em---are from $15 to $40. Our washable PALM BEACH CLOTH Suits, in Tan or Steel-Gray, at $7.50---and our MOHAIR Suits, in solid colors, and in Striped or Pin-Check effects, from $15 to $25---they, too, are NEEDLED with true "SMARTNESS".

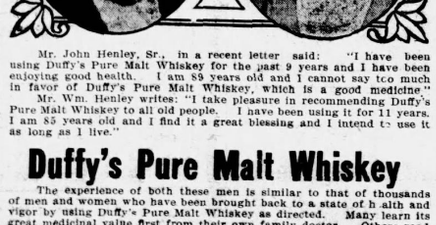
Aged Brothers In Good Health.



Mr. John Henley, Sr., in a recent letter said: "I have been using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey for the past 9 years and I have been enjoying good health. I am 88 years old and I cannot say too much in favor of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, which is a good medicine."

Mr. Wm. Henley writes: "I take pleasure in recommending Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey to all old people. I have been using it for 11 years. I am 85 years old and I find it a great blessing and I intend to use it as long as I live."

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

The experience of both these men is similar to that of thousands of men and women who have been brought back to a state of health and vigor by using Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey as directed. Many learn its great medicinal value first from their own family doctor. Others read the testimonials of those who are so grateful to Duffy's that they wish to aid fellow sufferers.

The genuine Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey is sold in SEALED BOTTLES ONLY, by most druggists, grocers, dispensaries and dealers. Should our friends for any reason be unable to secure it in their locality, we will have it shipped to them from their nearest dealer, express prepaid (cash to accompany order) at the following prices:—

4 Large Bottles, $4.30
6 Large Bottles, $5.90
12 Large Bottles, $11.00

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey should be in every home and make the above announcement so that you may become familiar with a source of supply.

MORE COMPLAINT OF VICE IN OLD DAYS THAN NOW

Figures Compiled by Chief Beavers' Secretary Show Success of Crusade

A report just completed by W. T. Morris, secretary to Chief of Police James L. Beavers, shows that more complaints in the shape of signed petitions by residents of certain communities in Atlanta, against alleged disorderly houses, were received during a period of six months in 1909 than have come to the attention of the chief since the instigation of the vice crusade on September 24, 1912, or a period of nearly ten months.

The old record shows further that so numerous were the complaints that the matter was brought to the attention of the police board, and the then mayor, Robert F. Maddox. Immediate action was taken in the shape of orders for the undesirable tenants to vacate the premises within thirty days from the date.

According to the figures and the special appeal to the police board, the number of petitions received during that six months was fifty-seven against forty-one that have been received by Chief Beavers since the vice lid went down a little less than a year ago.

These complaints did not come from sections of the city where such houses were allowed to run at the time, but from the residential part of Atlanta.

When showed the comparison of figures in the presence of a number of newspaper reporters, Chief Beavers' comment was brief, though there was no mistaking the smile of satisfaction that appeared on his countenance.

"This should have some effect on those who have expressed doubt as to the success of my action," said the chief "The figures speak plainly and for themselves. The result is satisfying to me, and the comparison indicates that real progress is being made toward ridding the city of vice."

Weak-Willed Vegetarians

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS.—Prof. Gautier, of the Sorbonne, has attacked vegetarianism with vigor in a lecture on the value of foodstuffs. Vegetarianism in no way responds, he says, to the needs, the requirements, or the activities of European people. As a rule of life it is anything but desirable. It reduces energy, weakens the will power, and lessens the capacity of quick decision.

BROTHERS STRUCK BY BOLT OF LIGHTNING; ONE DYING

Farmers on W. E. Wimpy's Place Were Standing in Front Window When Hit—House Was Uninjured—Little Damage in City Results From Storm

One man is thought to be dying and his brother is seriously hurt as the result of a peculiar prank played by lightning during the storm that passed over Atlanta and its vicinity about 5:20 o'clock Saturday evening.

The injured men are Lon F. Westbrooks, thirty years old, and W. C. Westbrooks, aged twenty-five years, both tenants on the plantation of W. E. Wimpy, one mile east of Clarkston. The brothers had been cutting oats in a field, but ran to the shelter of a small house when the rain commenced to fall. A third brother and another farmer ran there with them, but stood in a separate room.

L. F. and W. C. Westbrooks were standing in front of an open window watching the storm, when a bolt from the sky came in by the window and knocked both of them to the floor. The lightning did not injure the building in any way, and two men in an adjoining room scarcely felt the shock.

The lightning did no visible harm to L. F. Westbrooks, the most seriously injured of the two men, and there is not a scar on his body. At first he was considered and not thought to be badly hurt. He was telling of the sensation when suddenly he lost consciousness, and now Dr. F. L. Collinsworth, of Clarkston, who was called to attend him, entertains little hope for his recovery.

SHIRT BURNED OFF.

W. C. Westbrooks had his shirt burned almost completely off of him, the flesh of one of his arms was split by the bolt, and the lightning caused the color of both his legs to turn dark blue. He, however, is expected to recover.

The men in the little house with them ran through the storm and notified Mr. Wimpy, who immediately sent his automobile for them, and they are now housed in his residence, Hallyburton Hall.

L. F. Westbrooks has a wife and two small children, a boy and a girl. According to Mr. Wimpy, there was no damage done to the property in the vicinity of Clarkston by the storm, and the velocity of the wind was not as high as it was last Wednesday.

The flagpole over the office of the Atlanta Constitution was shattered by a bolt of lightning, and during the storm the telephone and trolley wires in the city were almost constantly "popping" as the lightning would strike them.

No serious damage, however, was reported to the police.

According to the weather bureau, the wind, which accompanied the storm was not particularly strong, and the storm was remarkable principally for the lightning and thunder. The amount of rainfall was .55 of an inch.

LATEST GUARANTEE SUIT TO BE HEARD THIS WEEK

Court to Pass on Request to Tie Up Company Officers' Personal Assets

The final phase of the Guarantee Bank and Trust company litigation, as far as the superior court is concerned, doubtless will be tried before Judge John T. Pendleton this week, when hearing on the stockholders' suit to enjoin Samuel E. Smith, W. A. Sims and Henry S. Miles, officers of the company, from disposing of their personal assets, is called.

Stockholders, through their attorneys, petitioned superior court Saturday in an amendment to the original suit, in which the company's officers were named personally and accused of conspiracy in the formation of the present concern to divert its funds to their private uses.

The petitioners held that superior court should restrain the officers from disposing of their personal assets until the entire case had been adjudicated. They declared the concern was insolvent and they were remedless at law.

W. A. Sims, named as an officer of the present company in the amendment to the suit, said Saturday night that he had not been connected with the old Guarantee Trust company, nor was he an officer of the present company at its organization. He said the allegation made in the suit charging him with fraud and "unsavory" history of organization" were incorrect. He declared that it doubtless was the intention of the petitioners to name some other person who had been connected with the old company and with the new at the time of its organization.

An Unknown Land

LONDON.—After encountering great hardships and losing three of their members, the expedition led by Dr. A. F. R. Wollaston has penetrated to the Great Snow range of New Guinea for the first time, and made a successful ascent of Mount Carstensz, almost to the summit. A valuable collection of birds and plants was obtained during the journeying.

Particulars which have just come to hand show that while it is only sixty miles from the spot where the expedition landed to the highest point reached, almost incessant rain, swollen rivers and the difficult country made the work so hard as to cover this apparently short distance occupy four and a half months. At the end the expedition nearly came to grief through the capsizing of Dr. Wollaston's canoe. The explorer was rescued with difficulty, but lost diaries covering three months and a large quantity of kit. Three members of the expedition died.

Dr. Wollaston left England a year ago to ascend Mount Carstensz, the highest peak of the Nassau range in Dutch New Guinea, which was the objective of an important expedition by three years ago.

WOODWARD PARDONS TWO BECAUSE OF THEIR YOUTH

Man and Woman Were Grown in Court, but of Tender Age in Petitions

Two pardons for stockade prisoners, one fora young woman and one for a young man, both of whom were serving thirty-day sentences, were issued by Mayor Woodward Saturday afternoon. In each instance the mayor gives as one of his reasons for clemency the fact that the person pardoned is very young and should not be subjected to contact with hardened criminals such as they must associate with in the stockade.

The woman pardoned is Mrs. T. R. Frierson, who was fined $25.75 or thirty days by Recorder Broyles, it being alleged bythe arresting officers that she was guilty of accosting men on the streets. Mrs. Frierson was arrested with Mrs. Lula McIvet, who was given a similar sentence by the recorder and who is now in the stockade. At police headquarters she gave her age as eighteen years, but in her petition to the mayor she says she is but sixteen. She declares she is married and is a respectable woman; that her husband is at work in Jacksonville, Fla., and that she wished to go to him.

S. E. Hayes is the man who receives a pardon. He was arrested on January 27 and charged with habitual loafing in a public place. At that time Hayes gave his age to the station house desk sergeant as 21. He states in his petition to the mayor that he is but sixteen.

Recorder Broyles fined Hayes $50.75 or thirty days. The case was appealed and Hayes lost out in the city criminal court on June 18, when he entered upon his stockade sentence. He claims to be in ill health from heart and kidney troubles.

Wolf Ferrari Opera At Concert Today

Atlantians will be given an opportunity this afternoon for the first time to hear music from the new Wolf-Ferrari opera, "The Jewels of the Madonna."

This wonderful music will make up a part of the program for the free organ concert this afternoon at 4 o'clock at the auditorium-armory under Atlanta Music Festival auspices. The general public of Atlanta and all visitors who hoppen to be in the city over Sunday are cordially invited to attend.

The complete program follows:

Overture to the opera "Raymond"—Ambroise Thomas.

Meditation in C—John A. West.

Swedish Wedding March—Soderman.

This program from a standpoint of musical excellence and also from the viewpoint of the melody-loving public, is one of the most interesting that the association has offered this summer.

In one of the encores Dr. Starnes will probably improvise on some well known hymn or familiar southern melody. These improvisations have been, in the estimation of many, among the most delightful features of the free concerts.

The opening number of this afternoon's program is a gay and brilliant example of the true stein of the lighter school of French opera. Its quaint melody will give it a distinct popular appeal.

Count Shoots Himself

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

VIENNA.—Count Ladislaus Kegkevitch, aged twenty-four, shot himself in front of the aristocratic Park club of Budapest. On a visiting card he had written that his suicide was not due to financial difficulties, but only two coins, worth together less than a farthing, were found in his pockets, and it is known that he had lost large sums in gambling. His family say that his suicide was due to an unhappy love affair.

"OH! - - OH!"

Diamonds on Easy Terms

Selection Packages Sent Anywhere

Our partial payment plans are so liberal that you can become the owner of a diamond surprisingly easy.

Everyone who wants a diamond can buy one, who has a regular, though limited, income. A few dollars cash and the small monthly payments will not be missed.

Some may hesitate, thinking that should they find it not convenient to continue the payments they lose what they have paid.

Our business plans are made absolutely fair, and our guarantee to buy back any time within a year for 90 per cent of cash price is given with each sale.

We take pleasure in shipping selection packages of our diamonds anywhere. If those who cannot visit our offices will write us about the size diamond they want, we will send a package for examination, express prepaid.

Each stone will be marked in plain figures with its weight, grade and cash price. The one you select can be settled for on partial payments if you wish, by paying one-fifth down and the balance in monthly notes, bearing a small interest account, or you can remit all cash, as you may desire.

Should there be nothing to suit you, or you have decided not to buy, return to us, express collect. We would still feel that we were under obligations for the pleasure of showing you our diamonds.

We will be glad to mail you our Diamond Book No. 5.

MALARIA PATIENTS ARE MENACE TO COMMUNITY

State Board of Health Issues Bulletin on Malaria and Its Treatment

Malaria is characterized as the principal obstacle of civilization in tropical and semi-tropical countries in the latest bulletin issued by the state board of health.

The board deals in an interesting manner with the disease and urges all patients for the sake of the community as well as themselves to treat the disease promptly and carefully.

Malaria, in its various manifestations, ever has constituted the principal obstacle to the civilization of all tropical and semi-tropical countries, and as a consequence vast tracts of the richest and fairest portions of the world have remained uncultivated and unredeemed from their primitive savage state.

Although it cannot be said that this condition of affairs applies to Georgia, it is true, nevertheless, that the prevalence of this disease in some portions of the state has been a serious drawback to the development of the regions in which the disease prevails, and the state board of health feels that one of its principal missions should be to remedy this condition as far as it lies within its power. Recent investigations have shown beyond the shadow of a doubt that this disease can be prevented easily if the matter be taken up intelligently.

CHARACTER OF THE DISEASE.

Malaria is a disease produced by a parasite belonging to the very lowest order of animal life. It is known commonly as the Plasmodium malariae. It is conveyed from man to man by that genus of mosquitoes called the Anopheles. The parasite attacks and destroys the red cells of the blood, and produces a poison that causes the symptoms characteristic of malaria.

It would be entirely out of the question and indeed useless to attempt in this short article a full description of the symptoms produced by malaria. Space permits only a brief reference to the more common manifestations of the affection.

The most common and well recognized symptoms of malaria are those that occur in that variety of the disease which is known as malarial or intermittent fever. In that type of the malady, the patient notices a chilly sensation, a feeling of fullness in the head, and general bodily depression. He is seized with a chill, followed by a high fever, and subsequent profuse perspiration. After these symptoms subside, generally in several hours, the patient returns to a practically normal condition and feels, on the whole, well until the next attack occurs. These chills and fever paroxysms occur at various intervals, depending upon the character of the parasite inducing them, the most common form in Georgia being perhaps that which produces a chill every other day.

In some instances the malady comes on more insidiously, there being no marked chills, and the temperature remaining constantly above the normal. This type of the disease is oftentimes known as bilious, remittent, or continued fever.

In the most chronic forms of the disease the unfortunate victim is frequently subjected for years to attacks of fever coming on at irregular intervals, the patient being more or less of an invalid throughout the course of the disease.

In other instances the brain becomes affected, producing very alarming symptoms, and in quite a large proportion of cases the malady ultimately terminates in chronic Bright's disease.

TREATMENT OF THE DISEASE.

Most fortunately we have in quinine, when properly administered, a medicine that in practically all instances acts as a specific in this affection. It is not, however, advisable to prescribe the drug indiscriminately, but it should be used only on the advice and under the direction of a physician. In the more chronic forms of the disease, combinations of arsenic with such tonics as nux vomica, iron and small doses of some of the preparations of mercury, produce permanent cures where quinine has failed. It is of the utmost importance that attention be given to the treatment, since so long as the patient retains the parasites in his blood, so long is he a menace to his friends and neighbors.

In our article of June 19 we gave a description of the anopheles mosquito and the animated hypodermic syringe. When this mosquito sucks up the blood of a malarial patient he also sucks up some of the malarial parasites, and when he bites the next person he injects these parasites into the blood of the new victim along with the venom which causes the itching. Each parasite immediately attacks a red blood cell of the second individual, bores into it and grows at the expense of the cell until it (the parasite) reaches maturity, at which time it divides up into from 7 to 75 young parasites, which are liberated and each in turn attacks a new cell. This process goes on until a sufficient number of parasites are produced in the individual to cause the symptoms of malaria, and the new source of the disease thereafter becomes a source of danger to others in the vicinity through the intervention of still other malarial mosquitoes. It is clearly evident that a person suffering from malaria should take treatment and rid himself of the parasites promptly, both on his account and on account of the rest of the people in his community. It is also important for his neighbors' sake that he should protect himself by screens and nets from the anopheles mosquito, which bites only at night.

MRS. ARMOR IS FIGHTING SHIPMENTS OF LIQUOR

Pleads Before Columbus Audience for Law to Keep Whisky Out of Georgia

COLUMBUS, Ga., June 21.—Unusual interest centers in the visit to Columbus Saturday and Sunday of Mrs. Mary Harris Armour former president of the Georgia State W. C. T. U. society, who is here in the special interest of the movement to get enacted a measure in the coming legislature to prohibit railroads from shipping intoxicating liquors into Georgia.

Mrs. Armour arrived in the city this morning and is the guest of Rev. and Mrs. B. S. Sentell on Rose Hill. She conferred with a number of the local temperance leaders today in regard to the proposed bill, and spent some time in efforts to increase a sentiment in Muscogee for such a bill, which is to be introduced by representatives of the anti-saloon league.

Tonight Mrs. Armour spoke at the First Baptist church. Sunday morning she speaks at St. Luke's church and in the afternoon a great mass meeting has been called for by local temperance forces, Mrs. Armour being the principal speaker. Mrs. Armour is well known in Columbus and her visit here is an occasion of interest to temperance leaders and church people generally.

NORTHWESTERN PAYS $5,000 TAX TO STATE

One of the largest income tax payments made to the state during the past year was that of the Northwestern Mutual Life Insurance company, which Saturday morning paid $5,000 into the state treasury.

Under the law, the insurance companies are required to pay a tax of 1 per cent on the gross premiums received on Georgia business. The Northwestern paid for the year ending April 30, 1913.

GUARANTEE TRUST CO. SAYS NO RECEIVER YET

Statement for Company Says Judge Superseded Own Order, to Allow Appeal

In the matter of the suit of Delaney and others against the Guarantee Trust and Banking company it is stated on behalf of the company that the belief that a receiver is in charge of the affairs of the company, is erroneous.

"Judge Pendleton appointed a receiver, as has been published, but at the same time superseded the order making such appointment in order that the matter might be passed on by a higher court," is the company's statement. The affairs of the company are still in its hands under certain limitations imposed by Judge Pendleton's order, and the case is in course of preparation for being taken to the supreme court."

Barbecue for "Blues"

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., June 21.—The Baldwin Blues, the local military company, with one of the greatest records of any similar organization in the state, enjoyed an excellent barbecue as the national rifle range here Friday. Captain J. H. Ennis takes unusual interest in the soldier boys and is always preparing something good for them.

Crops in Good Shape

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga., June 21.—Excellent conditions have prevailed here for the crops during the past few days and farmers have wiped out much of the discouraging obstacles that confronted them after the planting season started. Corn is being laid by with prospects for a good yield, and cotton is looking much better than formerly, though the crop is much later than usual.

A Physician Cures His Wife Of Consumption

With A Simple Home Treatment. Book Fully Describing The Treatment Sent Absolutely Free To Any Lung Sufferer.

DR. W. H. KNIGHT of East Saugus, Mass., writes: "My wife was in the last stage of consumption when I ordered the Lloyd treatment. She was very weak, had night sweats, cough, and in a feverish condition. I noticed a change for the better after ten day's treatment, and from that time on up to three months, when the cure was completed. The Lloyd Treatment kills the Tubercle Bacillus in the blood and tissue, and it is the only remedy so far discovered that will do this. It is a preventive as well as a cure. It should be used by those who are run down, or those who fear the approach of Consumption. It can be truthfully said that for the cure and prevention of Consumption, it is the most wonderful treatment of the present age."

This is only one of hundreds of letters received from physicians and others reporting cases of consumption and lung trouble restored to health in all sections of the United States. If you want to send every lung sufferer absolutely free the startling statements of Dr. W. H. Kiester of Dayton, Ohio; Dr. G. G. Pinkard of Kansas City, Mo., Dr. J. H. Ward of Troy, Mo., and many others who report results almost beyond belief, together with a valuable book on the cause, prevention and treatment of consumption, send your address.

If you are suffering from hemorrhage, blood-spitting, rag-filled sputum, night sweats, chills, fever, loss of flesh, pain in lungs, distressed breathing, wasted body, loss of strength—write me today and I'll send you ABSOLUTELY FREE the strong testimony of many who, after suffering with just such distressing symptoms, now state that they ARE CURED, strong, able to work, without ache or pain, happy, full of praise, after a few months use of this simple home treatment. Send your name and address TODAY. JUDD Q. LLOYD, 541 Lloyd Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Now Are the Days Children Need Care

Summer Heat Dangerous to Little Ones Whose Bowels Are Neglected.

A mother cannot do better for her children than to teach them from their earliest days regularity of the bowels. Regularity can be promoted without the child knowing it by watching its food and by so varying the food that all the elements of digestion are used, when nature will do the rest. The future health of the child depends upon this.

But try as you will, there are times when the little ones will become constipated and bilious. In hot weather immediate attention is necessary, as many serious diseases result from stuffed-up bowels. Don't give salts or cathartics or purgatives, as they are too harsh, but give a gentle, pleasant-tasting bowel stimulant like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It has been used by the children of this as well as a former generation, and thousands of families are proud to speak well of it, among whom we can mention Mrs. Louise Reynolds, 909 Jackson St., Lynchburg, Va., who is glad to recommend it, and Mr. Charles W. Allen, Manor, Tex., who writes that he often felt 100 years old, but feels younger now than his years.

Every druggist sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and the price is only fifty cents and one dollar a large bottle. It will cure constipation and biliousness in young or old, break up a cold and stop summer diarrhoea by ridding the bowels of the poisons and germs that cause the trouble. It is a grand family laxative, with valuable tonic properties.

Families wishing to try a free sample bottle can obtain it, postpaid, by addressing Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 418 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

VACATION BIBLE TERM WILL BEGIN JUNE 30

Eight Schools to Hold Week-Day Sessions in Churches and Missions

The Daily Vacation Bible schools of Atlanta will open June 30 and will continue for a period of five weeks. The schools . e and there are light of them, will be in session from Monday to Friday during the hours of 9 a. m. until 11:30 a. m.

The white schools are located in the Second Baptist church, the Exposition cotton mills, the Wesley House (Fulton Bag and Cotton mills), the Home for the Friendless, and the Barnett mission. The colored schools are at the Frazier Street mission, the West Side Oliver church, and the St. Luke's Parish Training school.

Rev. G. R. Buford will teach at the Second Baptist Church school, and will be assisted by the Misses Florence Smith, Belle Cooper, Beulah Kendricks, Eva Bridwell and Fannie Hamby.

Mr. Harry Hallman Searles will teach at the Exposition Cotton Mills school, and will be assisted by the Misses Georgia Crane, Julia Herndon, Marjorie Waldron and Maggie Bivens.

Miss Mary Moore Searles will be in charge of the school at the Wesley House, and will be assisted by Misses Lillian Johnson, Gladys Sands and Marion Moore.

Miss Lillie Searles will be in charge of the school at the Home for the Friendless, and will be assisted by Misses Frances Smith, Annie Wyman, Gussie Fraser and Mrs. Shea.

On the denominational committee the Baptists will be represented by Rev. Dr. John E. White and Dr. Ridley; the Episcopalians by Rev. Dr. C. B. Wilmer, the Presbyterians by Rev. Dr. D. H. Ogden; the Methodists by Dr. L. O. Bricker, and the Lutherans by the Rev. Mr. Schaeffer. Rev. R. G. Buford will be superintendent of the schools.

While there were 22 teachers last year, this summer there will be 42. The number of pupils last year was 1,253, and it is expected that there will be over 3,000 this season.

A trained teaching force will be one of the features this season, and an outing for each school has been planned, as well as one or more entertainments during the season. Weekly mothers' meetings will be held in each district.

FOR VALOR IN THE 60'S AND SERVICE SINCE, THIS VETERAN SERGEANT BECOMES COLONEL

Based upon his long and honorable service in the Confederate army during the Civil war, and in the state militia since the war, William Henry Smith, of Savannah, color sergeant of the First regiment of infantry, Georgia national guard, was Saturday morning appointed a lieutenant colonel on the staff of Governor Brown.

The desire to honor Sergeant Smith especially, coupled with an order from the war department providing that after July 1, 1913, all men in the militia over sixty-four years of age will be considered physically unfit for active service, and therefore, cannot share in the appropriations made by congress for the pay and equipment of troops are responsible for Sergeant Smith's appointment.

When he began to arrange for the First regiment's encampment, Colonel M. J. O'Leary found that Sergeant Smith could not, under the order of the war department, continue in the service. He wrote Adjutant General J. Van Holt Nash about the matter, giving Sergeant Smith's record, and suggesting that, if possible, he be honored with an appointment on the governor's staff.

Adjutant General Nash approved the suggestion and submitted it to Governor Brown, who promptly issued the appointment.

Sergeant Smith, who is a member of the LaFalette McLaws camp of Confederate veterans, enlisted in the Fifth Georgia regular cavalry in 1862 and fought all through the war. He received two serious bullet wounds in the breast, one at the battle of Noonday Creek, and the other in the fighting around Jonesboro. At the battle of Murfreesboro, Tenn., Sergeant Smith was cut through the right arm with a sabre.

In 1881 he enlisted in the Republican Blues, of Savannah, known officially as company M, First regiment. He served continuously until June 25, 1902. In that company, upon which date he was made regimental color sergeant; and he has held that office and rank ever since.

Sergeant Smith will be retired from the militia and will have but one week as a lieutenant colonel on Governor Brown's staff, for the staff goes out of office along with the goernor which appointed it. However, Sergeant Smith will retire with the rank of lieutenant-colonel, which he will enjoy the remainder of his life.

In advising Colonel O'Leary of the appointment, Adjutant General Nash states that it does not establish a precedent but confers a well-merited mark of distinction for valorous and honorable service.

CEDARTOWN IN PLANNING FOR "SANE" FOURTH

CEDARTOWN, Ga., June 21.—Cedartown is planning a glorious and at the same time a sane Fourth. The Sacred Harp Singing convention will be held at the city hall, the Polk County Singing convention at the courthouse, and the Fiddlers' convention at one of the theaters. The Cedartown fire department, one of the best volunteer organizations in the country, will give exhibition races of various kinds. There will be a baseball game, pole climbing and various other contests to amuse the crowds. A picnic dinner will be held at the park.

BOY OF TEN SAVES HIS PLAYMATE FROM DEATH

COLUMBUS, Ga., June 21.—Ella Lee Grier, nine-year-old daughter of former Alderman R. C. Grier, came near losing her life in the Wildwood lake last evening, when she fell from a bridge into six feet of water.

The little girl was playing on the bridge with Philip Scotzby, a ten-year-old lad when the accident occurred and the little boy acted the hero to perfection. Holding up his hands, crying for help, he then plunged into the waters, diving for the child. He succeeded in getting her to the surface, after she was nearly drowned, and held her out of the water by holding to one of the pillars of the bridge until the two were rescued by a fisherman who happened to be near by. Both children were exhausted when removed from the waters.

USED-PIANO SALE

June 30th closes our 47th year in business in Atlanta and it is only fitting that we should commemorate the anniversary in some way, so why not offer the public a large saving in the way of a quick, economical sale

NOW

Our position is a little unique in Georgia. Owing to the fact of our having exclusive agencies of the most celebrated Pianos and Pianolas in the world, many families of modest means get the notion that we do not carry in stock lower price goods, when, in fact, we make a specialty of good pianos at modest prices. Another thing, we are constantly receiving in exchange, pianos of all grades and makes, many of them in excellent condition. These instruments go through our factory department, and when put on our floors for sale they are marked at bargain prices.

Lately we have been receiving a lot of upright Pianos of various makes in exchange for Steinway and Knabe Pianos and for Pianola Pianos---These pianos, as well as the ones returned from rental, we have decided to offer at almost unbelievable prices. They are in our way, our 5th floor is crowded with them, and we had rather sell them now at bargain prices than hold them.

We mention a few below; we have many others. Pianos shipped to any part of the State. Pianos bought now may at any time be exchanged.

Perfumed Tonic Salt Baths

Delightful and Particularly Desirable If One Is Inclined To Be Stout

RECENTLY many European specialists have been testing the efficacy of salt baths in reducing and preventing obesity, and this promises to be the most successful treatment yet advanced. The medicinal and tonic effect of salt baths is well known, and now it is found that by taking them in quite warm water there is a tendency to throw off abnormal flesh or fat, and without the slightest disadvantageous result as is evident with almost all other treatments.

Jacobs' Perfumed Salt in the bath has the same delightful and refreshing exhilaration and stimulating tonic effect as a surf bath, toning up the whole system and making one throw off the languor and fag of summer. These perfumed Salt Baths are beneficial in every way, and decidedly helpful in reducing the weight. Perfumed with Verbena, Rose, Violet and Apple Blossom. Glass stoppered bottles, 50c.

Mermaid Sea Salt, the genuine ocean salt; slightly perfumed with violet or lavender; 5-lb. box, 25c.

In Police Chief's Office "September Morn" Hides Self in Wrapping Paper

"September Morn" has been located in the private office of Chief of Police Beavers.

Her graceful but shivering presence, wrapped in a piece of brown paper, on a blue June day too, was discovered by newspaper men upon the mantle, during the absence of the chief. Curiosity got the better of the scribes and one peeped behind the covering. There sure enough, was the young lady, almost knee deep in the chilly surf, still chilly despite a temperature of some 90 degrees in the shade at the time.

The rude covering of paper was removed, and the sea nymph was the center of several pairs of eyes when Chief Beavers walked in. He had to laugh.

"That's not mine," declared the chief, blushing a deep crimson. "It belongs to Chief Jett, and has been up there on the mantle for several days. I don't even know what he intends to do with her or why he had her covered up. I plead not guilty."

Chief Jett had not come on duty at the time, so it was not possible to hear his side of the question then.

In the interim "September Morn" reposed on the mantle shelf, clad in wrapping paper.

OFFICER AND NEGRO IN HAND-TO-HAND GRAPPLE

Officer Shumate Nearly Slain by Negro Who Ran Amuck

Call Officer Shumate narrowly escaped death Saturday afternoon in a hand-to-hand grapple with a burly negro behind a lonely house in the vicinity of West North avenue. The negro clouted him over the head with the officer's own "billie," and only timely aid prevented a tragedy.

The negro gave his name at police station as Harrison Boyd. He is charged with creating a panic in the North avenue community Saturday afternoon by dashing into a clothing store with an open knife in his hand.

The proprietors turned hand-springs getting out of the way and put in a hurry call for the police. Officers Shumate and Thomas responded, but halfway to the scene of the disturbace the motorcycle belonging to Thomas went wrong and he had to stop.

When Shumate arrived at the store he was alone. Panic-stricken neighbors told him that the black was hiding be*hind an out house across the street.* As he rounded the corner of the building the negro sprang out and the two clinched. Shumate grabbed the man's knife and the negro knocked the officer's gun to the ground.

As they struggled Boyd managed to wrench Shumate's "billie" from his hand. He took a swipe at Shumate's head with it, the officer dodged, and the blow glanced aside. Help arrived at this stage of the combat and the negro was overpowered.

Politician's Axiom

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON.—There is a good axiom for politicians, "Then attacked, smile and keep on smiling." You will find no more radiant man in the house of commons today than Colonel John Seely, minister for war. This is partly due to sunburn, for he has the complexion of a Red Indian. It is chiefly due to the fact that a lot of Liberals want him to be ousted from the cabinet, and he does not intend to go. He is suspected of being too much of an imperialist for a radical minister. They would like Mr. John Burns to be at the head of the army.

Wholesale Police Raids

PARIS.—A dramatic step has been taken by the government in the course of its search for the secret organizers referred to by Mr. Poincare. At 5 a. m. detectives with search warrants knocked at the doors of suspected anti-militarists in Paris, while a large de*tachment of police ransacked thirty-*three rooms in the Syndicalists' Labour Exchange. Similar action was taken in no fewer than eighty-eight other towns all over France, from Dunkirk to Nice and from Belfort to Bordeaux.

Don't Monkey With The Monkeys' Eyes At Grant Park Zoo

Monkeys may not be human but you can't monkey with their eyes and get away with it around Grand park.

That point was settled once and for all in recorder's court yesterday afternoon when Judge W. H. Preston handed William Prindeville, an elongated foreigner, claiming to hail from New York City, a fine of $5.75 for poking a monkey's eye out with a sharp stick.

Witnesses who testified, said that they heard a monkey give forth a "yell" of pain just as Prindeville poked a stick in its eye. The man's arrest followed and he was haled before the recorder for the offense.

In pronouncing sentence, Judge Preston declared, that there was a specific law against abusing animals. "You must not poke their eyes out," said the recorder pro tem, "and not expect to be punished. It is inhuman treatment."

Prindeville said that he was only playing with the animals, but that "yell" convinced the court that the monkey must have lost an optic.

Mary Magdalen

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS.—Maurice Maeterlinck's new play, "Mary Magdalen," is being produced at the Chatelet. Mme. Georgette Leblanc (who is Maeterlinck's wife), plays the part of Mary. The Saviour does not appear on the stage, though his voice is heard. The whole play is very beautiful, dignified and there is nothing in it which can shock the most Puritan tastes.

Fallen Baroness

BERLIN, June 14.—A once greatly admired baroness is now playing the violin at a low cafe here. She is the niece of a well-known foreign ambassador.

It Hardly Seems Our Business To Apologize For COFFEE

But simply to place the truth before the people and let them act as they see fit.

That easily explains the cause of many a coffee drinker's disturbance of heart, stomach, liver and nerves.

It's a good idea when the body begins to show disturbances, to quit coffee and use

INSTANT POSTUM

This pure food-drink, sold by grocers everywhere, is warranted pure and absolutely free from the coffee drug, caffeine. It feeds and nourishes where coffee destroys the tissues.

Instant Postum is made of prime wheat and the juice of sugar-cane, roasted and blended to produce a flavour much resembling high-grade Java.

A level teaspoonful of Instant Postum in an ordinary cup of hot water dissolves instantly, and makes it right for most persons.

A big cup requires more, and some people who like strong things put in a heaping spoonful and temper it with a large supply of cream.

Experiment until you know the amount that pleases your palate, and have it served that way in the future.

Postum comes in two forms.

Regular Postum (must be boiled).

Instant Postum doesn't require boiling, but is prepared instantly by stirring a level teaspoonful in a cup of hot water.

CHATTOOGA CHANGES ITS PLANS FOR ROAD WORK

ROME, Ga., June 21.—Chattooga county has abandoned its plan to inaugurate a chaingang to work the roads of that county, and it is expected that the county's quota of convicts will remain, as heretofore, with the Floyd county gang.

A few weeks ago the county commissioners of Chattooga requested the Floyd county board to send the gang across the county line to do some work in Chattooga, but the local commissioners had to decline the request in order to void violating the law.

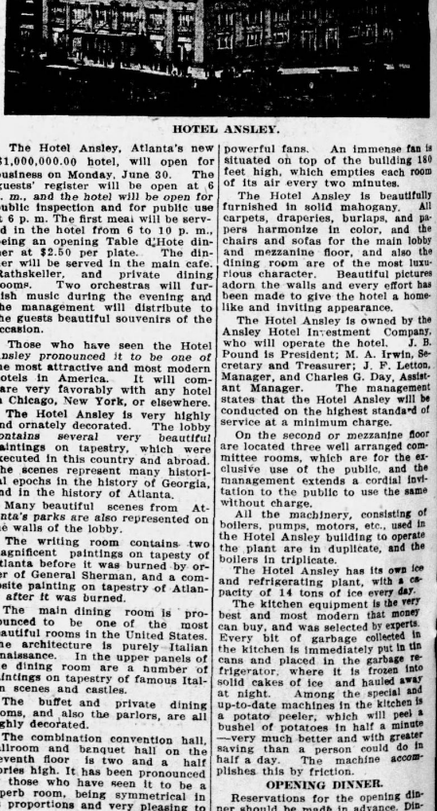
HOTEL ANSLEY

ATLANTA, GA.

THE SOUTH'S FINEST AND MOST MODERN HOTEL WILL OPEN FOR BUSINESS ON MONDAY, JUNE 30, 1913—THE HOTEL ANSLEY CONTAINS EVERY MODERN CONVENIENCE TO BE FOUND IN ANY HOTEL—IT HAS 306 BEDROOMS, 275 WITH PRIVATE BATH—ABSOLUTELY FIREPROOF—ERECTED AT A COST OF $1,000,000.00. THE MANAGEMENT ANNOUNCES THAT THE "ATS" AT THE HOTEL HOTEL ANSLEY WILL BE LOWER THAN CHARGED BY ANY HOTEL OF ITS CHARACTER IN THE UNITED STATES—ROOMS WITHOUT BATH $1.00 PER DAY, ROOMS WITH CONNECTING BATH $1.50 PER DAY, ROOMS WITH PRIVATE BATH AND FREE ELECTRIC FAN $2.00 PER DAY. BEAUTIFULLY FURNISHED FRONT ROOMS $2.50 PER DAY AND UP.



HOTEL ANSLEY.

The Hotel Ansley, Atlanta's new $1,000,000.00 hotel, will open for business on Monday, June 30. The guests' register will be open at 6 a. m., and the hotel will be open for public inspection and for public use at 6 p. m. The first meal will be served in the hotel from 6 to 10 p. m., being an opening Table d'Hote dinner at $2.50 per plate. The dinner will be served in the main cafe, Rathskeller, and private dining rooms. Two orchestras will furnish music during the evening and the management will distribute to the guests beautiful souvenirs of the occasion.

Those who have seen the Hotel Ansley pronounced it to be one of the most attractive and most modern hotels in America. It will compare very favorably with any hotel in Chicago, New York, or elsewhere.

The Hotel Ansley is very highly and ornately decorated. The lobby contains several very beautiful paintings on tapestry, which were executed in this country and abroad. These are said to represent many historical epochs in the history of Georgia, and in the history of Atlanta.

Many beautiful scenes from At*lanta's parks are also* represented on the walls of the lobby.

The writing room contains two magnificent paintings on tapestry of Atlanta before it was burned by order of General Sherman, and a composite painting on tapestry of Atlan*ta after it was burned.*

The main dining room is pronounced to be one of the most beautiful rooms in the United States. The architecture is purely Italian renaissance. In the upper panels of the dining room are a number of paintings on tapestry of famous Italian scenes and castles.

The buffet and private dining rooms, and also the parlors, are all highly decorated.

The combination convention hall, ballroom and banquet hall on the eleventh floor is two and a half stories high. It has been pronounced by those who have seen it to be a superb room, being symmetrical in its proportions and very pleasing to the eye.

The Rathskeller, Beauty Parlor, and Billiard Room, and other public departments, are situated in the basement of the building. The Rathskeller is especially unique. The walls and columns are lined with three-color tapestry brick. On top of each column is an owl sitting between two steins, with their eyes blinking alternately. There are six-teen panels in this room. Each panel contains the coat-of-arms of well-known Georgia colleges.

All public parts of the Hotel Ansley are fitted with mechanical arrangements whereby the air is purified and cooled in summer and purified and warmed in winter, being forced through running water by powerful fans. An immense fan is situated on top of the building 180 feet high, which empties each room of its air every two minutes.

The Hotel Ansley is beautifully furnished in solid mahogany. All carpets, draperies, burlaps, and papers harmonize in color, and the chairs and sofas for the main lobby and mezzanine floor, and also the dining room are of the most luxurious character. Beautiful pictures adorn the walls and every effort has been made to give the hotel a homelike and inviting appearance.

The Hotel Ansley is owned by the Ansley Hotel Investment Company, who will operate the hotel. J. B. Pound is President; M. A. Irwin, Secretary and Treasurer; J. F. Letton, Manager, and Charles G. Day, Assistant Manager. The management states that the Hotel Ansley will be conducted on the highest standard of service at a minimum charge.

On the second or mezzanine floor are located three well arranged committee rooms, which are for the exclusive use of the public, and the management extends a cordial invitation to the public to use the same without charge.

All the machinery, consisting of boilers, pumps, motors, etc., used in the Hotel Ansley building to operate the plant are in duplicate, and the boilers in triplicate.

The Hotel Ansley has its own ice and refrigerating plant, with a capacity of 14 tons of ice every day.

The kitchen equipment is the very best and most modern that money can buy, and was selected by experts. Every bit of garbage collected in the kitchen is immediately put in tin cans and placed in the garbage refrigerator, where it is frozen into solid cakes of ice and hauled away at night.

Among the special and up-to-date machines in the kitchen is a potato peeler, which will peel a bushel of potatoes in half a minute —very much better and with greater saving than a person could do in half a day. The machine *accom*plishes this by friction.

OPENING DINNER.

Reservations for the opening dinner should be made in advance. Dinner served from 6 to 10 P. M., at $2.50 per plate. Telephone Ivy 1100.

HOTEL ANSLEY TO BE CONDUCTED ON EUROPEAN PLAN.

The Hotel Ansley will be conducted on the European plan, but club breakfasts will be served in the morning from 25 cents up noon*day lunch 50 cents*, and Table d'Hote Dinner for $1, from 6 to 8 p. m. The Hotel Ansley will make a specialty of, and has better facilities, for serving banquets, dinners, teas, etc., than any other hotel in Atlanta and will make a specialty of this class of restaurant business.

Hotel Patten, Chattanooga, Tenn., and Hotel Henry Watterson, Louisville, Ky., under same management.

GEORGIA AND HER POLITICS

BY HARLLEE BRANCH.

Colonel F. J. Paxon Accepts Appointment as Chief of Staff.

Colonel Frederic J. Paxon, of Atlanta, was officially tendered the position of chief of sides-de-camp to the new governor of Georgia by Governor-elect John M. Slaton, himself, Saturday afternoon, an honor which Colonel Paxon accepted.

In assuming his position Colonel Paxon will be entering upon his tenth year of service on the staff of a governor of this state. He has already served on the staff of two governors, being a lieutenant-colonel during the two terms of the late Joseph M. Terrell, and chief of staff for three and a half years under Governor Joseph M. Brown.

Colonel Paxon is one of Atlanta's most prominent business men, and a leading citizen of the state. He has always taken a great interest in the military of Georgia and richly deserves the honor which has again come to him.

Legislators Take Temporary Residences Here For Session.

A number of the legislators, both senators and representatives have taken temporary residences in Atlanta for the summer. Among these are two of the candidates for speaker—Hon. W. H. Burwell and Hon. R. N. Hardeman.

Hon. Charles A. Picquet, of Augusta, one of the Richmond county representatives, has taken a place at Decatur, where he and Mrs. Picquet are now living, and where they will entertain a great deal during the next two months.

Senator J. Randolph Anderson, candidate for president of the senate, owns a summer home near Marietta, and a half dozen or more legislators are now negotiating with real estate agents for furnished houses in the city.

The legislature will be in session until about the middle of August, and rather than live at a hotel and make frequent trips home, these legislators will bring their families here for a 50 days' vacation.

Will Work Hard to Abolish Offices of Solicitors General

Hon. W. Y. Allen, of Thomaston, former member of the house from Upson county, will spend much time in Atlanta during the session of the legislature. He will be here to work in the interest in the bill which proposes to abolish the offices of solicitors general and create in their stead the offices of county prosecuting attorneys.

This bill will, it is said, be introduced early in the session. Mr. Allen was one of the authors of a similar bill introduced at the last session. He is very anxious to see such a law enacted, and announces that he will lobby for it earnestly, actively and legitimately. "I expect to comply with the law and register as a lobbyist with the secretary of state," says Mr. Allen, "but I will not be an 'insidious' lobbyist. However, I will be an insistent, and persistent as I know how to be."

Burwell's Headquarters Have Been Formally Opened

There was some formality Saturday morning about the opening of the headquarters of Hon. W. H. Burwell, of Hancock county, candidate for speaker of the house of representatives. Mr. Burwell's pretty little three-and-a-half-year-old daughter, Lyra Reid Burwell, stood by his side when the doors were thrown open and assisted him in receiving his first callers. For each she had a handshake and a sweet little smile. She was introduced by her father as "my campaign manager."

Quite a number of the early arrivals among the legislators called at Mr. Burwell's headquarters during Saturday to discuss his candidacy with him. Both Mr. Burwell and his friends express the confident belief that he will win on the first ballot Wednesday morning.

Ragland to Introduce Several Charter Bills.

Representative Tinsley Ragland, of Talbot county, has prepared town charter bills which he proposes to introduce early in the session of the legislature. One provides a new charter for the city of Talbotton; a second will give a new charter to the town of Geneva, and a third will incorporate Box Spring.

Mr. Ragland will look after the immediate interests of his constituents first, but this should not be taken to mean that he will be indifferent to important legislation affecting the state as a whole.

Representative Stewart Among Early Arrivals.

Hon. C. E. Stewart, of Willacoochee, will make his first appearance as a lawmaker at the coming session of the legislature, when he goes into the house to represent Coffee county. Mr. Stewart was one of the earliest legislative arrivals, getting here Friday afternoon. He is spending his time looking around to acquire a real line on the status of some of the fine fights that are to be staged at the capitol shortly.

He was elected to office with a plurality of 500 votes over two other candidates after entering the race himself only two weeks before the primary was held.

While Mr. Stewart has no general bills in preparation now, he has well defined ideas on some of the measures which are to be introduced, and will take an active part in the business of the session. He has a number of local bills which he will press to passage.

Milledgeville Citizens are Working for Judge Allen.

The citizens of Milledgeville are giving a loyal backing to the race of Judge John T. Pendleton, their fellow townsman of the Twentieth district, who is striving for the presidency of the state senate against Hon. J. Randolph Anderson, of Savannah, senator from the First district.

A number of business and professional men from Milledgeville are working in Judge Allen's interest and will come to Atlanta Tuesday morning in a special car to boost their candidate. These citizens have sent on letters to many members of the senate pulling for Judge Allen's election.

Hardeman Says Speakership Race is "Up in the Air."

"If there are those in Atlanta who think any one has got the speakership of the 1913-1914 house and have gone with it they may be surprised on Wednesday" is the way Representative R. N. Hardeman, of Jefferson, an avowed candidate for speaker, sizes up his chances for the job.

Representative Hardeman, who is a veteran legislator, opened his campaign headquarters at the Kimball house, room 223, Saturday and was busy throughout the day greeting friends who dropped in to assure him support.

He declared Saturday afternoon that while he did not lay claim to the speakership he was sure that the outcome of the race was by no means certain. Mr. Hardeman is opposed to the speakership by William Burwell, Hancock county representative and Representative J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter, former state senator.

New County Advocates Are Already on the Job.

If getting on the scene of action early counts for anything then the advocates of Candler county will have the edge on the citizens of other sections who will urge the creation of new counties. Headquarters for the Candler county boosters have been opened in rooms 117 and 119 of the Kimball house and those in charge are getting the ears of the legislators as fast as they arrive. Metter is proposed as the county seat of Candler, if such a county is created.

At least two other new county movements, and maybe others, will be brought to the attention of the legislature. Barrow county, with Winder for the county seat, and Warner county, with Manchester for the county seat, will be actively urged. Advocates of both these counties will probably open headquarters during the present week.

Warner Boomers Busy; Talbot to Oppose Plan

Warner county advocates, who propose to create their new state unit out of parts of Talbot, Meriwether and Harris counties, with Manchester, Meriwether county, as the county site, are busy everywhere in Atlanta these days, booming their project.

The Warner supporters figure that the new county will give the people now living on isolated edges of the three counties better access to court and will be more convenient all around.

These boomers are aware of the fact that some Talbot county citizens will oppose the move. Residents of Talbot are authority for the statement that the new unit proposes to cut off one of the best strips of territory in the county. Talbot is a county of 11,000 population with a large proportion of negroes. Its taxable valuations are $1,757,896. Opponents of Warner county assert that the new county will take away from Talbot $169,550 in taxable property.

Hon. J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter, Arrives in Atlanta Monday

Hon. J. E. Sheppard, of Americus, one of Sumter's representatives, and more than incidentally a candidate for speaker of the house for the 1913-1914 session of the legislature, will arrive in Atlanta on Monday to get on the ground for his campaign.

Representative Sheppard was in the last legislature as a senator from the Thirteenth district and took an important part in the actions of the upper house. As a floor leader he generaled some of the hardest fights staged in the senate.

He brings to the house an aggressive personality that will be felt early in the session. He is a successful lawyer and an eloquent and forceful speaker.

Active work among his friends in behalf or his candidacy for the speakership has been underway for months in Atlanta, but Representative Sheppard will take charge of the matter personally on Monday.

Wheatley Hopes There Will Be no Factional Fighting.

That the general assembly will not consume its time at the coming session in the factional fighting which has marked legislative procedure in Georgia for the past six years is the fervent hope of Crawford Wheatley, of Americus, one of the representatives from Sumter county and a former state senator.

Mr. Wheatley who has been prominent in politics in Georgia for years and attended the Baltimore convention as a state delegate is convinced that the lawmakers have a big, serious job on their hands in the proposed revision of the tax law. For this reason he hopes the factional hatchet will be buried and everybody will get down to business and push through some real work for the good of the state. He is heartily in accord with Governor-elect Slaton's ideas on the state's financial matters and will work hand in glove with the administration to bring about the results the governor desires.

NEGRO SHOOTS POLICE; IS RIDDLED BY BULLETS

Americus, Ga., Police Chief May Die—Three Other Negroes Are Wounded

(By Associated Press.)

AMERICUS, Ga., June 21.—A mob of 500 persons attacked the county jail at 8 o'clock tonight, broke down the cell door wherein a negro, William Redding, was confined, and dragged him through the principal streets of the city to the Buchanan corner, where they lynched him. It is estimated a thousand bullets were fired.

The lynching was the result of the shooting, earlier in the evening, of William G. Barrow, who has been chief of police in this city for the past 25 years, and of the wounding of four negroes.

The sheriff and his deputies found resistance useless. With steel crowbars and sledge hammers the angry mob attacked the steel doors wherein the negro was confined. The lock was finally ripped from its fastenings and the door swung open. Then a rope was tied about the negro's neck and he was led through the streets to the Buchanan corner in Lamar street, near the scene of the shooting of Chief Barrow. There he was strung up to a cable.

The body had only been cleared from the ground when the rope broke, but the negro again was strung up, this time with better success.

Shooting began from every direction, and the body was riddled with bullets. Before the shooting began Rev. Robert Bivins, pastor of the Furlow Baptist church, pleaded in vain with the leaders to spare the life of the negro. His pleadings lasted during the 20 minutes required to string the body up to the cable, and then yells of the crowd and shots from from many pistols drowned his voice.

The shooting continued at intervals for half an hour, and the body was left to hang on the cable.

The lynching was the most sickening tragedy ever witnessed in Americus.

Couple Marries At Police Station At Early Morning Hour

In the wee sma' hours around 3 o'clock in the morning, Miss A. C. Whatley, of 355 Whitehall street, and Edward Ewart, a salesman, were married amid the sordid surroundings of the police station by Justice of the Peace Girardeau.

They had known each other for years, and Saturday afternoon decided to form the life partnership. The would-be groom procured a marriage license.

"Oh just to make it romatic," the bride told him. "suppose we wait until midnight and get married."

They waited, but when 12 o'clock struck this very-much-in-love couple found that they had overlooked one detail—that it is not so very easy to find anyone to perform the ceremony at the witching hour without previous arrangement.

After a fruitless search for a minister, the couple approached Officers Lloyd and Kilpatrick and asked them to help them out of the predicament. The "cops" knew the ropes, all right; Justice Girardeau was called over the phone, and a happy wedding was celebrated at police headquarters just as the clock struck half-past 2, while the gong on the patrol wagon played an adaptation of Mendelssohn.

A New Land Policy

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON.—The agricultural laborer is the most pathetic figure in the body politic. It is true that during the last fifty years his wages have increased by 35 per cent, but during the same period, and particularly during the last fifteen years, the wages of workers in other industries have advanced in a greater ratio. During this period the standard of living in all classes of society, and particularly among the working classes, has risen considerably, and meat (especially pig meat) has come to be deemed one of the necessaries of life in almost every cottage in the land, and has thus superseded, perhaps not altogether to the physical advantage of the workers, a diet the basis of which was good wholemilk, cheese, wholemeal bread, and eggs. The more serious consideration, however, is that during the last ten years the cost of living has increased by at least 12 per cent, and the purchasing power of wages has consequently decreased by a like amount.

SENATOR BACON'S NOMINEE MEETS WITH PROTESTS

Joseph S. Davis, of Albany, Opposed for U. S. Marshal in South Georgia

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21.—Protests against the appointment of Joseph S. Davis, of Albany, as United marshal for Southern Georgia have been filed with President Wilson and Attorney General McReynolds. It is not known what effect, if any, these protests will have on the recommenaation of Senator Bacon, who is urging the nomination of Davis.

The protests, it is understood, have not been confined to any particular section of the district, nor to any special class of persons. They have come from all over South Georgia and have been signed by men prominent in the industrial, commercial, professional and ministerial life of that great section.

DRINKS MORPHINE AT EARLY HOUR SUNDAY

Cleve Morrison, aged twenty-two, attempted to commit suicide at 2 o'clock Sunday morning by drinking part of a bottle of morphine while in bed at his home, 478 East Fair street. His father heard him fall out of bed in his agony and rushed into the room. The Grady hospital was called and Morrison was taken there in an ambulance. He will probably live, say physicians.

HARDEMAN DECLARES HE EXPECTS TO WIN

Says No Candidate Has Enough Votes to Make Result a Certainty

Hon. R. N. Hardeman, who is in the race for speaker of the house of representatives during the forthcoming session of the general assembly, and who will be opposed by Hon. W. H. Burwell, of Hancock county, and Hon. J. E. Sheppard, of Sumter, gave out the following statement Saturday afternoon with reference to his candidacy:

INERVIEWS R. N. HARDEMAN.

"To date I have made no public statement with reference to the campaign for the speakership of the house of 1913-14. I have contented myself with making a quiet campaign among my friends. I have merely written letters to the members of the house only, soliciting their support. I have a reply from every member-elect and, unlike other candidates, I wish frankly and openly to state that I haven't a sufficient number of pledges to insure my election. At the same time, from an absolute knowledge of the situation, I wish to state that no candidate for speaker has a sufficient number of unqualified pledges to elect. In fact, I doubt if the straight pleages of all three of the candidates combined are sufficient to elect any one.

"I have written statements from nearly a majority of the members made within the past ten days, in which they state that they are now unpledged and that they will remain unpledged until they reach the capitol and look over the situation. Were I to count as my supporters those members who have expressed themselves as follows: 'I would like to see you speaker,' or, 'I see no reason why you should not be speaker,' or, 'I think you would make a good speaker, and I see no reason why I should not support you,' this number would make me quite as many supporters as those claimed by my friend, the gentleman from Hancock. And both of us having this large number would increase the membership of the house to a larger per cent than the membership of the senate has been increased by the claims of the two candidates for president of the senate, and in which event the general assembly of Georgia for 1913-14 would not be composed of the representatives of the people, but of all the people themselves.

"I make this further frank and sincere statement to the public and to the members-elect:

"I was myself very much impressed by the numerous, repeated and extravagant claims made for one of the other candidates for the speakership, and I came to Atlanta on Wednesday last with the avowed intention to look over the situation and, if the facts, upon investigation, justified the claims made by my distinguished friend, who opposes me (and I really believed that I would find them true), I intended to withdraw from the race in justice to my friends, who have been so generous and kind in their support. But I will state, just as frankly and as sincerely, that after carefully investigating and going over the entire situation, I am convinced that the speakership race is in doubt and will not be settled until the vote is taken on the 25th. The further I investigate, the more thoroughly convinced I am that my chances are equal to those of any other gentleman in the race. The only difference between us is this: My friend from Hancock has been polling and counting his votes through the press of Georgia—for the past six months; mine will be polled and counted on the 25th in the house of representatives. And that is the time and the place where the votes will count."

FORMER ATLANTAN IS HONORED AT COLUMBIA

Garrard Glenn, a former Atlantian, and now a successful young attorney living in New York City, has been asked to deliver a series of lectures on bankruptcy laws at the summer session of Columbia university.

Mr. Glenn is a son of the late John T. Glenn, at one time mayor of Atlanta, and graduated in law at Columbia university after taking an A. B. degree at the University of Georgia. His early schooling was received in the public schools of this city.

Since his admission to the bar in New York he has made a specialty of bankruptcy courts, and has been associated with some of the biggest legal lights in the metropolis. His many friends in Atlanta and Georgia will be interested to learn of his success in the east.

MRS. MARY HARRIS ARMOR TO SPEAK TUESDAY NIGHT

Mrs. Mary Harris Armor will speak at the First Methodist church Tuesday evening, June 24, at 8 o'clock. She is a temperance lecturer of national reputation, and has been heard in twenty-eight states in her fight against the sale of whiskey. She became famous as the head of the Georgia Woman's Christian Temperance union.

IS BALDNESS DOOMED?

Baltimore Specialist Says It Is Unnecessary, and Proves It.

BALTIMORE, June 21.—The intense interest in the wonderful work that is being accomplished in Baltimore and many other cities by William Chas. Keene, president of the Lorrimer Institute, continues unabated. Many cases of baldness and faded hair of years' standing have been remedied by the remarkable preparation being distributed from Mr. Keene's laboratory. Its fame is spreading far and wide and thousands of persons are using this remarkable hair food with gratifying results.

What makes this treatment more popular is the fact that free trial outfits are sent by mail prepaid. Those who wish to try it are strongly advised to write to Mr. Keene at the Lorrimer Institute, Branch 869, Baltimore, Md. They will receive the full trial outfit free of charge and much useful information about their hair which will put them on the road to a rapid and certain improvement.—(Advt.)

Natural Passions Are Wrong Guide to True Life, Says Evangelist

In speaking to women only at the Baptist Tabernacle at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, Dr. W. B. Ridley, the Minneapolis evangelist, said that pleasure-loving is not wrong, but that pleasure living is perilous.

"We have in this day some professed philosophers whose opinions are popular enough," said he, "who discourse upon living according to the natural bent of life. But the bent from Eden is not in the right direction. Such philosophers favor affinities and free love, and call the saloons the laboring man's club, and the dance hall the social center of the tenement district, and the cheap theater the school of art for the submerged.

"Why don't they go to the logical limit and say that since greed is a natural passion, let gambling be the commercial order; since lust is a natural passion, let love be abrogated; since anger is a natural passion, condone murder.

"God pity young women who give ear to such teachers, or older women who adopt such philosophies!"

On Sunday Dr. Riley will preach in the Tabernacle at 11 a. m., 3:30 p. m. and 8 p. m.

TACCO GIVEN GREAT RECEPTION IN ATLANTA

The Visit Will Continue Indefinitely, and It's Freely Predicted That Every Home Will Extend an Invitation

Tacco is one of the most welcome visitors that ever came to Atlanta—but Tacco didn't come, for Tacco was born right in Atlanta and is proud of this fact. Until just recently Tacco was unknown to the world, but if the record of popularity of only a few days is to be taken as an indication Tacco will be world famous.

Tacco is seemingly very popular with all the ladies, especially with those who own their homes. Tacco is also popular already with many automobile owners. It is becoming a frequent thing to see Tacco on a large touring car, roadster, or the finest electrics. It matters not what the car is, the owners all welcome Tacco.

Ask the lady of the most exclusive home and she will tell you that Tacco is cordially received. In fact ask the lady of any home and she'll tell you—provided she's met Tacco—that Tacco is welcomed.

But Tacco is not particular about a place to ride, sit or walk. You are just as likely to find Tacco on the side of an automobile as on the back of the seat. In the home Tacco is just as likely to be seen on a bed, as on a chair, table, or perhaps on the finest piano.

Tacco visits drug stores, furniture houses, etc., but never remains here long, for invariably some customer comes along and carries Tacco home with them.

Tacco has the naturals gift of making things look new wherever given a home. Tacco has no superior in brightening up old furniture, desks, automobiles, etc.

Tacco is none other than a handy var*nish, which is easily* applied with a cloth. Tacco is a varnish pure and simple, not a greasy polish.

ROSSER & BRANDON JOIN WITH SLATON & PHILLIPS

Two Big Atlanta Law Firms Go Into Partnership Beginning July 1

The law firm of Rosser & Brandon and Slaton & Phillips have formed a partnership beginning July 1, and will be known by the firm name of Rosser, Brandon, Slaton & Phillips, with offices on the seventh floor of the Grant building, the Slaton & Phillips suite being enlarged to accommodate the new firm.

There will be in the firm the following: Luther Z. Rosser, Morris Brandon, John M. Slaton, Ben Z. Phillips, J. H. Porter, Stiles Hopkins, Luther Z. Rosser, Jr., Verlyn B. Moore and James J. Regan.

During his term of office as governor of Georgia, Mr. Slaton will have no working connection with the firm and will not participate in the firm's earnings.

Mr. Slaton has been in the practice of law for twenty-six years, and for nineteen years he and Mr. Phillips have been law partners. During that time with his partner he has built up a clientele which he desires preserved, and it goes without saying that the new firm will be more than able to accomplish this purpose.

The consolidation of the two firms has been contemplated two or three months, and has been more or less generally known among Atlanta lawyers for several days. Announcement of the consolidation was reserved until today by The Journal at the request of both firms.

The new firm will be one of the largest and strongest in the state. Messrs. Rosser, Brandon, Slaton, and Phillips stand at the very top in the Atlanta bar, while the younger men of the firm are all of proven ability.

The firm's office is on the Forsyth street side of the Grant building and takes up nearly half of the seventh floor. The library made by the consolidation of the firm's collections will consist of several thousand volumes and will probably be the largest in the city.

Snapped Trigger of Empty Gun and Was "Pulled" at Once

Because he carelessly brandished a monster army revolver inside a soda fount at the corner of Decatur and Central avenue about 8 o'clock Saturday night, A. Jankel, an eighteen-year-old boy of 86 East Hunter street, cooled his war-like tendencies in a cell at police headquarters that night.

Call Officer Bailey was passing by at the time, and nerily fell over backward when he caught a glimpse of the youth within snapping the trigger of the tremendous gun. The revolver chambers happened to be empty, but that did not deter the officer from arresting the boy.

At headquarters Jankel explained his actions on the ground that he is a member of the Atlanta artillery.

TOOK DOCTOR'S ORDER TO GET PIECE OF ICE

CINCINNATI, June 21.—The ice supply, affected by a strike of employes of ice manufacturers, was so limited here today that the ordinary consumer could obtain it only by presenting a physician's certificate to the municipal supply stations, stating that it was wanted for the sick. The strikers are supplying hospitals, while the breweries are taking care of hotels and cafes.

Some relief was in sight today after Mayor Hunt received word, in an answer to his appeals, Danville, Ky., would furnish 300 tons daily and that several carloads of ice were on their way here from northern Ohio cities.

Atlantic Beach

The New City By The Sea

The wave of real summer that has spread over the country during the past week, has brought lively longings for the seaside. It has crowded Atlantic Beach and its splendid hotel with visitors, who have been revelling in refreshing breezes straight off the ocean. And by actual readings, the temperature there has been from eight to twelve degrees lower than has been recorded by the United States Weather Bureau in any southern city from which reports are published.

This splendid development of home-building is progressing rapidly. Inquiries for information and prices are being received daily from southern, northern and eastern cities, and the interest in the great undertaking is increasing and spreading.

Even the quiet of summer has failed to lessen this interest. The sales of property have long passed the hundred thousand dollar mark. Water mains, sewers, sidewalks and electric wires are spreading over the property and many of the houses, begun in March and April, are occupied by satisfied owners.

It is a good place to see. It is a good place to live the year around or for the months of vacation time. Come or write us for full information.

Great preparations are being made for the mid-summer holidays, at the Atlantic Beach Hotel, and the Fourth will last a week there. A great many reservations have been made for that week already. Don't delay to make yours.

Heavy Realizing by Old Longs and Scattered Selling Caused Break

Favorable Weather Map and Rumors That Bullish Interests Were Taking Profits on Every Opportunity, Encouraged Sellers

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 21.—The cotton market was lower today under heavy realizing by old longs and scattered selling which was encouraged by the appearance of the weather map and rumors that bullish interests were taking profits on every favorable opportunity. The close was steady at a net loss from 12 to 21 points.

The market opened steady at a decline of 4 to 6 points and sold 16 to 13 points net lower during the early trading in response to relatively easy Liverpool cables, favorable weekly crop reviews, and indications for continued good weather over the south. Heavy realizing by old longs and scattered selling by outside shorts checked the decline and the near month rallied about four points from the lowest during the middle of the morning but new crop positions showed little improvement and as soon as a moderate demand from old crop shorts had been supplied, the entire list again weakened.

Selling was active later and the close was at the lowest level of the day. Memphis was credited with buying considerable cotton here during the early trading, and there was also some scattered demand from other southern sources including New Orleans, which was attributed to covering of shorts but European and local longs were heavy sellers and the decline seemed to inspire some fresh selling for a turn on the short side.

According to estimates circulating here this morning, the European long interest in local contracts has been reduced by at least 500,000 bales during the past two weeks as a result of realizing. Private cables reported continued continental realizing in the Liverpool market this morning and the sales there were probably absorbed on the moderate break buying on the short end of straddles, the long end of which had been liquidated here yesterday afternoon.

Reviews of the dry goods trade showed no important changes, and Fall River mills are said to be pretty well sold up for July and August delivery.

COTTON MARKET OPINIONS

Bailey & Montgomery: Purchases on any setbacks are becoming a more popular policy.

Miller & Co.: We still look for higher prices.

Logan & Bryan: We still feel that purchases on moderate recessions from this level will prove profitable.

Morris H. Rothschild & Co.: We expect higher values.

A. Neuberger Co.: Buying on slight declines will prove profitable.

AUSTIN & RAIT COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Cotton—It is becoming more and more evident each week that in order to obtain a true exponent of price movements, greater attention will have to be given to the consumption of cotton. For many years the tendency has been to base calculations almost solely upon the production. At the beginning of this week the usual census report promulgated, which was of great significance during May the consumption of cotton in the United States was officially placed at 350,000 bales, practically the largest of the season, and perhaps close to a record. In the 10 months there have been consumed by the mills in the United States 4,000,000 bales, and it is a conservative statement now that for the full twelve months, 5,750,000 bales will have disappeared in this manner.

The figures in themselves are not so remarkable, but when it is remembered that the cotton trade is facing a tariff revision, which acts as a deterring influence on distribution, the last census report cannot be lightly regarded. It suggests potent consumption possibilities. Other adverse factors confronting the cotton trade, such as a worldwide strained monetary situation and aforesaid tariff and political conditions, which indirectly had important unfavorable financial effects on cotton manufactures. Of late we have had reports from various mill centers which are somewhat more hopeful, and there have been certain descriptions of dry goods advanced in price, indicating a healthy underlying situation in the dry goods markets.

It is not our intention to wax enthusiastically bullish at the late date on the old crop delivery, but seemingly many in the trade were misled as to the available supplies. Not only is the consumption exceeding their expectations, but these who were confident that about 14,300,000 bales had been raised last season will have to modify their views when the 13,380,000 bales have been brought into sight at the end of the year and more will informed authorities are of the belief that, including linters, there are not more than 700,000 bales of the old crop remaining in the country. With the season's exports promising about 8,500,000 bales, it is apparent that the visible supply, which was immeral at the commencement of the season, will be reduced, and to a dangerously low figure, but to a very moderate quantity.

In view of these facts, it would seem that a large cotton crop is necessary this year. There is little room to point to a surplus in the American consumption, and much to bring about larger exports of cotton next year. On 15,000,000 bales are procurable difficulty may be experienced in advancing the price list during the months to a season, but a crop of some where near or above that proportion would seem imperative. Values are low, relatively speaking. Consequently, we are in favor of purchasing cotton on the depressions. Although the staple has been fairly active, the trade in area about 3 per cent over last year's, the critical point is still to be reached, and our own advices, which, of course, we accept with reserve, point to bills of lading from parts of the southeast not starting as they should, there having been irregular moisture, and abnormally low temperatures. The mild winter promises to result in more frequent complaints of boll weevil from the central west, and while these districts, as well as Texas and Oklahoma are now in a good state, much can occur before pick ing time to seriously impair their promise.

Cotton Seed Oil—There have been further material advances in this market, mainly owing to and to the near positions. New crop months have shown no sympathy with the rise to a less extent. At these comparatively high levels for the summer and fall deliveries it would seem injudicious to undertake a bull campaign, but the scarcity of spot oil is against bearishness. If consumption continues at the present rate it is not likely that there will be an accumulation of supplies until well into the fall. Buying of oil is along conservative lines, now that prices have risen so much and are at such premiums over the distant deliveries, but such absorption makes for a substantial trade in the near future, and the crop promise is fine. Should the new crop oil months would be quick to respond. Thus far in the south has sold but little in the way of hedges against their probable oil production, and after last years' conservative success in doing it is not likely that southerners will be easily intimidated, at least not until a big cotton crop is practically assured. We would purchase oil contracts on the New York produce exchange, whenever moderate recessions occur.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF NEW ORLEANS COTTON MARKET

Bearish News Was Almost Wholly Ignored—Close Was 15 to 17 Points Higher

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, June 21.—The price of cotton held above the level of last week's close throughout practically the entire week. The net change for the week was an advance of 15 to 17 points. The high prices were made on Tuesday and the low prices on Monday. At the highest the trading months were 32 to 34 points over last week's close; at the lowest they were unchanged to 9 points over. The range was 24 to 34 points.

Bearish news was almost wholly ignored this week. Favorable crop accounts and wet weather news, ignited spot sales in the Anglish market and less optimistic advice from the Manchester goods and yarn market and predictions that the first bale of new cotton from Texas would be ginned around the first of July, at the latest, did not weigh against values. The operations in the new crop months made shorts nervous, caused more or less covering of short cotton, and resulted in intensifying the effect of a bullish influence.

Bulls made much of the quiet spot demand on this side, which aweps nearly all offerings of cotton and also played up the quiet but large trading in dry goods at centers in this country. The chief weapon, however, was the threatened squeeze in July. All sorts of gossip concerning the intention of holders of long July contracts were circulated and engaged buying for both accounts. At the close of the week the bears contended that, technically, the market was in a weak position, having manipulated its short interest and replaced it on a trading long interest.

News from the belt was favorable. Throughout the week temperatures were fairly high, and while no great amount of rain fell, the scattered showers were sufficient to prevent drouth in fact, except in Arkansas, which claimed to need moisture very badly.

The gist of private accounts was that the plant, while small, was healthy and making good growth. Good stands were generally reported and weeds were said to be clean and unusually well worked for this time of the year. Over a large part the fruit fixing were considered to be 100 per cent clean. While the bulls admitted the truth of some of the bear claims, they pointed out that the crop was still quite late.

In the spot market prices advanced 1-8 cent, middling closing at 12 9-15 against 12 7-15 last week, and 12 3-8 this week last year. Sales on the spot amounted to 749 bales against 1,510 last week and 1,525 this week last year; sales to arrive amounted to 1,500 bales against 1,630 last week and 1,027 this week last year.

NEW ORLEANS COTTON

(By Associated Press.)

NEW ORLEANS, June 21.—Cotton futures opened steady at a decline of 2 points on poor sales and a favorable weather map. After the call prices were 1 to 2 points down under favorable crop accounts, especially from Texas, where it was that state predicting first bales all the way from 17 to 21 days. The weather map was warm and dry, except for widely scattered showers. The forecast indicated some increase in the rainfall, which was called favorable by the local hourly weather and crop reports, the market did not display weakness, and at the end of the first half hour of business prices were only 1 to 3 points under yesterday's closing. Buying for long account was moderate, but steadily increased toward the middle of the morning heavy selling pressure was applied freely and there was a quick slump which brought out considerable liquidation in longs. Sharp and that professional traders were selling amply with the idea of buying much reduced and week-end reaction after a week of bullish trading. At the middle of the morning the trading months were 8 to 12 points net lower than the last quotations. No great amount of buying came out at the decline. The close was firm at a net loss of 5 to 12 points.

GILBERT & CLAY COTTON LETTER.

NEW YORK, June 21.—During the past week the market has shown about 100 points net bade under heavy buying for long account by the Liverpool and street interests. This demand has followed as the result of the strength shown by the market on the 21st cent, and the continued good spot demand in Europe.

These circumstances would seem to forbid any setback in the new crop would quickly reflect itself in an advancing market, and consequently shorts have covered freely.

However, crop reports as a whole are very favorable, and although the time is approaching when complaints may be expected they will find the market largely covered and some speculative long interest to be liquidated.

THE WEATHER.

Georgia—Probably fair tonight and Sunday. Alabama—Generally fair tonight and Sunday.

WEATHER CONDITIONS.

Fine, clear and rather warm weather continues to prevail in the eastern states, where the atmospheric pressure is high. Light showers covered in the central valleys, but extend to the Lake region under the influence of a moderate area of depression over the Upper Plateau and a slight secondary low area over Missouri.

Fair weather prevails also in the Rocky mountain and Plateau region, but showers occured on the north Pacific coast.

Temperatures continue moderately high. Atlanta had a maximum of 90 degrees on Friday. The following station reported 98 degrees: Shreveport; 96 degrees occurred at Louisville, 94 degrees at Knoxville, Memphis, Montgomery and St. Louis.

Section Director.

SURPLUS RESERVE ITEM SHOWS LARGE INCREASE

The Banks Are in Excellent Position at Present to Make the Coming Crop Demand

(By Associated Press.)

NEW YORK, June 21.—The Financier says:

The gain of $6,886,000 in cash reported in the statement of actual conditions by the New York clearing house banks for the week ending June 21, reflected the movement of cash in this direction and preparations for July 1 dividends and interest, the disbursements on which account will be the largest on record.

Preliminary estimates placed the gain of the cash by the banks in excess of $11,000,000. The discrepancy will be made up probably in the next forthcoming report.

The statement otherwise was not of particular importance, loans having shown a slight decrease of $1,410,000, and net deposits an expansion of $5,523,000, this being due to the gain in cash.

The reserves of the banks rose $4,837,150, making the present surplus above the 25 per cent minimum $43,809,650, an unusually large figure for this season. The banks are in excellent positio nat present to make the coming crop edmand.

NATIONAL CITY BANK OF NEW YORK BUYING PAPER

Other Banks Following Lead, Indicating Need of Credit Contraction Has Passed

Wall Street Journals says:

Recent events have afforded striking illustration of the position of leadership which the National City bank has won among the rank and file of the country's banks. No sooner was it announced that after an absence of several months it city re-entered the commercial paper market, and made purchases to the extent of $7,000,000, than other institutions in this center decided to follow its lead. And now word comes to local note brokers from various quarters of the country that banks in those localities are commencing to offer mercantile accommodation on a more liberal scale.

So in the matter of credit contraction, the other banks took their cue from the City Bank. When at the commencement of the year the latter began accumulating a heavy position over the fall crop-moving period, local bankers, owing to the widespread credit inflation, it was first to withdraw from the commercial paper market, and it remained out till the other yay, bringing its reserve percentage from below the legal requirement on January 14, 1913, to 24.9 per cent on June 14 last. The others soon followed suit, and the local commercial paper market was virtually bought up by institutions. This movement of retrenchment by degrees spread over the country, until in May note brokers reported the country banks generally as offering no relief, as the city market, with the result that the commercial paper rate shows a strong and improved condition at the call just issued by the comptroller.

It would appear from this that the banks have not been at fault in permitting themselves to be guided by the action of the City bank. The severe strictures, which now and then are hurled at that institution, seem to proceed com those who have all big business for no apparent reason except its bigness. It has always stood ready to throw its weight on the side of conserving banking, when the general drift appeared to be in the other direction. One proof of this is furnished by its rule of never charging over 6 per cent for call money, apparently the limit to which it desires to sound banking principles and not its huge size, proceeds. Another is the conservatism which it has inspired in the generality of banks.

Balkan News Received Some of The Credit for Wheat Advance

Rain Interference With the Kansas Harvest and Lack of Moisture in South Dakota Were Sfficient Additional Incentives

(By Associated Press.)

CHICAGO, June 21.—Balkan difficulties received some of the credit today for an advance in wheat. Unfavorable weather in both the spring and winter crop belts helped, did the rest. Closing prices were steady at 3-8c to 1c above last night.

Corn finished 1-4c to 3-4@7-8c down; oats off 2-8c to 1-2@2-8c, and provisions varying from 2 1-2c decline to an upturn of 2@2 1-2c.

Wheat traders who have recently been ignoring cables were confronted today by reports that consols had been disturbed by demands for $200,000,000 indemnity to the opponents of Turkey. The security market on this side was also said to reflect fear of serious European troubles. Bull speculators here were not slow to apply the news to the wheat situation and urge that export demand would be stimulated even if anxiety should later prove unfounded.

Rain interference with the Kansas harvest and lack of moisture for growing grain in South Dakota were sufficient additional incentives for the bulge. Besides, it was said that general crop condition at the opening formed the only exception to bullish control.

Export clearances of wheat and flour today equaled 346,000 bushels. Primary receipts of wheat were 525,000 bushels, a year ago 782,000 bushels.

Corn weakened owing to breaking of the drouth in a large part of Illinois. Traders were cautious, however, about pressing the selling side until the final extent of the rainfall became known.

Steadiness in the hog market held provisions with na narrow range. Lard monopolized most of the business.

AUSTIN AND RAIT GRAIN LETTER.

NEW YORK, June 21.—Writing: The winter wheat crop is being harvested under very favorable conditions, and will approximate 485,000,000 bushels; considerably more than last year. There seem for some damage to spring wheat, during the week the crop in Canada and North Dakota has been benefitted by showers, but during some last month or more, the crop, however, moisture has been irregular all through the spring wheat territory, and we are inclined to look for further complaints during the critical month of July. Whenever weakness develops, we would make conservative purchases, but, unless serious damage is noted in the northwest, moderate profits should be accepted, as the movement of new winter wheat is about to become a reality.

Corn and Oats—Again a large grain prices have soared. Part of the advance has been at the expense of the short interest, which has been cut down materially. Speculation in this line has been greatly influenced by the weather, and until ample rains come, we would not anticipate bull forces. Corn complaints seem to be exaggerated, where as oats have had ample showers, but will have the upper hand. Bullish corn are encouraged by the phenomenal distribution of the old crop, farmers having but little grain to offer, and the attractive prices to them, considering last season's prodigious yields.

Provisions—Hog values were lowered during the past week, but product in the west market has very firm. This confirms statements that farmers at Chicago were under a basis with hogs. Until the movement of farm animals is more pronounced, we are inclined to adhere to our opinion on the bull side, as distribution of meats and lard is very fair in the aggregate, but only in this country, but also which may have to be dipped into for export. Packers are accumulating somestocks, market, but consumers have not bought ahead.

FODDER CROPS PROMISE TO BE ABUNDANT AND CHEAPER

June Reports Averaged High, Recent Rains Put Bottom Lands in Fine Condition

There are nearly 200,000,000 head of live stock in the United States, whose maintenance and preparation for market depends not only on the country's grain crops, but also on the forage supply. The condition of the most notable classes of forage, including hay, of the commercial kind, and specialties like alfalfa, are of more than ordinary interest as this account. The government's June report gave the condition of hay, on June 1, of 87.5, compared with 89.8 a month ago, and 86.2 a year ago. The condition on May 1 this year was 1 per cent higher than on June 1, showing that the hay fields for early cutting in June maintained their position of growth, although most of the farmers have secured a first crop of hay of good proportions. The hay crop of timothy and clover, 40,000,000 acres, probably half of which is cut in the month of June. Under ordinary conditions a crop of 35,000,000 tons could be secured by July 1.

Although there has been a fairly dry spring, condition reports as of June 1, for all fodder crops, average high. Alfalfa, according to the department's report, was rated at 102.5 at the beginning of this month; clover at 100.5, and all hay, 89.1. The area of clover hay is about 17.2 per cent larger than last year, partly due to the comparatively mild winter of 1913, in contrast with that of 1912, which froze out in many instances. The acreage, and greatly reduced the supply of fodder for horses and mules. There are approximately a large proportion of the farm demand, numbering 25,000,000 head. This will serve to relieve the excessive cost of feeding when the fodder crops are abundant. The present season, therefore, points to a reduced cost of maintaining horses and mules on the farm when corn and oats are at a premium in the money market.

Progress in fodder cropping has another encouraging aspect than that of quantity. Alfalfa and other deep rooting make the best available rotation crop in the corn belt, where a single cropping inevitably tends to impair fertility. Nothing can save the surplus corn belt from impoverishment, and the high cost of living, but certainly as fodder crop rotation. A second service consists in the extension of grass crops in the semi-arid districts of the western grain belt. Droughts, like that which before the Kansas wheat prosperity, a large proportion of the farm demand, numbering 25,000,000 head. This will serve to relieve the excessive cost of feeding when the fodder crops are abundant. The present season, therefore, points to a reduced cost of maintaining horses and mules on the farm when corn and oats are at a premium in the money market.

NO LET-UP IN VOLUME OF BUSINESS OF INDUSTRIALS

Labor Fully Employed; Earnings of Various Important Companies Show Increase

The Wall Street Journal says:

Business is holding up well in spite of the many recent unfavorable developments, including the Minnesota rate decision, railroad earnings, building, tight money and a general slump in security values. Had underlying conditions been less sound, the effect of such unfavorable developments on general business would have been distastrous. But there has been no let-up to speak of in the consumption of steel, iron, copper, petroleum, rubber, electrical appliancesds, etc. Labor is fully employed and earnings of the various important companies are larger than they were early in the year.

However, there has been a material slackening up in incoming business, which is taken by many as indicating a decline off in production later on in the year. As to the latter point, the U. S. Steel Corporation in April and May received new business at the rate of not much more than 24,000 tons a day, compared with shipments of 45,000 tons per day. Since June 1 there has been some improvement, incoming orders averaging about 30,000 tons a day.

The Republic Iron & Steel Co. has an amount of business on its books equal to about three months' production, and other steel mills are also well fortified in the matter of bookings.

The railroad companies are doing a record business so far as shipments are concerned, and the electric companies are operating to capacity. The same can be said of the leading lumber, equipment, shipbuilding, coal, tobacco, sugar, can and other industrial companies.

As the situation stands, the important corporations appear to have sufficient business on their books to keep their plants running for several months, and it is remarkable that such favorable developments over the last several weeks have not caused consumers to hesitate in the matter of specifying against old contracts. There have been few cancellations, and producers regard this as a very encouraging feature.

Full operations throughout the last half of 1913 are not generally expected by industrial leaders, but they do not look for any material contraction in output providing the country is favored with beneficial crops. One manufacturer argued that by the time cotton and grain crops can be moved to the seaboard the banks would be amply prepared to do all the financing necessary.

ONE HUNDRED ARRESTS WERE MADE SATURDAY

Orders Against Loafers Resulted in Busy Times at Headquarters

Following the general clean up orders recently issued by Chief Beavers one hundred arrests were reported at police headquarters during the day Saturday and thirty services of copies of charges. This is some record, for Saturday, though ever a busy day for the bluecoats, is not generally so productive of police cases as this.

The cells were packed by midnight, and the S. R. O. sign in the chief's office was being dusted by the janitor. All things foretold a busy day in the recorder's court room Monday.

Not all of the cases were for loafing, although a great many were caused by the orders given to rid Atlanta of its loafers and habitues of the rooms and saloons. The usual number of "drunks and disorderlies, were charged on the police blotter, followed by an unusual number of cases for idling and loitering or habitual loafing in public places.

That the campaign against loafers will be continued even more vigorously than before was shown when Chief Beavers made another talk to the members of the morning watch, as they went on duty early after midnight. He reiterated his statement that he was determined to get the loafers out of town, and told the men to run in any one caught in a pool room or saloon who was unable to show visible means of support.

MAJOR GRASTY DIED SUDDENLY SATURDAY

Major William C. Grasty, a veteran of the civil war, dropped dead at o'clock Saturday evening in the front room of his residence, 39 Ease Ellis street. He had been under a physician's care for some time on account of heart failure.

A resident of Atlanta for many years, Major Grasty had scores of friends, especially among some of the city's oldest citizens. He was connected with the Aetna Insurance company and was honored and loved by all who knew him.

When the civil war broke out Colonel Grasty was a student at the Virginia Military institute. Together with his comrades, he enlisted in the Confederate army and served bravely throughout the struggle, being present at the surrender at Appomattox courthouse.

He is survived by two brothers, Nathaniel Grasty, who is president of the Baltimore Associated charities, and Ferdinand Grasty, a resident of that city. The body was removed to Greenberg &Bond's chapel to await the arrival of the borthers of the deceased.

C. MURPHY CANDLER ON FUTURE OF THE W. & A.

Chairman of State Railroad Commission Argues for State Operation

C. Murphey Candler, chairman of the state railroad commission, speaking before the chamber of commerce committee at the auditorium-armory Tuesday night on the future disposition of the Western and Atlantic railroad, made a strong argument in favor of the state's operating the road.

His speech was as follows:

Within the next six years the people of Georgia must decide upon a disposition to be made of their railroad at the expiration of the present lease. The Western and Atlantic railroad belongs to the people of Georgia; it is their right as owners to give directions as to its use. I therefore favor a convention or conference of representatives of state commercial and trade organizations, at an early date, to discuss the matter, and give expression to their views.

Mr. Wimbish correctly states that the disposition to be made of the road depends upon how the people look upon their ownership of this railroad—that is, whether as a mere investment, or as a public institution, the state, built for the public welfare and here to be used in the interest of the people, without the question of the mere dollars to be derived from it, being of the highest consideration.

It is valuable as an investment; it is, in my opinion, more valuable as a public institution, or, as I prefer to designate it, a freight regulator, with possibilities of more efficiency as such than a railroad commission in the matter of fair and reasonable freight rates.

For the year ending June 30, 1912, the net earnings of the road from operations, including taxes paid but excluding rentals paid the state, were, in round numbers, $900,000. The physical property was operated entirely with and practically all of its equipment hired, presumably at rentals that paid the owners of it. This is 6 per cent on $13,500,000, or 5 per cent on $16,000,000.

These figures indicate its value as an investment.

Personally, in its future disposition, I do not believe it should be looked upon merely as an investment, to be exploited by the state solely for the dollars it can get out of it.

If necessary for promoting the widest and highest interests of the state, I would not consider the dollars to be gotten out of it further than to pay its operating expense and upkeep.

In my opinion its superlative value is in its legitimate use as a means of compelling reasonable and just rates for the people of Georgia. It is capable of such use, whether as now constructed or extended to deep water on the east. It is so situated, or certainly would be if extended to the Atlantic, as to occupy a strategic position in making freight tariffs in the southeast.

EFFECT ON RATES.

It is my observation and belief, that given a railroad between any two strategic, or even of comparative railroad importance—points in Georgia, if only one hundred miles in length, a direct and material effect can be exercised over the rates of this whole section.

I am by nature a conservative. I love to follow the well marked paths and proven and tried methods. I have therefore been slow to arrive at the convictions I now have as to a proper use of the state road. Perhaps my four years' experience as a member of the railroad commission has influenced me more than anything else, in reaching the conviction that the state ought never to release this road, but should, as soon as practicable, extend it to the Atlantic, and in the meantime, and after this is done operate it directly and solely in the interest of all the people.

This I believe it can do, upon just and reasonable rates, measured by the value of the service rendered, with profit, and I feel sure without loss, under any probable conditions.

The reports of the lessee company to the railroad commission show that as now operated it earns from $21,000.00 to $22,000.00 gross per mile per annum. This is 60 per cent more than the gross earnings of the next best railroad in the state, and one of the shortest, the Atlanta and West Point, which regularly pays 6 per cent on its capitalization, and this capitalization today approximately three times the actual dollars paid by stockholders into its construction—this excess being practically added out of undistributed earnings.

I shall not discuss the methods or details of how an extension could be financed. I say, and believe, that if Georgia wants to extend its road, it can find the means, and that without great difficulty. With its 2,500 to 3,000 felony convicts, sentenced to hard labor, it can, by their use, build a road cheaper than any corporation ever organized.

I pass then to what I conceive to be the far more important question, the one to be considered whether there be extension or not, viz: the operation by the state.

The first objecton we have to this, is an old stock argument. It used to bother me. They say it is wrong for the state to make itself a competitor in business of individuals—to enter into the sphere of business, and possibly put out of business, or make unprofitable, private and individual enterprise, that such a venture is founded upon a false economic theory.

My answer is, that as concerns public highways—and a railroad is a public highway—individuals and private business have entered into competition with government, and under improvident grants of sovereign powers—franchises—have exercised governmental prerogatives and are attempting to discharge governmental duties.

A GOVERNMENTAL DUTY.

The building and maintaining and operating of public highways, has always been a governmental duty, and always so recognized. Centuries ago, Rome built her magnificent highways, and on down to today governments have been building and operating railroads, canals and other instrumentalities of transportation and communication.

What is the difference, in principle, between the government undertaking to transport for me by parcels post a piece of freight weighing eleven pounds, and one weighing eleven times eleven pounds? If the government transports an eleven-pound package for me, why should it decline to handle my twenty-pound package and send me to a private express company, or my eleven hundred-pound piece of freight and send me to a railroad company, exploiting franchises, such as the right to exist—the right of eminent domain— to take my property in the name of the public for partially private use, and to demand from the public tolls or compensation.

What is the difference in principle? The United States government is practically in competition all over this country today, with real estate owners, in building and operating its thousands of public buildings. Why not rent them from individuals, or farm out the privilege of supplying them constructed for its use? Why does it build any of its battleships in its own navy yards and repair them, or build its own guns. Instead of buying all of them from individuals, or farming out all of them, as it still does some? But they say the state can't successfully operate such business enterprises as railroads, and that politics and favoritism will control the employment of operatives, the purchase of supplies, etc.

This may happen—doubtless will at times—but it should and need not.

The national government is successfully operating today the Panama railroad, it is successfully building the Panama canal, and is going to operate it in the same way.

Municipal governments all over this country are successfully building and operating waterworks, electric light plants, gas plants, and other public utilities, the right to operate which supposedly for the public benefit is so frequently farmed out to private or individual enterprise.

But this proposition, in Georgia, is neither novel nor revolutionary.

This state built this road, as a public institution, to be operated by the state, solely for the public benefit.

It, in fact, did so operate it—and successfully—for many years—it was never leased until after the war. It operated it as successfully as it does its other business enterprises, such as public schools, its insane asylum, its blind asylum. It could farm out the management of these large businesses, but it doesn't.

But it is said, if operated by the state, the road would be cut off from all railroad connections at Chattanooga and at Atlanta, and frowned upon by all of its privately owned and operated connections, would be starved to death and ruin a loss, if dependent only on its strictly local traffic.

WHAT REVENUE WOULD BE.

Let's see about this:

The report of the lessee company to the railroad commission, for the year ending June 30, 1912, shows that its *gross revenue per mile from all intra*state traffic, with origin and destination wholly within state lines, was approximately $4,000.

I believe it is a conservative and absolutely safe estimate to say that the gross revenue upon all traffic, from points on the W. & A. to points beyond the state line, and from points beyond the state line to points on the W. & A., such traffic having either strictly local *origin or destination and therefore im*possible to route diversion, would aggregate, approximately, $4,000 per mile gross, and bring the probable gross revenue of the road, in spite of unfriendly connection, up to $8,000 per mile.

It can be operated, with profit, on this amount of business.

The average annual gross revenue per mile of all the railroad mileage in the state is about $7,000.00.

The trunk lines of the state probably average around $8,000, to $9,000, per mile, gross, some less and some more.

There is another important fact to be remembered in this connection. Under federal law and under the rules of the railroad commission of Georgia, shippers have the absolute right to route their shipments, if such routing be practicable and reasonable. Such routing instructions must be followed literally.

If the W. & A. R. R., owned by the people was operated by the people, their own interests, as well as their patriotic impulses, would unquestionably and with practical unanimity, impel them to route their shipments over their own road.

The volume of traffic, thus directed over this road, under state operation for the benefit of all the people of the state, upon fair and reasonable rates, would largely offset, if not overcome, diversion by unfriendly connections, of unrouted traffic.

At any rate, I do not believe this road, if operated by the state, could be starved to death, nor its operation at a loss, compelled. Its terminals at Chattanooga and Atlanta are valuable—so much so, as to give it advantages in dealings with or making traffic arrangements with other carriers less fortunate.

A very large part of the value of the W. & A. railroad lies in its terminal *properties, and in any future disposi*tion of the road, especial watchfulness is necessary, that the terminals may not be impaired, or their use in whole or in part, diverted to selfish or individual interests, to the rut of the road as a carrier.

I have not covered this important question at all. I have barely touched the high spots. I shall not attempt to cover the field, nor shall I detain *you longer, in view of other more in*teresting and helpful talks to follow.

I repeat I favor the operation of the state's road by the state, in all of the future, after the termination of the present lease, and its extension by the state to deep water as soon as practicable.

OTTER AND OLSEN FIGHT BEFORE FORMER'S WIFE

Otter Resents Finding Another Man With Woman He Seeks to Divorce

Another chapter of the domestic infelicities in the family of Rudolph Otter—as divorce proceedings are pending in the Fulton county superior court between husband and wife—was unfolded late yesterday afternoon when Otter came here from Macon, Ga., so he claims, to see his little son over whom a fight was waged during the early stages of the controversy.

As a result of the trip Otter and Charles Olsen, of 15 Houston stret, the latter with a badly bruised head, occupy cells at police headquarters with the charge of disorderly conduct against both on the books in the sergeant's office.

Call officers relate a story of a trip to 15 Houston street where they were sentto quell a disturbance between the two men which resulted in their arrest. Otter, it is said, after talking with his son for a few minutes on the front porch inquired for the mother and went into the house in search of her and declares he found her in company with Olsen. A lively fight ensued in which the latter was struck in the head with a china water pitcher, a fragment from which, slightly cutMrs. Otter.

All three were carried to the station, but only the two men were detained.

GAVE UP AFTER 5 YEARS; HE GETS CLEMENCY NOW

Governor Brown Saturday morning granted executive clemency to W. J. Collier, who is serving a two-year sentence in the Richmond county chaingang for burglary and car breaking. The governor commuted his sentence. Collier has served all except six months of his sentence. He was convicted and sentenced in May, 1907, but escaped and remained at large for five years, during which time he learned a trade. He voluntarily returned to Augusta and gave himself up.

PRESIDENT'S AUTO PARTY GETS LOST IN STORM

Passing Motorist Played Good Samaritan Without Recognizing Them

(By Associated Press.)

WASHINGTON, June 21.—President Wilson and his party returned to the White House at 8:45 o'clock tonight, after a difficult motor ride through muddy roads and a downpour of rain.

The president and his party lost their way a few miles north of Baltimore. "I'll tow you in," volunteered Frank Primrose, of Catonsville, who was motoring along with his family. He warned the chauffeur not to attempt the route they had chosen, as the hills were muddy and dangerous. Primrose did not know that he was piloting the president of the United States, but discovered it later, as he spied the American coat of arms on the president's car. "I helped former Governor Garfield get to town only yesterday," said Primrose proudly, as he got the president's party on the right road and directed them to Baltimore.

The three big machines carrying the president, his family and secret service men, plowed through water and mud at a good clip. Once, however, the rain was so heavy that the party stopped under a covered bridge. The 120-mile ride was the longest the president had taken in an automobile since he came to Washington.

Some of the members of the cabinet came back by motor, but most of them returned on a special train.

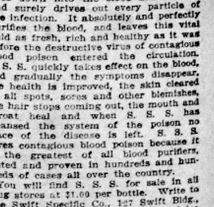
The Return of Blood Eruptions

No Reason Why Anyone Should Suffer With Such a Disheartening Experience.



No case of contagious blood poison is ever cured until the last particle of the virus has been removed from the circulation. The least taint left in the blood will, sooner or later, cause a fresh outbreak of the trouble, with all its hideous and destructive symptoms of ulcerated mouth and throat, copper colored splotches, falling hair, sores and ulcers, etc. No other medicine so surely cures contagious blood poison as S. S. S. It goes down into the blood and steadily and surely drives out every particle of the infection. It absolutely and perfectly purifies the blood, and leaves this vital fluid as fresh, rich and healthy as it was before the destructive virus of contagious blood poison entered the circulation. S. S. S. quickly takes effect on the blood, and gradually the symptoms disappear, the health is improved, the skin cleared of all spots, sores and other blemishes, the hair stops coming out, the mouth and throat heal and when S. S. S. has cleansed the system of the poison no trace of the disease is left. S. S. S. cures contagious blood poison because it is the greatest of all blood purifiers, tested and proven in hundreds and hundreds of cases all over the country.

You will find S. S. S. for sale in all drug stores at $1.00 per bottle. Write to The Swift Specific Co., 127 Swift Bldg., Atlanta, Ga., for private medical advice and a very instructive book on all blood diseases, sent free, sealed in plain wrapper.

Marketing Products

TODAY this is probably one of the biggest questions confronting the farmer and the producer. That is, the one of marketing their products and allowing the middleman who now gets such a big per cent of the income from these products until many producers are much dissatisfied and there is no encouragement for thousands of producers when they see this and know positively what the middleman gets for a few hours' work of handling his products, almost as large a per cent of profit for this as the man who produces it. This does not only apply to products of all kinds for eating purposes, but it applies to cotton and all other kinds of farm products. The only ones that seem to have ever been able to solve this problem are in communities where they are combined and grow enough of any one product to have it marketed through an exchange and sold direct to buyers who buy the product direct from the producer or through the exchange. The problem at Hastings, Fla., of handling Irish potatoes is done in this manner. The entire crop is bought on the ground for cash. This system is largely applied now to fruits and vegetables all over the country, but enough people have to make it a business to warrant buyers coming to these sections and buying the products rather than having them consign and dump the market and take the chance on getting what they will bring. In the first place when a man buys straightout products and is offering them for sale in the city through his store he will naturally hold up his price and not allow the market to break if he can possibly help it as he knows what his goods cost and must make a profit on them. On the other hand if the market is glutted with consigned goods the commission merchants who have these goods consigned to them have practically nothing at stake except their commission and they often break the market and do not get out of the products their actual worth. When this is once done the market is broken and the man who has bought his goods has to meet the price or have a still bigger loss. This is where one big leak comes in handling products and has only been overcome by people who go into anything extensively enough to bring the buyers direct to the growers and get for their products what they are actually worth.

With the poultry business it is quite different and up to the present time no one has ever produced in any one community in Georgia enough of these products to have any one fixed or staple price, or warrant any one coming into certain communities to buy as they are so scarce it is impossible to collect enough in any one community in Georgia to warrant a buyer being on hand, and I don't believe there ever will a time come when the poultry industry in Georgia at any one place will ever be so largely looked after or entered into by many people to make much more than supply their home demand, let alone have any great quantity to sell, but it would be a great thing if the people in Georgia could produce even enough products for home consumption. The same thing applies to live stock as does to poultry and all other food products, in reference to Georgia conditions. We still continue to buy our butter, eggs, poultry and meats of all kinds, and a large per cent of our feed from the west, and I guess will continue to do so as long as cotton will grow in this state.

As I have said, it is discouraging to many people who attempt to market in their home market poultry, eggs, or most any other farm product. The average farmer can take a load of corn, a load of hay, poultry or eggs to his home market and he will usually be compelled to take anything he is offered for it. It is not a question of his naming the price at all, but a question of whether he can find a buyer for his products who will pay him the cash. The truth of the matter is while every one in this community use these products he is offering and buy them they usually do so from their merchants on a credit, and but few of them have the money to pay cash for these products, and if they do buy from their merchant at a much larger price on a credit than they could buy direct from the farmer for cash. The merchants are just as bad, and they themselves, as a rule, do not encourage or patronize the man who offers these products for sale. They seem to prefer buying them from the west and pay a better price than they will for these home grown products. The merchant and the consumers are largely responsible for the average farmer not producing more of such things and offering them for sale, as they find that cotton alone is about the only thing they can haul in any large quantity and convert into cash the day they get to market. I always has a market price and even then the buyer names the price and the producer has to take whatever the buyer says, whether it is a profitable price or one any where near within the limit of the market.

The producer, as a rule, does not keep posted on the market, and just so he gets somewhere near what he supposes is right or near the market he is usually satisfied.

I saw just a few days ago a farmer drive into town with a wagonload of products. He did not visit the city often, therefore was not well posted as to the market conditions. He sold his entire load of products for at least one-fourth less than the average market price. He was late getting to town, had a long ways to get back home and was anxious to get rid of his load. The result was his loss on this one load of products was between $15 and $25 less than the market was actually paying. A merchant who saw the situation made the farmer an offer, the first one he had received which was at least one-fourth below the daily market. The farmer accepted it and before he was out of sight the merchant who was posted on the market had the products on his dray being delivered to a party who could use them, and at a profit of about $20, which he cleaned up in a few hours, just by being familiar with city conditions and the farmer was not.

Aunt Patsy Poultry Feed Co., Memphis, Tenn.

Gentlemen—Your letter of the 30th received. You undoubtedly remember how skeptical the writer was as to the claims you made for Aunt Patsy, and also the objections made to the high cost of the same; but the results from the feed have removed all doubts.

I did not believe Aunt Patsy would improve the laying qualities of my Buff Rocks, but it has done so, and I have a healthier yard of poultry than ever before.

Ever since the writer has been raising poultry he has kept a close record of the cost of the same, and the past few months' record shows Aunt Patsy is the cheapest feed if fed as you instruct.

I am very glad to report these results, though my monthly orders are the best sign of my satisfaction.

Wishing you continued success, I am,

Very truly,
H. S. ADAMS.

ONE of the greatest drawbacks to poultry raising in the south is lice. They kill more little chicks than all the diseases combined, and when a hen is full of lice you cannot expect her to lay many eggs. However, if you start in time you can get rid of these pests without very much trouble. Clean quarters is the main thing to consider. Keep the house cleaned out and once a week at least spray thoroughly by all the cracks, dropping boards and nests with Pratt's or Conkey's Lice Liquid. They are both good preparations and are guaranteed to kill. It is also a good plan to use lice powder. A 25c box of Conkey's Lice Powder will dust about 75 hens and if used in connection with Lice Liquid, you can soon have your flock free from these pests and you can soon see the good results from the increased egg production.

ARE your baby chicks losing? Better examine them and if they are get a package of Conkey's or Pratt's Head Lice Ointment, prepared especially for baby chicks; rub a little back of the head and under each wing and will positively kill every louse and not injure the chick. 10 and 25c package.

IT is not a good plan to feed much corn during the hot weather. A great many brands of Scratch Feed that are offered have about three-fourths corn. The Red Comb brand has a very small percentage and is by far the best scratch feed sold in this market. $2.25 per 100 lbs.

THIS is a good time to feed mash feed. The Red Comb Mash is a perfectly balanced ration, just the thing for the hens; also fine for baby chicks. $2.50 per 100 lbs.

WE carry a full line of poultry yard supplies, drinking fountains, feed hoppers, grit and shell boxes, leg bands, etc. Let us, everything for the poultryman. Come see our line and get our prices before you buy.

WE ARE ANXIOUS

TO BUILD up Virginia avenue into one of the best streets in Atlanta. We want all houses built of brick, stone or stucco. We sold two bricks the past 10 days for $21,500, and we expect to start three more the coming week, one of which will be stone.

THREE VIRGINIA AVENUE LOTS

ACROSS THE street from where we start three houses the coming week, we have three lots that we will sell at a close price, and to people who will build along with us. We will give them free of charge all their rock for the foundation, also rock for the entire house. If brick is preferred, we will give them absolutely free all the brick that goes in the house, be it 5-room or 14-room.

VIRGINIA AVENUE LOTS

ONE OF the lots above referred to is 50x190 feet, and is perfect, about 4-feet elevation, opposite a brick that sold for $10,500. The price is as low as you can find in the whole section.

VIRGINIA AVENUE LOTS

THE OTHER lot is 120x252 feet and narrows down in the rear. Just across the street from the Adair home. It's a perfect corner lot, go out and see it, corner Highland avenue, Virginia avenue and Todd Road. The stone and brick cost you nothing—not a penny, but you must build at once.

THE PROPOSITION GOOD

WE CAN best explain why we are willing to give the brick and stone free of charge when you call in to see us. You will readily understand why we can afford to do it and what it is done for. We, of course, will have to pass on your plans, and you will have to start building with us. It means the building up of a most beautiful residence section, with houses that will be a credit to any part of the city.

THIS PROPOSITION GOOD

FOR THREE LOTS ONLY, as we already control most every other lot on this big 60-foot street. We have water, sewer, sidewalks and lights, and will have gas by the time your house is finished, also have the street in perfect order.

WE HAVE THREE LOTS

ON VIRGINIA AVENUE, each 100x200 feet. We will be glad to figure on building you a home on one of these beautiful elevated lots. See sale cards.

ALL KINDS OF PROPERTY

LOTS! LOTS! LOTS!

THEY CAN TALK TO YOU ABOUT LOTS but we maintain that the WISE buyer will purchase where water, sewer, sidewalks and other improvements have already been made, and the street cars reach the property. That is the kind of lots we have to offer, and they are all money makers. They range in price from $450 to $2,500. These lots cannot be equaled at anything like the price by any one else. They can all shout, but we have the goods!

GOOD INVESTMENTS

WEST MITCHELL STREET, close in, where improvements are going on; lot 55x117 at $120 per front foot. Adjoining property is held at $225.

MARIETTA STREET, within 800 feet of the junction of Walton and Marietta, at the remarkably low price of $310 per front foot. There will be $200 per foot profit in this for some one.

EDGEWOOD AVENUE, close in, 60-foot frontage, at $350 per front foot. This is a valuable piece to own. There is money in it.

WEST PEACHTREE PLACE, between West Peachtree and Spring, a choice offering at $300 per front foot. This is only a few feet from property held at $700 per foot.

ACREAGE

SIXTY-FIVE ACRES with 965 feet frontage on prominent thoroughfare, $300 per acre. This is a fine bargain, well suited for subdivision.

ONE HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FIVE ACRES on Powers' Ferry road, admirably located, $80 per acre. As this road is to be widened and cherted there should be a handsome profit in this propery for some one.

ONE HUNDRED AND FIFTY ACRES between Decatur and Stone Mountain, on the public highway, Georgia railroad and new street car line. Only $150 per acre. Will trade for Atlanta property.

FOUR HUNDRED AND TWENTY-FOUR ACRES, near LaGrange, Ga., $11 per acre. Adjoining lands are held at from $15 to $20 per acre. Will trade for Atlanta property.

IN THE REAL ESTATE FIELD

Past Week Showed Considerable Increase of Inquiries, and There is Quite a Demand for Investment Properties Bringing Income—Good Summer Business Is Shown—Central Avenue and Other South Side Improvements—Small Sales

The past week has shown a steady increase of inquiries for real estate, and a good many trades have been "signed up" and are in the hands of lawyers for title examination.

There is an unusual demand now for investment property and there is is also considerable inquiry for negro property.

There is a fairly seasonable demand for homes and vacant lots. Sales from $5,000 to $10,000, and now and then $15,000 and $20,000, are announced from day to day.

Building is keeping up well, and fortunately in this department of real estate the statistics tell exactly the story of comparisons. The value of permits thus far in 1913 is around $300,000 less than the same period of 1912, which is not a large decrease by any means.

Last year the total record went to $10,000,000, which included a bunch of skyscrapers, big apartment houses and several business buildings. This year the record will hardly equal that, but it will be well up to the average, if not above it.

All general business conditions point to a good market when the new tariff bill is out of the way by that time, congress will probably pass a currency bill, and the new cotton crop will bring fresh wealth into the south.

The Georgia crop is a little late, but in good condition, with every promise of of exceeding last year's. This will begin to have an actual effect in the latter part of August and the first of September. It will have a strong sentimental effect in July, when a fair forecast of the size of the yield can be made.

As faras real estate is concerned, there has been no drop in price, as has been the case in certain kinds of stock and bonds. There are plenty of men in Atlata with money who have been waiting to see values fall, and are now seeing the market take another rise instead.

It must be remembered that the growth of Atlanta soon absorbs higher values. The city consumes something like 2,000 vacant lots a year and there are very few vacant houses. Every vacant lot improved means additional values in the center and the semi-centers, and thus the town soon justifies a high value and proceeds to discount another. CENTRAL AVENUE IMPROVEMENT.

Work has been started on the new produce building on Central avenue, which will take care of most of the broad street commission houses, and will cost $205,000 in completed shape.

Meanwhile Central avenue is being paved with vitrified brick, one side of the street having been about completed. East Mitchell street has been given the same pavement as far as Washington street.

The exterior of the new courthuse is almat empleted, and it will be ne f the largest and most imposing public buildings in the south. Work has been started on the new Dougherty-Little-Redwine building on South Pryor stret, and on the new building of Marcus Loeb & Co. on Trinity avenue between Pryor street and Central avenue.

SENATOR FLETCHER ORDERS FANCY PAPER STOPPED

Several Hundred Thousand Dollars Will Thereby Be Saved Every Year

BY RALPH SMITH.

WASHINGTON, D. C., June 21.—Under the leadership of Senator Fletcher, its chairman, the joint committee on printing, of th two houses of congress, has charked in an administration of economy that promises to effect a saving of several hundred thousand dollars every year to the United States government. The decision was reached at the initial meeting of the committee last week and, although some of its plans may cause an outcry in congress, they will meet with approval throughout the country, and help to strengthen the caus of Democracy with the people.

The extravagant use of "stylish stationery" and the senseless use of bleached envelopes for franking public documents will furnish the means to the economical end. The committee has directed the public printer to fill no more orders for white envelopes for the distribution of public documents, and in future only manilla envelopes will be used for this purpose.

The cost price of white envelopes is $2.85 per thousand as against $1.65 per thousand for manilla envelopes. Last year the senators and representatives in congress used 36,000,000 envelopes for the distribution of documents, which indicates, in a measure, the extent to which the franking privilege is used. None of the envelopes required postage for their transmission in the mail.

While a majority of the 36,000,000 pieces of franked matter distributed last year were mailed in manilla envelopes, it developed at the comittee meeting that millions were carried in bleached envelopes, and that the demand for this class of envelopes increased rapidly this year. Just why senators and representatives prefer the white to the manilla envelopes was not developed. They afford no better protection for the documents and are entitled to no more consideration in the mails than other matter bearing the government frank. But they do cost more

The committee expects to hear no protests concerning its order relating to the use of manilla envelopes, but it is expected that an outcry will follow the adoption of the requirements of the committee with reference to letter heads and letter envelopes which are used by senators and representatives.

The committee aims to eliminate entirely, if possible, the use at government expense of embossed stationery. It is believed that this economy will touch the pride of many members of both houses, and that a wail will go up as a result. However, it is regarded as certain that the people will sustain the committee, and that the senator or representative who complains too loudly will hear an echo from his constituents that will put an effective quietus on him.

The use of embossed stationery has grown to alarming proportions in the last few years; indeed, its use, and the means by which it is obtained at government expense, has increased so rapidly that it may be rightly termed an abuse.

Five years ago 90 per cent of the stationery used by members of congress in their correspondence was of the plain, printed variety; today 90 per cent of the stationery is embossed. And today, it may be added, 35,000,000 letter heads and as many envelopes are required annually to supply the demand of members of the two houses. In other words, 70,000,000 sheets of embossed stationery were used by congress last year, as against 15,000,000 sheets of printed letter heads.

In appearance only is embossed stationery an improvement over the plain, printed kind. The same grade of paper is used for printing and embossing, and it is difficult to explain the growing demand for the costlier sort of letter heads, unless it is due to the extravagant spirit of the times. Members of the joint printing committee regard it as a sign of the times, and they can see no harm that will result to the government nor to the individual congressmen and senators by curtailing and, if possible, preventing the indulgence of this extravagance at the expense of the people.

Asc a member of the joint committee explained: "A communication written on a high-grade piece of printed stationery will be read just as eagerly —or reluctantly—just as easily and just as intelligently as if it were written on the finest embossed letter head. But they say embossed paper is 'classy,' and they all demand it so long as it may be obtained at the expense of the government."

The joint printing committee doesn't intend to try to outlaw the use of embossed stationery altogether, but it does intend to try to prevent its being obtained at the expense of he government. If senators and representatives care to stick to the embossed variety and have it charged against their personal allowance, all good and well. But they will have to cease getting it through committees of the two houses and having it charged against the public account.

Estimates obtained by the joint committee from the government printing office fix the actual cost of press work on embossed stationery, envelopes included, at half-cent a sheet. It costs considerably less than a mill to print one sheet of ordinary stationary.

Senators and representatives in congress have a stationery allowance of $125 each per annum, and against this account they are supposed to have charged all of the stationery, pencils, pens, ink, etc., they use in the course of a year. If a balance remains to their credit at the end of the year, the senator or representative receives it in cash.

An exception is made in the case of committee chairman, on the theory that the committee's business should not be assessed against the chairman. Committees of the two houses, therefore, have an unlimited stationery account, and a committee chairman's requisition for stationery goes unchallenged, and his orders filled by the government printing office.

In the senate there are nearly enough committee chairmanships to go round, so that almost every senator enjoys the privilege of ordering whatever stationery on his committee he may need for his own and his committee's use. As a rule, this stationery is embossed.

In the house, however, the committee chairmanships are few as compared to the membership of the house and hundreds of members must either exhaust their personal stationery allowance or get letter heads and envelopes through the committees on which they serve. Some members—probably a majority—are content with their personal allowance, and there are others whose correspondence is so heavy that they depend upon their committees to supplement their individual allowance.

And, as a usual thing, when a member gets stationery through his committee, he rarely gets anything other than the embossed stuff. This probably accounts for the tremendous increase in the use of embossed stationery.

Every time there is a single change in the membership of a committee in either the senate or the house it necessitates the making of a new plate, and, usually, the printing of thousands of additional sheets of embossed paper. The supply already on hand by the committee and its members when the slight change in the personnel occurs is discarded, or laid aside for scratch paper.

The joint printing committee hasn't yet decided what plan it will adopt to curtail the extravagant use of embossed paper. The matter was called to the committee's attention by Senator Fletcher, and it was the unanimous decision that the abuse should be checked.

PROHIBITION LASHED BY BALTIMORE ANTI

BALTIMORE, June 21.—W. H. Anderson, superintendent of the Maryland Anti-Saloon league, was lashed with a dog whip at his office here today by Robert L. Ulman, son of a retired wholesale liquor dealer of this city.

Ulman had taken exceptions to a newspaper letter written by Anderson, who Ulman construed as an attack on the women relatives of liquor dealers. Anderson received eight or ten blows, one of which cut him under the eye. Ulman was arrested and released on bail.

Last Living Member Of Confederate Congress Summoned By Death

(By Associated Press.)

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., June 21.—Judge Henry C. Jones, ninety-four years old, the last surviving member of the Confederate congress, died today at 1 o'clock this morning at the residence of his son in Florence, Ala. He is survived by two sons, both professional men, and four daughters.

FRISCO DISTRICT ATTY. CRITICISES M'REYNOLDS

John L. McNab, Resigning, Charges Political Influence Is Staying Justice

San Francisco, Cal., June 21.—Charging that United States Attorney General McReynolds had ordered what he considered "fatal delays" in the prosecution of four men indicted by federal grand juries, United States District Attorney John L. McNab, of this city, tendered his resignation by telegraph to President Wilson last night, with a request that it be accepted by the same quick method of communication. Mr. McNab made public today the text of his telegram to the president, together with a message sent to the attorney general.

RESIGNATION TO PRESIDENT.

The telegraphic resignation to the president was as follows:

"Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States, Washington, D. C.

"I have the honor to tender my resignation as United States attorney for the northern district of California, to take effect immediately. I am ordered by the attorney general, over my protest, to postpone until autumn the trials of Maury Diggs and Andrew Caminetti, indicted for a hideous crime, and this after I have advised the department of justice that attempts had been made to corrupt the government witnesses and friends of the defendants are publicly boasting that the wealth and political prominence of the defendants' relatives will procure my hand to be stayed through influence at Washington.

"On receipt of the attorney general's telegram I addressed my resignation to take effect at the conclusion of the trial of the Western Fuel directors and the J. C. Wilson stock brokers cases, both of which I had instituted and which I wished to bring to a successful conclusion.

"In the institution of spirit I am compelled to acknowledge what I have heretofore indignantly refused to believe, namely, that the department of justice is yielding to influence which will cripple and destroy the usefulness of this office. I cannot consent to occupy this position as a mere automaton and have the guilt or innocence of rich and powerful defendants which have been indicted by unbiased grand juries on overwhelming evidence determined in Washington on representations in behalf of the defendants without notice to me.

"I am unable to convey to the dear mind the understanding of the serious situation in which this action will leave this office. If the department in future has to review of findings of grand juries and nullify their indictments, then this office might as well be abolished for its functions will cease to have existed.

"Neither my sense or public duty can permit me thus to destroy the prestige of this office.

"With profound respect and regret that such a step is necessary, I have the honor, in view of my absolute inability to agree with the department to ask that I be, by wire, immediately relieved from duty in order that the department may be enabled to be permitted to carry out its policy in these cases without future obstruction by me.

(Signed)

"JOHN L. M'NAB."

MESSAGE TO REYNOLDS.

The message to Attorney General McReynolds is similar in part.

"I am profoundly convinced," it says, "that the action taken will destroy the prestige and ruin the usefulness of this office and result in the ultimate escape from punishment of certain of those defendants. I have been told that it is publicly charged in this state that the prosecution of the Diggs-Caminetti cases would be stopped by appeals to Washington. In the meantime, corruption and subornation of perjury will weaken and destroy the case long before autumn be here.

DEFENDANTS PROMINENT.

"The white slavery cases against Drew Caminetti and Maurys Diggs have attracted wide-spread attention because of the prominence of the defendants' families. Caminetti is a son of A. Caminetti, recently appointed commissioner general of immigration by President Wilson. Diggs is a nephew of Former State Senator Marshall Diggs of this state and is a man of wealth and strong political connection. The two are charged with having violated the Mann white slave act in eloping to Reno, Nev., with two Sacramento girls of the high school age. Both Diggs and Caminetti have wives and families.

Robert Bruce, and Sidney V. Smith, of San Francisco, are the Western Fuel company directors upon whom District Attorney McNab sought to bring to trial without delay. They and others of the Western Fuel company are charged with having defrauded the government of hundreds of thousands of dollars of customs duties on imported coal, through a conspiracy entered into with steamship and customs officials by which weight records were falsified.

MORGAN'S WILL UPHELD AS MODEL FOR OTHERS

Daniel S. Remsen Declares That Wills of Harriman and Mrs. Eddy Were Not Ideal

(By Associated Press.)

PITTSBURG, June 21.—Daniel S. Remsen, of the New York bar, an authority on the post-mortem administration of wealth, told the members of the Pennsylvania Bankers' association today that the wills of the late Edward H. Harriman, Albert C. Bostwick, Charles T. Yerkes, Henry B. Plant, Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy, Robert Mather, and other prominent persons he mentioned, were unsafe models to follow. As a type of the "safe and sound" will he cited the will of J. Pierpont Morgan. Mr. Remsen's address, delivered at the annual meeting of the association, was entitled, "A Plea for the Scientific Preparation of Wills."

The way to get better wills, said Mr. Remsen, was to "make them." Lawyers were able and willing if that service was demanded. The client, he said, "must give his lawyer a fair chance and demand his best service. When his will is complete he must demand that it be tested while he is alive and able to repair any defects or ambiguities that may be discovered." This method, he added, produced the will of Mr. Morgan.

A "safe" will Mr. Remsen defined as one "free from danger. The word 'sound,' he said, meant 'without a flaw.' The safe will was one so written as to insure the fulfillment of the maker's wishes. The sound will was one that could be enforced even though it might not insure the result the maker wished. The Harriman will, he asserted, was clearly sound but must be classed as unsafe. The will of the late Samuel J. Tilden was cited as a conspicuous example of the will that was both unsafe and unsound.

"For Mr. Harriman's purpose," he said, "his will is not open to criticism. When, however, it becomes the subject of great praise in the public press as a model for the preparation of other wills I cannot, in justice to the thou*sands of innocent people all over this* country who have copied this will as their own, let this opportunity pass without sounding a note of warning. Do not misunderstand me. Mr. Harriman and his lawyers knew the conditions with which they were dealing. They were preparing Mr. Harriman's will, not a precedent for other wills. It is only when this will is viewed as a precedent, when people copy it, when it is used to fit quite different financial and family circumstances that it presents objectionable features. Indeed, all wills may be said to present objectionable features when used as precedents without competent legal advice.

"For an example of a perfectly sound will that is exceedingly unsafe and liable to defeat the wishes of its maker let us refer to the will of the late Albert C. Bostwick, son of Jabez A. Bostwick, of Standard Oil fame. His will was substantially the same as the Harriman will. Like Harriman, Bostwick gave everything to his wife. The important difference in the two cases was created by the family circumstances. Bostwick had four children born to him after he made his will and Harriman none. Mrs. Harriman took all the property given to her by her husband. Mrs. Bostwick did not. The four Bostwick children born after the making of the will took the bulk of the estate as if he will had been made. Mrs. Bostwick took what was left and the child born before the making of the will took nothing.

"The late J. Jennings McComb made millions in his life time from a little patented article used to fasten steel hoops around cotton bales; a little piece of iron known as a cotton tie. At the time of his death he was the owner of the far famed Spanish and Navarro flats in New York. Now called the Central Park Apartments. The litigation concerning his will was long and bitter. It resulted in the destruction of several trusts, including a trust of those eight great apartment buildings. It wiped out the codicil designed to prevent a particular marriage in his family, and in a large measure otherwise defeated his plans. I have no means of estimating the cost of this litigation, with accuracy, but we are told that the executors expended between fifty and seventy-five thousand dollars in making an unsuccessful attempt to sustain the will. Nothing is known of what it cost the heirs.

"The late Henry B. Plant, the principal owner of the great Plant system of railroads in Florida, was also a resident of New York. He took chances with the rule against perpetuities, and his huge trust for the benefit of his descendants wholly failed and in effect his will was adjudged void. The cost of the litigation concerning this will is also said to have been enormous, exceeding half a million of dollars on both sides.

"What does this mean? It means that too little attention is given to the plan and preparation of the will. It means that the average person about to make a will treats it as a matter of minor importance, less indeed than the making of a simple contract. He is in haste. He explains to his lawyer that he wants a short, plain, pure simple will. He then makes known his wishes. When he has finished with his instructions the chances are more than ever that his lawyer finds it difficult, if not impossible, to accomplish all his client wishes.

"Then comes the danger. The client intrusts to his lawyer that he wishes quick work and minimum fees. He gets what he orders but not what he wishes. He gets something that his lawyer does not wish to give him but it is the best he can do under the limitations imposed. The client has made his lawyer violate a fundamental rule for good work. Whatever the haste be not in a hurry. The best work can never be done by a perturbed mind.'

"After the maker of the will is dead each of the heirs employs a lawyer to search for flaws in the will. The probabilities are that something great or small will be discovered. The unfortunate lawyer who drew the will is then in trouble. He is unjustly blamed when the fault lies at his client's door. He is blamed because he omitted something from the will; because he did not omit something from the will; because some part of the will when applied to facts unknown to him has an uncertain or double meaning. He is blamed because he did not foresee and provide against every possible contingency that might arise in connection with the testator's family and estate before and after death. In short the lawyer is criticised by all if anything goes wrong and by some if everything goes right and in accordance with the wishes of the deceased."

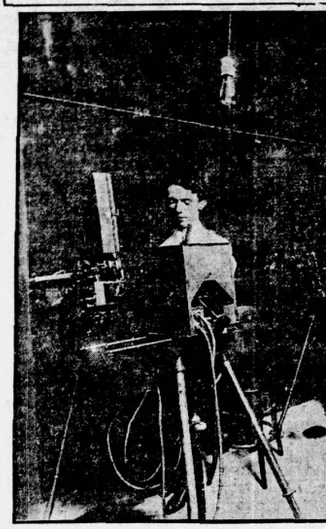
McCoy, of Birmingham, to the Eufaula District conference in Girard today is an event of interest to Methodists of the Columbus district, many of whom will hear the gifted divine, who is one of the most active members of the college of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church, south. Bishop McCoy will preach at the conference Saturday evening and on Sunday morning.

VIEW OF FIRE-PROOF OPERATING ROOM AT THE VAUDETTE



NEWS OF THE MOVIES

Most Gorgeous Theater in South is the New Elite

The opening of the new Elite theater several days ago marked the advent into the moving picture field of one of the most beautiful and expensive houses in the entire south.

The new house is a gem of artistic architecture, decorated and furnished in a manner that cannot but appeal strongly to every one whose eye delights in the harmonious blending of beautiful color effects and graceful lines.

In building the new Elite, nothing has been left undone that could add either comfort or beauty. More than $70,000 has been spent in this way, and a general summary of the theater discloses the fact that one would be hard pressed indeed to suggest another thing which would either appeal to the eye or increase the comfort of the patrons.

The theater is kept cool and sweet at all times by a battery of ten large oscillating fans, controlled by four circuits from the operating room, and a giant 36-inch exhaust fan, discharging 15,000 cubic feet of air per minute, exhausting the air in the house every two to three minutes and refilling it with pure air. The seating arrangement installed consists of three hundred and fifty folding opera chairs done in green, and is the most comfortable imaginable.

The tapestry decorations are beautiful, and harmonize thoroughly with the marine decorations, and have been the subject of much favorable comment.

The operating room is one o fthe largest in the country, and like the entire building ,absolutely fireproof, and far exceeds the fire laws which are enforced for the protection of moving picture patrons.

Located in the rear of the building are comfortable rest rooms for the lady patrons ,with a maid in attendance at all times. These rooms are equipped with mirrors, toilet articles, etc., and the lady patrons are urgently invited to make use of them.

The music furnished by Larry Briar, who operates the big Wurlitzer orchestradian, which can be played by hand, or converted into a complete orchestra.

H. J. HOSSBEIN,
General Manager Elite Theater.

Mr. Hossbein is a graduate of the University of Syracuse, and took a special course in architectural and engineering work, in addition to a course in interior decorating. Prior to coming to Atlanta he was one of the designing engineers with the Packard Automobile company, of Detroit, Mich.

Especial credit is due Mr. Hossbein for the work he has accomplished while several managers for the Elite theater.

SAVANNAH MASONS LAY CORNERSTONE MONDAY

Elaborate Ceremonies Will Be Led at New Temple by Grand Master Colding

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 21.—At 5 o'clock in the afternoon of Monday, June 30, the cornerstone of the new Masonic temple will be laid with elaborate ceremonies by Grand Master Robert L. Colding. This was decided at a meeting of the executive committee of the Masonic Temple association held in the office of Captain Robert M. Hitch at 4 o'clock today.

At the direction of the grand master several committees were appointed who, under the guidance of the grand master, will look after the necessary details for the ceremony, which will be an important event in the general ranks of the Masons.

While the meeting this afternoon was largely for the purpose of arranging the preliminary details, it is expected the committeemen will soon have all of the essential details well in hand.

NO FEDERAL LICENSE IN OPPOSITION TO STATE

Federal Stamp Tax Not Licease to Sell Liquor, Mr. Wilson Tells Blease

COLUMBIA, S. C., June 21.—"I promptly referred to the treasury departm*ent* your recent communication about the sale of liquor in South Carolina under federal license and take pleasure in sending you the enclosed communications from the commissioner of internal revenue," wrote President Wilson to Governor Blease this morning. "As I understand it," continues the letter from the president, "there can be no such thing as a federal license to sell liquor contrary to state laws. The payment of the federal stamp tax entitles the holder of the stamp only to protection from prosecution for nonpayment of the internal revenue tax."

MONUMENT AT CAPITOL.

Permission to erect on the state house grounds a monument to Marion, Pickens and Sumter, the Partisan Generals of the Revolutionary war, was granted to the central committee of the D. A. R. today by the committee on state house and grounds. The committee have fixed on November 15 as the date for unveiling of the monument and will invite President Wilson to make the address. If another date suits him the unveiling will be made to meet his convenience.

The monument will stand opposite Trinity church and will be erected by funds raised by the D. A. R. The legislature appropriated $2,000 for the base. The monument is being made in Paris. The committee from the D. A. R. consists of Mrs. F. Louise Mayes, state regent general; Miss Alice M. Earle, Mrs. Sarah Waring, Mrs. Sarah Aldrich Richardson and Mrs. Rebecca Pickens Bacon. George R. Rembert, of Columbia, appointed for the committee, the request also being endorsed.

William J. Moore, of Greenwood, was today appointed by Governor Blease as master for Greenwood county for the term provided by law.

GOVERNOR BLEASE RETURNS.

Governor Blease returned today from Spartanburg, where he attended the commencement exercises of the Cedar Springs Institute yesterday. He said that he found politics still active in the upcountry and also learned, he said, that the welfare conference "Was A Richard I. Manning convention for governor," referring to the recent preliminary welfare conference here of which Prof. W. K. Tate was elected president. The governor said he noticed Mr. Manning's letter yesterday and professed to have gotten the whole secret of the conference being a "boost" for Manning in his race for governor.

ALABAMA CONVICT CAMP PRAISED BY INSPECTOR

Best Convict Prison to Be Found in Walker County, Says Dr. Austin

MONTGOMERY, Ala., June 21.—Persons who oppose the present system of working convicts in mines ought to visit the county camp at Wegra, or Flat Creek, Walker county, according to Dr. J. M. Austin, physician-inspector of the state convict department, who filed a report with Governor O'Neal yesterday on his inspection of the camp.

Dr. Austin was called to Flat Creek by reports that there was an epidemic of meningitis there. He commended mine officials for segregating the cases and preventing a spread, and recommended the parole of fourteen persons who contracted the disease and will not be able to do manual labor before the expiration of their terms.

Referring to his inspection, Dr. Austin said: "To those who object to the present system of working convicts in the mines I would suggest that they visit this camp and have W. A. Gibson, the warden, show them through the best convict prison to be found anywhere."

MUSCOGEE CAMPS ARE IN FINE SHAPE, SAYS JUDGE

COLUMBUS, Ga., June 21.—Judge T. E. Patterson, member of the Georgia prison board, who has been in the city several days in attendance upon the great council of the Georgia Red Men, inspected local convict camps during his stay, and also the camps in Marion and other counties in this section of the state, and he reports them in good condition. Judge Patterson stated that conditions in Muscogee were in fine shape, and he complimented local authorities on the splendid work underway here.

Judge Patterson returned to Griffin Friday night, from which place he goes on to Atlanta in a day or two.

Solomon Brothers Elude All Efforts at Capture—Posse Waits for Them to Move

WAYCROSS, Ga., June 21.—At a late hour tonight, Sheriff Gillis, of Coffee county, and his posse, had not captured the Solomon brothers and others suspected of connection with the attempted holdup of an Atlantic Coast Line freight train near Kirkland, yesterday. The sheriff and posse have been guarding a swamp near Kirkland, where it is believed the men wanted are in hiding, but those on watch have obtained no sight of the men wanted.

Edgar Carver, who was arrested last night by the posse, suspected of being a member of the party that fired upon the train, is said to have admitted being with the gang when the shooting occurred, but denies participating in the shooting.

T. P. A. MEETING AT RICHMOND, LARGEST AND BEST YET HELD

Georgia Had Full Delegation of Eighteen Men—Many T. P. A. Ladies Were Present, Were Royally Entertained

GEORGIA MAN HONORED FOR MEMBERSHIP RECORD

G. H. Armstrong, of Philadelphia, Elected New President. Mrs. Anderson Writes of the Convention's Social Side

The national T. P. A. convention, held in Richmond, Va., June 9-14, proved the largest and most successful meeting in the history of the organization. The returning Georgia delegates have nothing but praise for the hospitality extended the association by the people of Richmond, and declare that the 1913 convention was in every way the best yet.

The national organization now numbers more than 46,000 members, showing a gain of about 3,000 over last year. At Richmond there were more than 800 delegates, and these, together with the other visitors, made up a convention crowd of between 1,200 and 1,500. There were 297 visiting T. P. A. ladies.

Georgia had the distinction of possessing the member who during the past year secured the largest number of new members of any one man in the United States. This member was Albert Ehrlich, of Post A, of Savannah, who wrote 108 applications. The next highest number, 105, was written by C. F. Ennie, of Illinois. In view of their fine records, both Mr. Ehrlich and Mr. Ennie were called to the platform, together with C. F. Tomlinson, chairman of the national membership committee, and were tendered a rising vote of thanks by the entire convention. Mr. Ehrlich, who was already chairman of the national hotel committee, was re-elected to that position.

The Georgia delegation and R. A. Broyles, national director for Georgia, were successful in their fight against the proposed amendments to abolish all national committees and concentrate this authority in the national board of directors. Such an amendment would have done away with the present divisions of railroad chairmen who in the past have done satisfactory work for the association. Mr. Broyles was alone in his opposition on the board of national directors when this amendment was proposed there. The Georgia state convention indorsed his stand at the meeting at Albany, and at the Richmond meeting the convention overwhelmingly sustained his position.

He was also successful in defeating the amendment to enlarge the list of occupations eligible to membership in the T. P. A., and in this, too, he had the backing of the Georgia state convention.

A number of changes, however, were made to the constitution and by-laws. Among them was the abolition of post surgeons. Under the new rule, the work heretofore done by post surgeons will be performed from St. Louis by the chief surgeon and the national board of directors.

The proposal to appropriate $1,000 to aid the South Carolina T. P. A.'s in their mileage fight was referred to the national board of directors for consideration and action.

After a spirited fight between St. Louis, Mo., and Houston, Tex., for the 1914 convention, the latter city was successful.

GEORGIA DELEGATION.

Georgia had a full delegation of eighteen representatives: Jesse W. Bates, state president; C. W. Randall, Mr. Morgan, of Rome; Albert Ehrlich, Joe Loverein, Maurice Meyer, A. Samuels, Ferdinand Newberger, H. C. Calhoun, H. C. Pilcher, Max Banner, C. W. Giddings, M. M. Anderson, R. A. Broyles, E. D. McDonald, C. J. Baisden, H. F. Luckett, T. P. Goodwyn, the last six representing the Atlanta post.

George H. Armstrong, of Philadelphia, was elected the new president of the association, the other officers being: C. Walton Saunders, of Virginia, first vice president; William O'Neill, of Colorado, second vice president; L. Harvey Fisher, of New York, third vice president; John A. Lynch, of Florida, fourth vice president; John A. Guise, of Mississippi, fifth vice president; T. S. Logan, of St. Louis, Mo., secretary and treasurer.

Members of the board of directors for two years: Benjamin G. Thompson, of Indiana; W. O. Hudson, Louisiana; George E. Begerow, of Nebraska; J. M.

CITY SALESMEN PREPARE FOR BIG TRIP TO SEASHORE; TRAVELING SALESMEN LIKE TO SPEND VACATION AT HOME

Large Crowd of City Men Will Leave Friday for Six-Day Stay at the Isle of Palms, Travelers in Their Leisure Days Long for the Comforts of Home

City salesmen off to the summer resorts and the men of the road in for a much prized stay at home is the general program for vacations with the city's several thousand whose work it is to go out and get the orders.

While he who works the city trade gets his change of surroundings in much the same way as the average man, the traveling salesmen whose work keeps him so much on the move, by spending several weeks at his home, gets almost as decided a change of environment, so short are the usual periods he is in from the road.

Another contrast is in the time for vacations. Hundreds of the city salesmen will leave work simultaneously for the big annual excursion which is this year to the Isle of Palms, the trip beginning next Friday. Most of the traveling class take their rest late in the summer and the time for it varies with the demands of their seasons for sales and territory conditions.

When the city salesmen and their friends leave for the seashore this week it will be on a special train of seventeen cars, arrangements having been made for the largest crowd in the history of the association's outings.

H. L. Simmons, president of the association, and W. G. McNair, president of the finance committee, who have been assisted by other leaders in the association, expect to see their work in perfecting the arrangements rewarded by this 20th annual excursion being the biggest success of any yet.

In the meantime, some of the travelers have already stored away their sample cases and are "rusticating" in the shady spots around their Atlanta homes.

One of the first of the season is J. Geda Addy, with the M. C. Kiser company, who might be taken as typical of the traveler on vacation. When the place this salesman is spending his vacation is considered it is not surprising that he grabbed the first good opportunity for several weeks there.

At his home at Decatur, the house of the colonial columned style set back just the right distance for such a house in a wide and well shaded lawn and with a big garden and a chicken yard with chickens in it, there he is whiling away the days with Mrs. Addy and their three fine children around him.

Salesmen for Atlanta houses who "vacation" at home in Atlanta are not entirely cut off from business, however, if this one is taken as typical in all respects for a call from the office a few days ago necessitated a half day trip to sell an opening bill. Being available, he was called, for what else can be considered with opening bills in sight?

While every Atlanta traveler may not have just the same settings for his home vacation that Mr. Addy has, there are many of them looking forward to a stay at home that in prospect approaches even nearer Arcady than the scenes of this Decatur home.

Those travelers who are unmarried are another matter and as to their vacations, are acknowledged unclassifiable.

W. G. M'Nair, chairman of the finance committee of the city salesmen, aspires to be the boating expert of the party at the Isle of Palms. He is shown in the center picture at the right, practicing oarsman's stunts at Piedmont park.

DUTCH LUNCHEON BOOSTS MERCHANTS' WEEK PLANS

Travelers Meet With Program Committee and Offer Many Valuable Suggestions

A large crowd of traveling salesmen met last night with the program committee of the Southern Merchants' association at a Dutch luncheon at the Piedmont hotel and discussed plans for making the coming merchants' week in August the biggest and best yet held in Atlanta.

Rolling Jones, chairman of the committee, outlined the general nature of the August celebration and what the program committee hopes to accomplish. This was followed by a general discussion of the plans by the travelers present and it was clearly evident that the August meeting is already being looked forward to with enthusiasm by the retailers of the south and that the travelers are ready to lend every possible aid in making the affair a memorable one.

Many good suggestions were offered at the meeting and cards were distributed among the travelers upon which they will suggest topics to be discussed and the most suitable men among the merchants to speak on each topic.

INTERESTING GIDEON MEETING THIS AFTERNOON

At the regular Gideon meeting this afternoon at 3 o'clock in the convention hall of the Piedmont hotel, the subject for discussion will be, "What It Takes to Make a Gideon." C. H. Burge, president of the Atlanta camp, will preside and will throw the meeting open for a general discussion of the topic. A spirited and interesting meeting is expected. The public is cordially invited to attend.

TWO NECKWEAR COMPANIES CONSOLIDATE

Warren and Robinson Companies Unite Under Name of All-Star Mfg. Co.

Announcement is made that the interests of the Warren Manufacturing company and the Robinson Neckwear company have been consolidated and that the business will be henceforth conducted under the style of the All Star Manufacturing company.

The company will use the quarters at 66-70 West Mitchell street, formerly occupied by the Robinson Neckwear company. The Warren company have already started the work of moving, and within a few days will be fully settled in their new place, which is only a few doors from the building they have been in for several years.

Official personnel of the All Star Manufacturing company will be the same as the Warren Manufacturing company which it succeeds, with W. O. Steele president and M. L. Minor secretary and treasurer.

Products of the new company will be the same as of the two old concerns, with enlarged facilities and sales force. Some goods have already been shipped out under the new name of Mr. Steele states that all their business will go under that style starting this week.

JONES SAYS FIRING LINE IS APPRECIATED

Writes That Sunday Journal's in Big Demand in Florida by Travelers

Editor Firing Line: I got the Journal as soon as delivered to the news stand here Sunday.

When I had finished reading the Firing Line a gentleman I did not know said, "Pardon me, but may I look over The Journal's Firing Line?" After he had finished two others made the same request, and all paid a high tribute to some of the issues being advocated by the Firing Line. This is evidence of the good work you are doing, not only in the interest of the traveling men but the public generally.

May the interest continue, and success crown your efforts.

Yours very truly,
B. L. JONES.

HOLMES FINDS OUTLOOK BRIGHT IN SOUTHEAST

Will H. Holmes, southern representative of the well known firm of L. Pickert Fish company, of Boston, Mass., is spending a couple of days with the wholesale grocers in the interest of his firm. He states he met but few calamity howlers anywhere in Georgia, Florida and Alabama, and he thinks the prospects for business this season are much better than the average.

He is very much in favor of free fish in the proposed new tariff bill.

Mr. Holmes is one of the best known and most popular traveling men that visit this section, one of the old school kind, having been on the road as a salesman thirty-two years. He is working the trade under the guidance of the R. J. Thomas company.

JENKINS RECUPERATING AT WHITE SPRINGS, FLA.

Ga. T. P. A. Press Chairman Writes That His Health Is Rapidly Improving

I wish they would keep it up. They are bright and entertaining and I read them with a great deal of pleasure.

White Springs is a lovely place. Everything is nice here, cool and pleasant all the summer through. I am here awhile for recuperation and rest. Hope to be back on the road soon.

A telegram from the Georgia T. P. A. delegates at the Richmond convention stated that they deplored my absence, and sent best wishes for my speedy recovery—a remembrance which I prize very highly.

GOOD SALESMEN ARE BY LIKE TOKEN GOOD TROUBLE ADJUSTERS

UNAUTHORIZED PROMISES, SOURCE OF ANNOYANCE

What to Do and Say When the House Happens to Be Wrong and Also What to Do When Customer Is Wrong

"Did you ever buck up against the meanest man on earth," said Jack W. Evans, of Atlanta Agricultural works, "only to find after a few minutes' conversation that he was the finest gentleman that you ever knew? If you have been on the road you have done this very thing.

JACK W. EVANS.

"The bane of a traveling salesman's existence is the adjustment of differences between his house and his customers, and yet if he tackles the job right and goes at his man in the proper way, it is the easiest thing on earth to satisfy everybody concerned and make a lifelong friend of what looks to be his bitterest enemy.

"Ninety-nine per cent of the buyers I have met while on the road are conscientious, honest men; honest in principle and honest in conviction, and when they make a complaint, you can just bet your last bean on it that they are either right or think they are right. If they are right you can bank on it that your house is more anxious for a satisfactory adjustment than you are, even though it may cost a few dollars to satisfy your customer. But, if your customer is not right in his complaint, but thinks he is right, your house looks to you to convince him in such a way as to retain his trade and increase his confidence in both the house and the goods, so you can just remember where you draw your salary, bo, and go to work at him in a straightforward man fashion, and you'll find him the finest, most agreeable and most reasonable personage you have ever known.

"The trouble with most of us is that we are more afraid of losing a customer than we are of losing our job. But believe me, we traveling men are just humans, like the rest of you and sometimes we lose our jobs just the same as the balance of mortals, and sometimes more samer.

"And buyers are just human, too, and like you and I, they can't tolerate a man who agrees with them on everything on earth they say, but they soon form a friendship for the man with convictions of his own, with argument to support his convictions and convince people that they are right (when they are right) and ready to prove it by a little actual labor if necessary.

ANGORA IN DANGER.

"I remember very distinctly one little incident in my career which came very near attaching my fingers. A house for whom I was then traveling made a shipment to a customer on whom I had never called. This shipment amounted to something like $100, but when the goods reached destination this customer was unable to put them together, and so wrote the house. Everything possible was done around the house to ascertain the trouble, but nothing could be located, so he was written a strong letter informing him of this fact, assuring him that nothing was wrong with the goods and asking him for an explanation of the trouble. This touch as to the question of his veracity got him hot under the collar, and he wrote back that the goods were no account, were not as represented, and threatened to ship the whole thing back. This got the house mad, and they answered him as strong as he had written, firing the whole correspondence to me and instructing me to go and adjust this matter with him.

"When I reached his town I happened to pass his warehouse on the way to the store, so I dropped in and examined the goods myself. If there was anything wrong with them then I could not see it. You can imagine what I considered myself up against, but my pay day was about due and I hadn't set the woods on fire that month either, and I realized that something had to be done. When I called on the gentle-

SOUTHERN MERCHANTS' CONVENTION---AUGUST 4 TO 15

ATLANTA

ON THE FIRING LINE WITH THE COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

"1,000 TEN-CENT STORES IN SOUTH NEXT DECADE"

Head of Big Atlanta House Discusses Growth of Ten-Cent Business

The following interesting and instructive article on the development of the 10-cent business in the south was written expressly for The Journal Firing Line by C. W. McClure, head of the McClure Ten-Cent company, of Atlanta:

C. W. MCLURE.

In regard to the past, present and future of the 5 and 10-cent business in the south, I will start in regard to the past that I can only give experience going back to the past seventeen years, as it is just seventeen years ago today since I arrived in Atlanta. At that time there were less than a half dozen strictly 5 and 10-cent stores south of the Mason and Dixon line, and they were controlled entirely by one firm, and later this syndicate changed their scheme and made all of the stores 5, 10 and 25-cent stores. However, there were a number of variety stores, generally known and called racket stores, and a few other stores that ran under the name of 5 and 10-cent stores, but carried all priced goods; one of them being the Hart Brothers on Whitehall street, Atlanta. They failed shortly after we came here and the McClure Ten-Cent company took over their stock, doing the same with Gulley's 5 and 10-cent store; also taking over part of the stock of the Woolworth Brothers, who tried it in Atlanta, and decided to remove and go to other more promising fields. Later a great many of this class of stores went out of business or evolved into dry goods or general stores.

At the present time there are probably thirty or forty strictly 5 and 10-cent stores in the south, carrying nothing over 10 cents, and 100 to 150 5, 10 and 25-cent stores, and from 50 to 75 10-cent stores with the $1 limit.

Personally, we have tried out all of the above plans, including all priced goods. When we started seventeen years ago we had a strictly 5 and 10-cent store, but it was not long until two other parties came in Atlanta and also opened 5 and 10-cent stores, and we decided then to add the 25-cent goods to our line, and then afterwards purchased the all priced stock, as stated above, of Hart Brothers and one or two others. This gave us a variety of all priced merchandise. We run under this plan for a year or two, but in the meantime we were studying the situation and we decided after discussing with our different managers and ourselves that merchandise over $1 was very bulky and took up entirely too much room, and also that the sales were much fewer and the goods did not move out as did the merchandise at 5, 10, 25 and 50 cents and $1.

Therefore, about twelve years ago we decided that we would establish the above prices and make our limit $1, and since opening up our wholesale house to supply merchandise up to $1 we have opened up and supplied merchandise to other people usually in towns from 5,000 to 10,000, and opened up about fifty of these dollar limit stores. Most of them have been very successful, and at the present time a great many department stores, or, as some would call them, general stores, in the small towns from 2,000 to 10,000 population are putting in departments of 5 and 10-cent goods, usually with the five prices, 5, 10, 25, 50 cents and $1. This has been a great drawing card for their entire stock, and merchants who have put this in have found it very profitable. It has usually been the leading merchant of the town, and this has been quite a factor to help keep them in the lead. In fact, it has put some of them so far in the lead that there is no hope for any other merchant in the town catching up.

GREAT FUTURE.

In regard to the future, I predict in ten years there will be at least 1,000 5 and 10-cent stores in the south of the various types mentioned in the above article. In my opinion, the five-priced stores, 5, 10, 15, 25, 50 cents and $1, merchandise with the dollar limit will increase faster than the others. My reason for believing this is that it is possible for a store of this kind to succeed and make money in cities of from 3,000 to 6,000 and 8,000 inhabitants, and as there are many more cities of this size than of the larger cities, therefore, it's best to open more of this kind of stores.

Also more business people are realizing each day (especially young men) that stores of this kind can be started with less capital than any other kind of a store, with the possibility of making a success, and under our system of opening these stores it is not necessary that the party have much experience in merchandising. If he has good business ideas and qualifications and will work and watch expenses, he can make a success, as we furnish experienced men to help select the line of merchandise and also to go and arrange the store and make the opening sale, and stay through the opening day.

In the larger cities there will be from two to three syndicate stores in each of these, probably one strictly 5 and 10-cent store, one 5, 10 and 25-cent store with the dollar limit, and if they are managed well all of them will be a success, where a few years ago it was thought that only one store run well in each town would be successful.

I certainly predict a great future for the 5 and 10-cent business in the south. The southern people appreciate good merchandise and small prices just the same as they do in other sections of the country, and these stores to a certain extent have been one factor in reducing the cost of living to the common people.

TWO TRAVELER REPRESENTATIVES, BUSY DRAFTING GA. HOTEL INSPECTION BILLS

Specially Delegated Officials of U. C. T. and T. P. A. Get Ready to Present Bills to Legislature to Give State Effective Regulation of Hotels

With the opening of the legislature near, the officials of the two traveling men's organizations in Georgia are at work framing bills to secure more adequate hotel regulations and to provide for an inspector to see that the regulations are enforced.

M. M. Anderson is shown at his desk making a preliminary draft of the bill for the Georgia T. P. A.

W. A. Webb is shown looking up points of law before formulating a bill on behalf of the U. C. T. grand council of Georgia and Florida.

W. A. Webb, of Atlanta was delegated with this duty by the meeting of the Georgia-Florida division of the United Commercial Travelers, at Columbus recently. For the T. P. A., M. M. Anderson, also of Atlanta, chairman of the state legislative committee, was authorized to formulate such a bill by the last state convention at Albany.

Mr. Webb states that his bill will incorporate the safety and sanitary hotel regulations at present on the statute books and will provide in addition for the appointment of a state inspector, the salary and expense of the office to be derived by a license tax upon hotels.

The bill framed by Mr. Anderson will be modeled on the Nebraska hotel law, which has been found to operate very successfully. Both bills, however, will contain practically the same provisions, the main object of each being to have the office of state inspector created and the enforcement of the regulations thus assured.

The legislative committee of the Georgia Hotel Men's association, of which J. Lee Barnes is chairman, held a meeting yesterday at the Majestic hotel and discussed the proposed inspectorship bill. They will hold another meeting next Friday night, to which they have invited representatives of the traveling men. Mr. Barnes states that the hotel men will not oppose a reasonable hotel law, and that they have invited the traveling men's representatives to confer with them to see if a measure may not be agreed upon.

man I found him the maddest human being in forty-seven states.

"I didn't argue with him long, but put on a bold front and asked him to lead me to them, and offered to put up one of them for him. He snorted around, foamed at the mouth and offered to bet me $25 that I couldn't put up a single one of them with all the 'junk' my house had shipped him. I knew I could, and he knew I couldn't, so there we were. I didn't bet him, however, but shucked off my coat and collar and we went out to the warehouse.

THE TRY-OUT.

"He sat down on a nail keg while I pitched in. Everything went off all o. k. until I struck the main bolt for making the connection and then I found the trouble. It was absolutely necessary that this bolt be 4 1-2 inches long, but some workman around the factory, either from carelessness or ignorance, had put in bolts 4 1-2 inches long and they would not come through far enough for the nut to catch. Luckily he had in stock just the size bolt needed so I bought twenty-five from him at 2 cents each (about ten times what they were worth), set up every machine he had and sold four of them for him before I put my collar on again.

"He then put up the argument that it was none of his business to know that those bolts were too short, and that it was not his place to make substitutions after he had received the goods. I agreed with him on this, but convinced him by the arguments of his own customers that the piece of goods was some account, and in fact, the best of her kind on the market, and his subsequent orders for them and his good friendship toward both myself and my house afterward proved that I had fully satisfied him in such a manner as to keep him satisfied and established his complete confidence in both my house and their line. I have since changed houses, but this customer is still loyal to my former employers.

"Another thing we traveling men are too careless in is the making of promises unauthorized by the house. I'll admit that we are put in a trying position sometimes by the buyer asking for more than he expects to get, but if you have a bona fide honest proposition and are posted on what you have and what your competitors have, by putting on a little more steam and putting up a line of talk that you can believe yourself, you are not going to have to make any unreasonable promises. If you do have to make a promise to [illegible] you can't keep to get an order, take my advice and let the other fellow take that order, and maybe you'll save the 30 cents you'll have to pay for a want ad hunting another job spending somebody's expense money.

"The traveling salesman who is always on the square with his trade will soon gain their confidence and no matter what errors may be made by the house force, he is going to have a much easier time adjusting these differences than if he lets his anxiety to secure orders influence him into making promises which he knows are unauthorized by his house."

NOTHING BUT 'PHONE ORDERS NEXT WEEK

Jobbers Agree Not to Work Trade While City Men Are on Vacation

To the Retail Grocers and Butchers of Atlanta and Vicinity:

The city salesmen will be off on their annual excursion soon. They desire your co-operation to make this a success, we know you will lend to them the same help and co-operation to them the same help and co-operation they, the salesmen, have at all times shown the retailer.

This you can do by placing your orders before they go, and by telephoning any orders you may have during their absence.

We do not suppose any firm will be so selfish as to send out salesmen during the absence from the city of the other salesmen. But, if such firm should do so, co-operate with your friends by giving only telephone orders.

Trusting you will do all in your power to demonstrate the appreciation we know you feel for the City Salesmen's association, we beg to remain

Very truly yours,

O. T. CAMP, President.

J. P. EVE, Sec'y.

The week of June 27 to July 4 being the time selected for operating the annual excursion of the City Salesmen's association, we undersigned jobbers and manufacturers agree that our city salesmen shall have this week for their vacation and that none will be allowed to solicit the city trade during the time above mentioned.

Mrs. Anderson Writes of Gathering's Social Side

At the request of President Jesse W. Bates Mrs. W. F. Anderson, who was one of the prominent convention visitors, has written for The Journal Firing Line the following account of the many social features which helped to make Richmond convention such a big success.

Editor Firing Line: When President Bates asked me to say something about the entertainment for the ladies at the national convention in Richmond, my first thought was how will I condense? So many beautiful affairs were given us. On all sides were banners with these words: "Virginia welcomes you, Richmond greets you," and truly we soon felt quite at home.

Nearly all of our Georgia delegation arrived in Richmond Sunday morning and were comfortably and pleasantly located at Hotel Jefferson, one of the finest hotels in the south. Sunday was given over to resting, sight-seeing and an evening service at the Second Baptist church conducted by Mr. George Armstrong, of Philadelphia, our new national president.

Monday morning a committee of Richmond ladies were at the Jefferson to meet visiting ladies and Monday evening at eight there was a general reception at the Jefferson hotel where the ladies were presented with beautiful corsage bouquets. Informal speeches, dancing and delicious refreshments completing the evening. Tuesday morning at ten o'clock an automobile ride to places of interest in and around historic Richmond was given us, over one hundred machines in line, this ride terminating at 2:30 for a delicious five course luncheon at Sauer's extract plant, considered one of the most up-to-date factories of its kind in the world.

Tuesday evening we had the pleasure of hearing Polk Miller and his famous negro quartette at a roof garden party at Hotel Richmond. Wednesday morning, a trolley ride and luncheon at the Country club. Thursday morning all were glad to take the boat trip down the beautiful James river to Jamestown island, the scene of the earliest English settlement dating as far back as 1607. This trip was a delightful one in every way, and consumed the entire day. Friday closed the many pleasant affairs, with a beautiful card party and luncheon at Hotel Jefferson with a grand ball that night.

Georgia was well represented by the following ladies: Mrs. J. W. Bates, Mrs. C. W. Randall, Macon; Mrs. Albert Ehrlich, Mrs. Joe Lowenstein, Mrs. Maurice Meyer, Savnnh; Mrs. Morgan, Rome; Mrs. Marcellus Anderson, Mrs. W. F. Anderson, Atlanta.

We hope many more T. P. A. ladies will attend the convention next year in Houston, Texas, although there were more visiting ladies this year than in the past, two hundred and ninety-seven visiting ladies being present. These conventions are anticipated with pleasure by many, as they are indeed

Truly Pleasant Affairs.

Very truly yours,

MRS. W. F. ANDERSON.

D.-L.-R. CO. MOVES TO TEMPORARY QUARTERS

Will Be at 30-32 South Pryor Till New Building Is Finished

To allow work to begin at once on the converting of their old building on North Pryor street into stores and offices, the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, dry goods wholesalers, will move this week to 30-32 South Pryor street.

This will be their headquarters only temporarily, while awaiting completion of their new building at 30-32 South Pryor street, which is now in course of erection. The contractors agreement sets November 1 as the date their new home will be finished and ready for occupancy.

There will be ample room, however, for the big stock at the temporary quarters. The company expects to start moving tomorrow morning and have arranged to rush the job, so that the movement of their regular business will not be affected.

MANUFACTURERS' DINNER POSTPONED UNTIL JULY

On account of the absence from the city of Brooks Morgan, chairman of the manufacturers' committee of the chamber of commerce, the manufacturers' dinner will be postponed, which was to have been held on June 24 for the purpose of presenting to the manufacturers plans for securing a building for a permanent exhibit of Atlanta-made goods.

As soon as Mr. Morgan returns the date for the dinner will be reset for some time early in July.

SHOES LIKELY TO COST MORE RATHER THAN LESS

Head of Shoe Firm Says Demand for Hides Greater Than the Supply

In the following article written for the Firing Line, Edward G. Thomas, manager of the Rice & Hutchins Atlanta company, wholesale shoe dealers, discusses the leather market and the question, "Will shoes cost more or less?"

E. G. THOMAS.

The question, will shoes cost more, has not been satisfactorily answered. Will they cost less, can safely be met with an emphatic "NO."

The reasons for such belief are not hard to find. The answer is, the law of supply and demand. With the supply of beef cattle diminishing by millions of head, and the many new uses for leather increasing, together with the great increase in population demanding larger supplies for shoe factory purposes, prices of hides and leather naturally go soaring. Speculative manipulation of the leather market is almost entirely eliminated. Certainly the increase in cost of shoes cannot be attributed to that.

Tanners are undoubtedly compelled at present to pay the highest prices on record for raw material. Green hides are not leather by any means, and cost of production has steadily increased, although not in the same ratio as the raw material, which represents perhaps one-third of the cost of the finished product.

It was thought when the ad valorem import duty of 14 per cent on green salted hides was removed several years ago, that hides would be cheaper, but I have yet to find anyone who will say he ever got any part of this 14 per cent as his share of the profits or savings. Perhaps some of the large tanners did, but the shoe manufacturers and certainly the consumers have never gotten within hailing distance of the elusive benefits.

The price of leather, in the meantime, has steadily advanced. The amount of imported finished leather used for making shoes is very small, and cuts no figure.

Shoes appear high in price, and may be higher, because all materials entering into them have advanced in cost, and so far as leather is concerned, the visible supply is scarce.

Fabric shoes, such as cloth, velvet and satin, are in favor with shoe manufacturers, because while in some grades costing as much as leather, the material being a purely manufactured article, supplies are unlimited, and not dependent upon the natural growth of a living animal, as is the case with leather.

A mill can be built to turn out as many yards of cloth per month as the owners desire, but the animal from which the hide is taken must be given life, and time to grow, and while a way to make wooden nutmegs was once discovered, no way has ever been found to make a six months' old animal out of a one month old, except by natural growth.

REMEDY NOT NEAR AT HAND.

The remedy for what the consumer looks upon as an undesirable situation, does not seem near at hand. The tanner points to the stock man, and says, "Raise cattle, there's big money in it." The cattle man loudly proclaims concerning his handicap, as compared with former periods.

Undoubtedly, the western ranchers cannot make money as easily as formerly, and it is equally true that our southeastern states have at present distinct advantages over the western states as to cattle raising, if they would but step in and utilize their opportunity.

It does not require a prophet, or the son of a prophet, to foresee that with the growing trend of cattle no larger than of late, prices of stock will certainly remain high for quite a while to come. Wherever there is a steer, there is a hide, but not steer, no hide.

While it is true the larger per cent of raw hides and skins come from South America, and other foreign countries, the same conditions as to supply and demand exist. Statistics as to reserve supplies are pretty accurate, and yet our leather manufacturers have been hoping each season for a year or two, that the take off of hides would by some miracle, as it were, increase, but these hopes have failed.

The removal of the import duty on shoes, or "free shoes," as the popular phrase has it, seems to be assured. Whether this will have the effect of causing any reduction whatever in the price of shoes is extremely doubtful. The result may figure out like the removal of duty on hides, referred to above.

The facts seem to be that foreign manufacturers are ill prepared to take on American trade, and it will take time to equip their factories to meet American demands. In the meantime, our own manufacturers will have fully adjusted themselves to the situation, whatever it is, and will have it well in hand.

Compared to our large American factories, all foreign shoe factories are small, and it remains to be seen how interesting the American trade, with its frequently reasonable demands, will be to European manufacturers. The quick change of styles, so familiar to the American trade, is an unknown quantity to the European shoe manufacturers.

We are already exporting a great many millions in shoes annually, and the trade is increasing heavily, and on the other hand Europe finds it very difficult to interest American stores in European style shoes. There is no question but that America can beat the world on shoes.

It costs money to keep up the style, but the American public demand what they want, when they want it, and our shoe manufacturers come pretty near giving it to them.

The fact is, for a decade shoes have been sold for too little, in comparison to every other important line of merchandise, and are now simply priced in comparison, and in proportion to such other lines.

Shoes we must have, so let us pay the price and smile.

E. G. THOMAS.

BUSINESS CONCERNS NOW BUY MANY ART PRINTS TO ADORN THEIR OFFICE WALLS

L. W. Binder, of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, is shown seated in his office inspecting a shipment of pictures.

From the practical viewpoint of a dealer, with his comment based on sales records, L. W. Binder, of the Binder Frame Manufacturing company, indicts Atlanta as not up to most other cities in its appreciation of good pictures.

That picture sales in Atlanta are not as heavy as they should be for the population, though the demand seems to be growing, is what the dealer says of our art market.

"When the art museum becomes a reality it is going to stimulate interest in good pictures and Atlanta will likely after some years buy as many fine prints from us dealers as are sold in other cities. At present, however, sales are short of what they should be.

"The department store sales of popular prints which are sold from time to time should show two or three times the sales they have. I base this statement on results of such sales in other cities and not merely general opinion.

"I am not speaking only of sales on prints from the old masters. I mean the work of our American artists of the present, the 'popular' stuff.

"One good sign in the picture trade is the increasing number of orders from corporations for pictures for their offices. Orders are becoming frequent for enough selections of framed prints from large concerns to allow several pictures to every room, used either by employes or officials. We have an order from one large corporation for 600 framed pictures for their offices.

"One thing about the sales of pictures that would surprise many people is the large number of prints that are bought by negroes. These are mostly very cheap prints, of course, but the number sold makes it an important part of the business. Religious subjects are their favorite.

"Picture sales may not be as heavy here as in some cities, but the motto fad still thrives. If some business men had a good picture in place of every framed motto their office would be more attractive."

TENNESSEE IS GOOD ATLANTA TERRITORY

Levy Says It Would Pay Jobbers Here to Work That State More

Another traveler who works Tennessee and who has several years' first hand acquaintance with trade conditions there makes an appeal to Atlanta jobbers to consider working that territory more than is now being done. This is Albert Levy, traveler for the Rosenfeld company, just in from a trip through that section.

"The merchants up there give Atlanta salesmen a good hearing," says Mr. Levy, "and I see no reason why Atlanta houses in most any line cannot make it pay to work that state as close as they do the Carolinas. That they do not there is no doubt.

"The few Atlanta salesmen I meet on the road in Tennessee tell me they are doing well and I believe other concerns who are not sending men there are just overlooking an opportunity for some good business. Of course, there is the competition with Tennessee jobbers, but from my observation I believe the Atlanta houses can meet it."

The Rosenfeld salesman leaves Monday for a two months' trip through North and South Carolina and says he will be glad to be again where he will see Atlanta firling liners oftener.

MOTHER OF W. O. STAMPS DIED AT NEWNAN FRIDAY

Mrs. J. R. Stamps, mother of W. O. Stamps, died Friday at her home near Newnan, Ga. The funeral services were conducted yesterday morning at 10 o'clock. In addition to Mr. Stamps and his family, W. A. Quarles, W. S. Gaston, W. T. Culpepper, J. C. Owens, of Atlanta attended the funeral. The entire Firing Line circle sorrows with Mr. Stamps in his loss.

LEWIS LEAVES TUESDAY FOR SUPREME COUNCIL

Will Represent Georgia-Florida Division—Silver Jubilee to Be Celebrated

T. B. Lewis, with the Capital City Tobacco company, will leave Tuesday for Columbus, O., being one of the representatives from the Georgia-Florida grand council to attend the annual meeting of the supreme council, United Commercial Travelers.

This meeting marks the "silver anniversary" of this order, and is to be celebrated during this session with an elaborate program. The past year with the order of United Commercial Travelers has been one of the most successful in its history, and its members feel proud of the past and are ambitious for its future. The membership of the order now numbers 67,326. During the past year a gain in membership of 2,221 was recorded. The growth of the order is considered remarkable. Originating in the city of Columbus twenty-five years ago, with eight members, it enjoys the distinction of operating in every state in the Union and four provinces. It is the only secret organization composed of commercial travelers. To become a member, one year's experience as a traveling salesman prior to making application is one of the most important qualifications. It is the only order operating a "widows and orphans' fund." During its existence $564,348 has been paid to the widows and orphans of deceased members, and almost $4,000,000 has been paid out of the death and disability fund. It has today $600,000 in its reserve fund, making it one of the strongest of all orders.

Atlanta boasts of having two of the largest and livest councils in the southern states—Atlanta, No. 18, and Fulton, No. 505. Both councils are increasing in membership. At every meeting held new members are received, and considerable enthusiasm is shown.

ATLANTA FIRM SELLS BIG BILL TO DISTANT DEALER

Atlanta Market So Good, Attracts Customer Away From Other Jobbing Centers

Though his location is a town about 600 miles from Atlanta and in the heart of the territory of another jobbing center, a man who is starting again in the mercantile business after some years in another line, came to Atlanta last week to buy his entire opening bill.

The fact that he was a customer years ago of the house doubtless had its effect on his decision to buy so far from home, but the sale shows how the Atlanta jobbing houses stand with those who know from experience.

Ragan-Malone company was the jobbing house and the bill amounted to over $4,500. The freight rates from Atlanta will be considerably more than this merchant would have had to pay from two nearer cities' dry goods jobbers.

The Atlanta house is not only highly pleased with pulling trade from this distance, but also over reaching on this sale the highest figure for a single bill sold this season.

The new concern at Adairsville, Ga., Nolan & Jackson, seems to be getting started nicely, says J. O. Castleberry, of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine company, who was there last week.

R. A. Perryman, of the firm of Perryman Brothers, of Heflin, Ala., is in Atlanta for a short visit. He is a brother of R. J. Perryman, of the Atlanta wholesale house of Brown, Perryman & Greene company.

U. C. T. COUNCIL 18 HAD INTERESTING MEETING

Shackelford Sends Newsy Notes About Comings and Goings of Lodge Members

Editor Firing Line: Sam J. Jones delighted the last meeting of Council 18 with one of his interesting talks. The boys always warm up to Sam, and he always pays pays them for it with his logic.

W. A. Webb, senior counsellor of No. 18, is showing his merit as presiding officer. No. 18 will always be in good hands as long as we have such members as Brother Webb.

W. J. Elliott (the ladies' man) always makes himself useful after initiation by removing the paraphernalia.

J. P. Armstrong, the boy who has the smile and the grip of good cheer, was handing it around last meeting.

B. B. Barber was an interested listener to the debates.

G. A. Potter had some of his good stories to tell the boys.

R. L. Pennington was presented with a cuspidor of very large proportions, which was highly appreciated. He denies the use of tobacco, however.

J. A. Farnsworth, a chartered member, and as loyal as they make them, puts aside all pleasure and duty, when No. 18's meetings come. The U. C. T. are proud of Brother Farnsworth.

A. L. Brooks, past counsellor, can always be counted on to make the wool fly when he takes the stand on any question. However, Brother Brooks is generally on the right side.

U. L. Cox, junior counsellor, filled his chair last meeting. Brother Cox has been on a long business trip. The boys greeted popular U. L. with a rousing cheer.

W. D. Hart handles the members who are tardy and the members who do not attend with "gloves off." Give them some more, Brother Hart.

No. 18 gave Marvin Roberts and Homer C. Gober a trip through the mysteries of U. C. T.-ism. Brother Roberts balked at several landings, Brother Gober was a good subject.

All No. 18 mourns with the supreme council at the death of Brother Riley Newell Hull, supreme treasurer. He was a faithful U. C. T. and was signally honored by his fellow travelers.

Good-by, faithful servant; as you lived, you died—faithful at all times to duty.

Yours very truly,

H. D. SHACKLEFORD,
Press Committee U. C. T. No. 18.

FINE CORN CROP MEANS BIG SO. GA. PROSPERITY

Member of Wholesale Firm Makes Trip There and Is Highly Optimistic

There is a true ring to the optimism with which C. J. Williamson, of the Atlanta wholesale dry goods house of Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt company, talks of the crop prospects—which of course means also the business prospects in South Georgia.

There are few Atlanta business men as thoroughly familiar with conditions affecting the retail trade in the southern end of the state as Mr. Williamson, who has been making regular trips through that section for the last twenty-seven years and who has just recently finished several weeks traveling there.

Especially is he enthusiastic over the prospects for a fine corn crop. "I have never seen things looking better at this time of year with regard to the corn crop," says Mr. Williamson. "Not only are prospects good for this crop being far ahead of the recent short crops but if things go well the rest of the season it will be the largest crop in many years.

"They are giving over more and more land to corn in that section and the surplus crop of corn in future years is going to mean a great deal.

"The unusually large oat crop south Georgia has had this year has also helped business conditions a great deal. The merchants are all feeling pleased over the way the farmer is succeeding this year and expect south Georgia business to show its effects.

S. I. Bagwell, bookkeepr of the H. L. Singer company, is priding himself on the new private office which will be assigned to him in the Singer company's new building. L. B. Lesesne, the fat man of the Singer company, though suffering a good deal with the heat last week, was able to hand over some sizable orders.

SAMPLES AND SHIPMENTS

ON THE ROAD AND IN THE OFFICE WITH ATLANTA'S BUSY ARMY OF COMMERCIAL TRAVELERS

J. R. Banks is known as the telephone interpreter at the H. L. Singer company. Last week an order came in over the telephone, but no one seemed able to make it out. Both H. L. Singer and S. I. Bagwell failed, but Mr. Banks was able to dope out the message as soon as he put his ear to the receiver.

W. G. Backin, of the house force of Gramling-Spalding Shoe company, has just joined the list of vacationers.

J. J. Jones, South Carolina representative for the Liquid Carbonic company, is known to be still very much alive from a big deal he has just closed at Columbia and H. V. Haslett, of Atlanta, chipped in with a large fount deal at Savannah.

W. F. Spalding, vice president of the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company, will leave next Saturday for his regular trip to Boston to buy fall goods and will be away about ten days.

K. D. Brobston, East Georgia traveler for the John Deere Plow company, dropped in at headquarters Friday for the first time in a month and was in town over yesterday.

J. L. Riddick, the John Deere Plow company north Georgia salesman, would have no trouble explaining what a specialty salesmen is now. He has just finished a long round of his customers with two of the specialtiers in tow, though the specialty men would doubtless put it the other way around and say they had him in tow. They made several extensive auto trips over the territory and at the sales manager's office they say the trio did some good work.

To show how much ahead of their expectations the sales from the notion department of the Ragan-Malone company have been this season, Walter C. Barnwell, with that company, points to the fact that they have had to do additional buying recently totalling over $20,000 for goods needed for July shipment. Mr. Barnwell says his company's salesmen this season have been literally taking the "no" out of notions.

C. M. McCain, who works the city trade for Jones Bros. & Co., had an unusually successful week, on all lines of Jones pickle products.

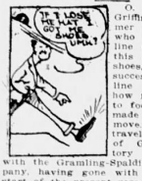
Moving and then some more moving is the order of the day at the H. L. Singer company, who are preparing to be fully established in their new building at Hunter and Haynes streets, by July 1. I. R. Banks, shipping clerk, is sending over car loads of the stock every day. H. L. Singer is looking after the business at the old place on Madison avenue while Joe Singer is superintending the work of installing the stock at the new place.

Gideon C. Jones, president of Jones Bros. & Co., is now at the Dexter Colo., plant. He expects to be in Atl nta about the middle of July.

G. A. Zellner, with the Huguley Oil company, is working South Carolina at present. This is his first time in the state for the company, his regular territory being south Georgia. He has, however, transferred permanently and will continue to cover south Georgia.

V. M. Hyatt, the John Silvey & Co. traveler, has been off the road and at his home in Atlanta quite ill for the last ten days. He is out again, however, and is feeling well enough to be out and after business again next week.

"Here's more dope about them road hops of ours," said the office boy of Atlanta Agricultural Works. "Gee! I'll be glad when them guys leave town. I don't do a thing but run around for that bunch and they don't a one of them fork over a copper. Say, can't you give a fellow a pass to the game?"



O. E. Reddy, of Griffin, Ga., the former hat salesman, who gave up that line and went out this season selling shoes, is making a success in his new line and showing how from headgear to footwear can be made an upward move. Mr. Reddy travels the Central of Georgia territory and is now with the Gramling-Spalding Shoe company, having gone with them at the start of the present season.

Frank S. Dean, vice president of Atlanta Agricultural Works, returned from a fishing trip Thursday. Frank hasn't opened up yet on his fish stories. When asked as to what luck he had, he merely smiles and says "Let the other fellows tell you."

Lawrence H. Moore, of Atlanta Agricultural Works, was all smiles this week. Lawrence says that the numerous favorable reports he is receiving from his territory is going to force him to get out earlier this summer than he intended.

J. E. Powell, secretary of Atlanta Agricultural Works, made a flying trip this week in the interest of his firm. Mr. Powell was fully initiated into the miseries of a traveling man. A train which he was to catch at 9:25 p. m. didn't come along until 3:20 the next morning. (Blue Ridge papers please copy.)

Jack W. Evans, of Atlanta Agricultural Works, was a caller at our office this week. When Jack comes in we always let up the windows, take off our coats and suspend business, for we know there is something coming.

William P. Anderson, of Atlanta, a prominent and popular member of the organization, was unanimously voted the most thoughtful husband enrolled in the T. P. A. Mr. Anderson was prevented by business from attending the convention but Friday Mrs. Anderson received by express a huge box of lovely flowers from her husband and the members of the Georgia delegation were emabled to wear boutonnieres at the concluding session as her gift. "To think," said a Georgian yesterday, "they have been married twenty-four years and are still sweethearts."—Richmond Virginian.

Clyde L. King, president of Atlanta Agricultural Works, has been absent from the city this week on business for his firm.

R. E. Dawson, traveler for Jones Brothers & Co., is now at Birmingham, where he sold last week a big car of assorted preserves and jellies.

E. F. Donehoo, city salesman of the H. L. Singer company, had a good week last week with the bakers and uptown restaurants.

Mrs. William Patrick Anderson, of Atlanta, Ga., was declared by ballot to be the handsomest lady visitor in attendance at th T. P. A. convention.—Richmond Virginian.

D. L. Cook, the Dahlonega, Ga., druggist, was in Atlanta for several days last week and called on his friends at the Lamar & Rankin Drug company.

T. B. Lewis, delegate to the national gathering at Columbus, Ohio, of the U. C. T., will make a move that the delegates in 1915 to the supreme council visit the San Francisco exposition in a body after the regular meeting at Columbus is ended.

E. L. Adams, of the E. L. Adams company will return Monday from Cincinnati where he attended the meeting of the National Association of Credit Men.

T. J. Moore, of the Consolidated Paper company, spent last week in New York on business.

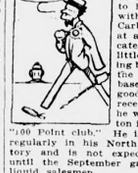
Doc Westbrooke, of the E. L. Adams company was ill last week but was able to be at the office Saturday. G. B. McDowell who has been recuperating at Indian Springs has returned much improved though not yet entirely well.

Mr. Gilmore, traveler for the E. L. Adams company, reports that the crop outlook is bright in middle Georgia, though hail storms last Thursday in the territory around Florida, he says, did some damage to cotton. Generally, he states, cotton has recovered from the recent cold spell and is looking fine.

C. S. Harley, South Carolina traveler for the Consolidated Paper company was at headquarters Saturday. E. E. Shyer of this company is away on an extensive trip through Alabama.

W. S. Jones, who is just in from a trip through South Georgia and Florida for the A. M. Robinson company, says the merchants down that way all seem to be much interested in the August convention and that there will be a big lot of them coming from his territory.

W. A. Haley, who sells hats for the Brown, Perryman & Greene Co., up in the corner of Georgia and Alabama, is here for several days for his first visit since April.



R. D. Latta continues to add fat orders from his accounts to his sales record with the Liquid Carbonic company at a rate that indicates he will have little trouble "making bogey" even with the bogey score based on his own good record for the recent quarter when he won a silver button in the company's "100 Point club." He is pegging away regularly in his North Carolina territory and is not expected in Atlanta until the September gathering of the liquid salesmen.

L. C. Miller, of Jones Brothers & Co., got some dandy orders at Griffin, Ga., last week.

B. R. Pennington, in for the week-end at the Ragan-Malone company, was feeling pretty good yesterday for he has just finished the best week he has had this year.

W. B. Carlton, of the Capitol City Tobacco company, will make a trip this week through the territory of T. B. Lewis during the latter's absence.

H. H. Ware, manager for the Liquid Carbonic company, has sold the Nunnally company a handsome thirty-foot fount for their place at Memphis, Tenn.

J. F. Feibelman, manager of the branch in Atlanta of B. F. Avery & Sons, will leave Tuesday to attend a meeting of the company's branch office managers at the headquarters at Louisville.

W. T. Stapler, the Carolina salesman for B. F. Avery & Sons, has been working mostly as a specialty salesman recently, though his name indicates the character of his regular line. He is featuring the new adjustable plow of the company and having a successful season with it.

E. E. Huguley, of the Huguley Oil company, has just finished another of his auto trips through south Georgia. He was much impressed with the prospects for a big fall business in all lines down that way.

E. F. Malone, of the Capital City Tobacco company, laid aside his office cares yesterday and made a trip in his auto to a number of nearby points for "keep in touch" calls on some of the customers.

J. F. Tate, the Brown, Perryman & Green Co. traveler, who is thinking of a brief outing in the mountains, says when he goes he will carry his sample trunks, and thus make the house pay his railroad expense. An expense account is certainly a handy thing to have around.

A number of traveling men of the Dougherty-Little-Redwine Co. will spend this week in Atlanta, to help the house force in the work of moving the stock to South Pryor street. W. F. Seay says that J. O. Castleberry will boss the job, though the younger men will take an active hand in the real work of moving. These two and A. M. Wilkins and J. M. McKibben are already here.

S. R. Dufford, the South Carolina salesman for the J. K. Orr Shoe company, is in his first season with this company, but is already making himself a strong factor in their sales force. He has been on the road selling shoes for other concerns for several years, however, though not before in his present territory.

G. A. Zellner will be back in his regular territory this week—south Georgia. He has been doing some special work recently in South Carolina for his concern, the Huguley Oil company.

Rockwell Johnson, with the J. K. Orr Shoe company, forgot Red Seal shoes long enough to play best man at a wedding at Cartersville the other day.

There is quite a coterie of salesmen in for the week-end at the Ridley-Williamson-Wyatt Co.: C. Cheek, R. V. McWhorter, J. L. Yates and F. W. Webb are all here.

W. E. Parks, the Capital City Tobacco company's city man, who has been sick for several weeks, will be back among his friends of the city trade this week. He was down at the company's offices yesterday and is looking quite himself again.

N. F. Cannon, secretary and treasurer; J. W. Cannon, assistant manager, and J. W. Murphy, of the sales force of the Atlanta Casket company, attended the meeting of the Georgia Funeral Directrs' asscIatin at Griffin Thursday.

JEWELERS' FILINGS PROVE SOURCE OF BIG INCOME

Amount of Business Done Can Be Judged From Monthly Filing Sales

The value of the filings gathered in the work rooms of a jewelry manufacturing concern such as the Vollmer Manufacturing company, in the Moore building, are a good index to the volume of business done by the company and the figures on this item from the jewelry shop are interesting.

One hundred and fifty dollars to $200 each month is received from the refining company for the dust of gold and other precious metals from the Vollmer company. These filings are gathered from the trays at the workmen's benches, and from every other conceivable place about the shop where they could gather.

No spot is overlooked that might harbor some of the filings. While the greatest amount collects in the trays mentioned, which are placed for this purpose, the other sources yield a neat sum.

When the work room is swept instead of the trash going into the janitor's sack it is packed into a barrel and saved. When several barrels full of this rubbish have been stored up they are shipped to the refiner's who proves very clearly that it is not all rubbish.

Under the basin where the workmen wash their hands is an arrangement of two barrels through which passes all the water before it reaches the drain pipes. Filings collect in the bottom of one of these barrels to the value of about $50 a year.

Several centuries ago a man who made the rounds of the jewelry workshops in London and offered to do the janitor's work for nothing made a fortune before the jewelers woke up and sold their filings themselves.

In some shops now the precautions to save filings are even more extensive than at the Vollmer place but there is very little that is lost there.

Two hundred dollars worth of filings a month is one of the best answers this company can make to the question of "How's business?"

TRUITT DELIGHTED OVER SOUTH GEORGIA OUTLOOK

Alfred Truitt, of the Ward-Truitt company, is delighted over the business outlook in South Georgia because of the crops.

"The big oat crop, the big shipments going out now of watermelons and cantaloupes and the fine corn crop in prospect all have everybody down that way feeling mighty good," says he.

Peach Crop Is Short, but Other Fruits Will Be Plentiful—Immense Quantities of Vegetables Are Canned, Girls' Canning Clubs Are Factors in Increased Demand for Jars

Almost half as long as fruit jars have been on the market the Dobbs & Wey Co., have been the big southern distributors.

The company's salesmen have just finished their "fruit jar season" the time when they feature this article more than any other of their line. The string of carloads of fruit jars which are shipped out from Atlanta would surprise the average salesman in any line. Their sales on this item show that this specialize.

E. L. Kerrison is one of the special specializers of the fruit jar specialty season. He has finished the season with sales beyond his expectations. He gives credit for his sales to the quality of his line and the reputation of his house but those who know him know what a part his own salesmanship ability has played in his sales.

All of Dobbs & Wey salesman have had a season's sales that means there will be an immense amount of fruit preserved and canned through these southeastern states this summer. This is the thirty-first year of the company with this line and the sales have grown more during the last few years than at any other period during that time.

The many "canning schools" which are teaching girls the preserving art are boosting the fruit jar business wonderfully and it is partly to this cause that Mr. Kerrison and his brother salesmen are coming to welcome their "fruit jar" trips as one of the best of the year.

HOW SALESMEN CAN HELP THE CREDIT MAN

Head of Credit Department of Big Firm Gives Some Practical Suggestions

Editor Firing Line:

Co-operation, as we all know, is one of the fundamental principles of success, in partnerships or corporations. Success of the firm or company carries with it a corresponding measure of success to each individual identified therewith. The traveling man's success hinges in a measure upon the success of his house. The success of his house is based largely upon sound credits, the salesman and the credit man are important factors in achieving success for any concern, and their individual interests thus become identified and mutual.

L. T. STALLINGS

How can the traveling salesman help the credit man? The opening word of this article furnishes the keynote—co-operation.

The traveling salesman should be interested in sound credits—hardly less so than the credit man, since at the end of the year the salesman's real worth to his house is estimated by the amount of profitable business he has turned in. In determining the amount of this profitable business, the losses in his territory are taken into account. The credit man is seeking to hold these losses down to a minimum. Co-operate with your credit man.

The traveling salesman ought to be concerned in the matter of collections. They are of vital importance to his house. The interest of his house, and his own interest, should be one. A customer who pays even a part of his account is almost sure to give an order along with the check. A good payer is usually a safe buyer, and a regular customer. Don't get "cold feet" when it comes to asking your customer for money, for if the money is there and you don't get it, the other fellow will. If your customer is behind with your house, and offers this reason for not placing a norder, nine times out of ten, some other salesman is getting his orders and check, too. Get the check and you will get his trade. The credit man knows this and is working for that very thing. Co-operate with your credit man.

VALUABLE INFORMATION.

If your customer is a man of limited means, dependent on the profits of his business to meet his obligations, find out all you can about him and his business, and give the information to your credit man. Does your customer do the buying himself or does he leave it to his clerks? If he take them in detail—your customer first. How does he stand in the estimation of his own townspeople? What about his habits? Is he extravagant in any way, or intemperate? Is he much about his place of business, and has he bought an automobile? Mind you, we are talking about the man of limited means. Your credit man is seeking to know these things, and he ought to know them, for these bits of information are the straws that show which way the wind blows. Co-operate with your credit man.

How about your customer's business? Is this stock carefully selected? Is it rightly assorted? Is it in good condition and tastefully displayed? Is his store kept clean, and is he keeping pace with the and wide-awake salesman can often be of more value in securing just the information his house needs, than all other sources combined. Your credit man knows this, and is looking to you for help. Co-operate with your credit man.

The end of the fiscal year is coming, the yearly balance sheet will be struck and from the gross profits of your house will be deducted the items of expense and bad debts. The net balance will show the measure of prosperity. The smaller the amount under the bad debt column the larger will be figures under "prosperity." Your credit man is thinking about this prosperity column every day in the week (and Sunday, too). Co-operate with your credit man.

BRANNON VISITS SALTING PLANT AT ELLENWOOD

"I made a visit last Sunday," said S. E. Brannon, secretary and treasurer of Jones Brothers & Co., pickle manufacturers. "to Ellenwood, Ga., where our company has 160 acres in cucumbers. The plants are doing splendidly and already the young cucumbers are beginning to form on the vines. Big big tanks for our salting station there are being made here at our plant and will be shipped to Ellenwood and installed within the next week or so. We expect great results from our Georgia raised pickles."

HAWKES GLASSES
HAWKES GLASSES
RELIABLE GLASSES
MODERATE PRICES

Surely everybody knows that a reliable and satisfactory pair of glasses is dependent on the skill and experience of the person making the examination, and that the price is controlled by the lens formulae (kind of lens required) and the style of the frames or mountings. Even though your circumstances are such that the price is of great consideration to you, the correct lenses should be of very first importance. We cannot imagine any better way to offer you our superior optical service (without seeming to boast) than to say we have served the public safely and satisfactorily for fifty years. There is no better recommendation in the world than the word of your friends who say: "I have tried them and my glasss are perfectly satisfactory." As to the price of glasses, we can give you an elaborate, heavy, solid gold frame mounted with the finest lenses, or if you wish, the best lenses in a substantial, plain aluminum frame at a very moderate figure. Above all things, let us caution you—don't risk a pair of cheap glasses. Your eyes are too precious and cheap glasses are the height of false economy. We will take pleasure in talking the matter over with you. We respectfully solicit your patronage and favor—but first ask your friends about us.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

WHILE no formal announcement of the approaching marriage of Miss Harriette Cole and Mr. Rogers Keese, the engagement has been generally known to the friends of the young couple. The wedding will be an event of this week taking place Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. H. Dunwoody Cole.

The pretty bride-elect is a debutante of the past winter and is universally popular with the members of the younger set.

Mr. Keese is one of the best known and most cordially liked of the younger clubmen and is identified with the firm of E. V. Haynes & Co.

Dr. George Yarbrough, an uncle of the bride, who has officiated at the marriages of four generations of the family, will perform the ceremony and the attendants will be an interesting group of young people including Miss Elizabeth Cole, maid of honor, and Miss Sophie Daves, Atwood and James Howard Cole.

Mr. Roy Dorsey will be the groom's best man.

The wedding centers a wide social interest and will be a beautiful event of the week.

SATURDAY Mrs. John Marshall Slaton, the new chatelaine of the state official's home, will take charge of the executive mansion. She will move into the mansion on the day of the inaugural, and within the week following she and Governor Slaton will give a large reception to the legislative assembly and their friends. If the weather permits the reception will be al fresco, and extensive preparations are being made for a beautiful and enjoyable event.

Under Mrs. Slaton there will be a number of social entertainments at the mansion. Both the governor and Mrs. Slaton are very popular throughout the state and are widely known for their hospitality. Mrs. Slaton has the graciousness and social charm so pleasing in the "first lady of the state," and as mistress of the mansion will be a most delightful hostess.

Governor and Mrs. Brown will vacate the mansion several days before the inaugural. During their residence there they have dispensed pleasant hospitality and have been the center of a charming social life, which will continue, as their Marietta home is not far enough away to let Atlantians feel that their loss is a permanent one.

THE OPENING of the roof garden at the Capital City club has been the reason of numbers of delightful supper parties during the past week. Summer is changed to spring on the top of the club and the closing of the ladies' cafe has brought all the members to the roof for dinner and supper.

The flower boxes and growing plants which add to the attractiveness of the garden are filled with gay blooms, and beyond the stone wall there is the most fascinating view of star-filled skies and the lights of the tall office buildings of the town.

The terrace at the Piedmont club during tea hour, the broad porch of the Capital City club's country home at Brookhaven for belated golfers and motorists, and the roof garden for the busy man and the girl who joins him for dinner, are three of the most delightful meeting places for Atlanta clubmen and their friends, with, last but not least, the porches of the East Lake club for members of the Athletic club and their guests.

Oliver-Ellis

The wedding of Miss Eloise Oliver and Mr. Frampton Ellis, which will take place on June 30, at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. John Oliver, will be an event of much social interest.

Miss Mary Brown will be maid of honor and Mrs. William Hansell Rhett will be matron. Miss Carolyn King, Miss Lula Dean Jones and Miss Susie Hallman will be bridesmaids.

Lieutenant Edward King will be best man.

Rev. R. O. Flynn will perform the ceremony, which will be followed by a reception.

To Miss Reynolds

Josephine Smith will entertain at a theater party Monday afternoon at the Forsyth in honor of Miss Catherine Reynolds, of Birmingham, the guest of Miss Elizabeth Hawkins.

Only Miss Reynolds' immediate friends have been invited for the occasion, the party to include Miss Pattie McGhee, Miss Carrie Blount, Miss Elizabeth Anderson, Miss Blanche Devine, Miss Grace Bloodworth, Miss May Crichton and Miss Elizabeth Hawkins.

To Miss Thrall

Mrs. Frank Farley, Jr., was hostess at tea Saturday afternoon at the Piedmont club in compliment to Miss Jane Thrall, of Williamsport, who is the guest of Mrs. A. W. Hill.

Mrs. Farley received her guests wearing with a dainty gown of lingerie, a black picture hat ornamented with a paradise feather.

To Mr. and Mrs. Robertson

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spain entertained Saturday evening in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Harry Robertson, of Charleston.

Sweet peas in varying shades lent their pretty color to the rooms, the blossoms being attractively arranged in bowls and vases.

The party included Mr. and Mrs. Robertson, Mr. and Mrs. Chesley Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Parker, Mr. and Mrs. Selden Jones, Dr. and Mrs. P. H. Meil, Mr. and Mrs. Waddey Thompson, Mrs. Lyman Hall, Mrs. William Jennings, Mrs. Isabelle Hair, Miss Anna Holmes, Mrs. C. L. Pettigrew, Mrs. John Harrison, Mrs. Arthur Locke and Mr. Elliott Jennings.

Mrs. Moody's Guests

The matinee tea at which Mrs. Joseph Moody will entertain will be a pretty compliment to Miss Eloise Oliver, whose marriage to Mr. Frampton Ellis will be an event of the month.

Tea at the Capital City club will follow the matinee, Mrs. Moody's guests to include Miss Lula Dean Jones, Miss Susie Hallman, Miss Caroline King and Mrs. E. P. King, Jr.

A RECENT GUEST AT WHITE HOUSE

MISS MARJORIE BROWN.

Miss Brown is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward T. Brown and has just returned from Washington, D. C, where she spent the past week as the guest of President and Mrs Woodrow Wilson and the Misses Wilson at the White House. Miss Brown is one of the loveliest and most attractive young women of Atlanta, and was a charming representative of the south at the nation's capital.

Mobley-Redwine Wedding Plans

Miss Pearl Mobley and Mr. Isaac Redwine will be married on Wednesday evening, June 25, at the bride's home, on Capitol avenue.

The ceremony will be performed by Rev. O. M. Eakes.

Miss Lillian Brooks will be maid of honor and Mr. W. D. Redwine will be his brother's attendant.

An informal reception will follow the ceremony.

To Miss Hairston

Mrs. Ira Emmett Wilcox entertained with a miscellaneous shower Saturday afternoon in compliment to Miss Lollie Belle Hairston, a bride-to-be.

The decorations for the house were in yellow and white, nasturtiums and daisies being used.

Sixteen guests were present.

Miss Jones' Receiving Party To Miss Buckner

An event of Tuesday afternoon will be the tea at which Miss Helen Jones will be hostess from 5 to 7 at her home in Inman Park, in compliment to her guest, Miss Margaret Buckner, of Roanoke, Va.

Assisting Miss Jones in receiving will be Miss Clifford West, Margaret Morbach, Aurelia Speer, Annie Laurie Robinson, Helen Thorn, Pearl Wilkinson, of San Antonio, Tex.; Nellie Kisor Stewart, Mignon McCarty, Annie Laurie Robinson and Mrs. Henry Porter.

Bree-Ferrell

CARTERSVILLE

CARTERSVILLE—The past week has been given over to parties and "showers" for a popular bride-elect, Miss Lillie Harris, whose marriage Thursday evening to Mr. James Moore Reese was a brilliant culmination to all this round of gaiety.

Misses Rebecca Knight and Mamie Irish gave the initial affair at the home of the former. This was a miscellaneous shower and many lovely and useful gifts were received.

Friday afternoon Mrs. Horace Foster entertained twelve young women in honor of Miss Harris, and at the conclusion of a sewing party, the crowd had a merry time, cutting the cake for the magic symbols.

Monday afternoon Miss Emily Reeves, the maid of honor, entertained for Miss Harris. There were forty guests invited. The house was decorated in sweet peas and nasturtiums. Sherbet and sweet wafers were served and afterwards the bride was "showered" with dozens of dainty handkerchiefs.

Tuesday evening Dr. and Mrs. A. B. Green gave a bunco-dice party for the bridal party and several friends. Their pretty home was attractively arranged for the occasion. The prizes were won by Miss Rebecca Knight and Mr. Troy Patterson. Miss Harris was presented with a lovely automobile veil.

Wednesday evening, after the rehearsal at the church, the wedding party gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Renfroe and delicious refreshments were served.

Among the out-of-town visitors enjoying these festivities were Miss Kathleen Moore, of Birmingham, and Miss Georgia Crane, of Atlanta.

Miss May Fleming, who has been the attractive guest of her sister, Mrs. J. R. Whitaker, has returned to her home.

Miss Alice Crouch is in Atlanta, visiting her sister, Mrs. Will Cowan.

Miss Frances White, of the younger social set, left Monday for a visit to Miss Gladys Granelle, of Savannah.

Mrs. Walter Baldwin and young son, of Madison, are in the city for a month's stay with Mrs. Baldwin's parents, Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Irwin.

Harris-Reeves

CARTERSVILLE—One of the most beautiful events in the social history of Cartersville was the wedding of Miss Lillie Harris and Mr. James Moore Reeves, of Atlanta, which was solemnized Thursday evening in the Sam Jones Memorial church. The stately edifice with itsold ivory woodwork and deep tinted walls made a beautiful setting for the bridal decoration of palms, ferns and ascension lilies.

The space reserved for the wedding party was marked off with tall white pedestals, crowned with vases of the lilies. Prior to the ceremony, a musical program was delightfully rendered by Mr. Paul Hudnutt on the violin, accompanied by Mrs. G. H. Aubrey, whose skillful touch brought out the beautiful chords of the wedding march.

The officiating ministers were the bride's pastor, Rev. J. H. Patton, pastor of the Presbyterian church, of Marietta, and Rev. W. T. Hunnicutt, the pastor of the Sam Jones Memorial church.

The ushers were Messrs. L. W. Reeves, of Cartersville, H. P. Reeves, of Chattanooga, A. S. Reeves, of Selma, and W. J. Ham, of Cartersville.

The groomsmen were Messrs. James Scott, James McNeilley, John Brice and Reid Whitaker, of Atlanta.

The bridesmaids were Misses Rebecca Knight, Nannie Irick, Nonie Burnside, of Thomson, and Marion Mosely, of Lavonia. They wore lovely gowns of white chiffon cloth draped in pink charmeuse, and carried pink carnations.

The maid of honor, Miss Emily Reeves, entered alone. She made a charming figure in a gown of pink messaline chiffon, and carried a shower bouquet of pink and white sweet peas.

The bride entered with her maid of honor, Miss Emily Reeves, who wore a gown of pink crepe de chine, and carried a shower bouquet of pink sweet peas.

The youthful bride was never more charming than in her wedding gown. It was of ivory charmeuse, braided in lilies, with a garniture of seed pearls, and rare laces, and the snowy veil of tulle completely enveloped the petite figure. Her only ornament was a necklace with diamond and pearl pendant, the gift of the groom. She carried a shower bouquet of valley lilies.

The groom with his best man, Mr. Rockwell Johnson, of Atlanta, awaited the bride at the chancel, and as the solemn ceremony was impressively read, many hearts grew tender with loving wishes for the fair young woman who has been a general favorite with all circles in our little city. After the ceremony a brilliant reception was given by Mr. and Mrs. Harris at their handsome home on Market street.

The bride received her guests, and the decorations of pink and white were carried out in many exquisite effects.

Mrs. Harris was gowned in gray crepe de chine, and with her stood her sisters, Mrs. Jessie McGarity, of Atlanta, Mrs. J. H. Patton, of Marietta.

Assisting in receiving the guests were Mesdames A. H. Greene, H. R. Maxwell, R. H. Renfroe, W. W. Daves, L. W. Reeves, A. Levy, of Rome, and Misses Jessie Wilkie, Ian Neel, Sara Ellis, Myrtice Adair, Ruby N. Lumpkin and Jessie Daves assisted in serving the guests with the dainty ices and cakes which carried out color scheme of pink and white. Dispensing punch during the evening were Misses Lizzie Harvey, Mary Hill Jolly and

DALTON

DALTON.—Mr. and Mrs. Julian McCamy were delightful hosts on Tuesday evening when they entertained in honor of Major and Mrs. T. S. Lucas. The house was attractive with its quantities of daisies and ferns. The dining table had for its center a basket filled with ferns and daisies.

Punch was served by Mrs. T. L. Shelton, of Washington, D. C. After the game, an ice course was served at the small tables.

Mrs. Frank Manly made top score and carried off the trophies of the evening.

Miss Laura Black entertained at bridge on Wednesday evening complimenting Miss Inez Rich, of Atlanta, who is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Horantto.

Miss Lula Smith has as her guests Miss Willie Sue Almond, of Social Circle; Miss Annie Neely Irwin, of Cedartown, and Misses Helen and Katie Linticum, of Birmingham.

Mrs. W. H. Cameron entertained the Governor John Milledge chapter D. A. R. at her home on Delridge street Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. H. J. Herron entertained her bridge club at her home on King street Thursday afternoon. Old-fashioned garden flowers formed the pretty decorations throughout the house. Bridge was played at four tables followed by a delicious salad course.

Miss Marion McCamy entertained twenty-six friends of the younger set at a heart-dice party on Friday evening.

Mrs. John Berry, of Atlanta, is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. T. A. Berry.

Dr. and Mrs. Jane McAfee spent the week-end in Atlanta.

Miss Maude McDaniel has returned from Atlanta.

Mr. and Mrs. W. D. King spent the week-end in Rome.

Miss Mary Hunt, of Calhoun, is the guest of Mrs. J. Burrell.

Miss Marie Hollingsworth has returned from Marietta, where she was delightfully entertained at the guest of Miss Rosa Willingham.

Mr. and Mrs. Sam A. Scott, of Atlanta, are Mrs. Lizzie Cartwright, of Birmingham, spent the week-end as the guests of Colonel and Mrs. Paul H. Trammell.

Mrs. Howard Mobley, of Oakland, Cal., is the guest of Mrs. J. S. Thomas.

Miss Julia McDavid has returned from Birmingham.

Canton Social News

CANTON—The wedding of Miss Chra Bedelle and Mrs. Jesse Dean Perkinson, of Woodstock, took place at the Canton Methodist church on Wednesday.

On Friday afternoon Mrs. Roy Crisler was hostess at a delightful domino party in compliment to Miss Bedelle and Mrs. Hamilton Cox, of Duckport, La. The guest list included Mrs. Arthur Heard, Mrs. Homer Conn, Mrs. Charles Darnell; Mrs. Roy Coggins, Atlanta; Mrs. John Rymer, Dublin; Mrs. Mary White, Mrs. Jesse McLain, Mrs. Green Johnston, Mrs. Zebulon Walker, Miss Sallie Kennette, Miss May Jones, Miss Agnes DuPree, Miss Anne Teasley, Mrs. Clarence Perry, Mrs. Douglas McAfee, Miss Pearl McAfee, Miss Margaret Coggins, Miss Daisy Crisler, Miss Bedelle, Mrs. Cox, Miss Rose Garrison.

At her home on Main street, on Saturday, Mrs. Charles Darnell gave a lovely "42" party in compliment to Miss Agnes DuPre.

Another delightful party of the week was given on Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. T. W. Hogan.

Tallapoosa Social News

TALLAPOOSA—One of the most enjoyable social functions of the season occurred on last Thursday evening when Mr. Harold Heard entertained the younger society set at an "All-Fresh" party as a compliment to his cousin, Miss Katherine Camp, of Atlanta. Several enjoyable games were indulged in, after which a delicious course was served.

A pleasure was given to the college set on Tuesday evening when Miss Reble Smith entertained for them at her home at the Gold Mines. The home was elaborately decorated throughout with daisies and ferns and a flower contest furnished much amusement for the young people. During the evening Miss Margaret Bradley, of Columbus, won the prize, a box of candy. Mrs. Stephens assisted Miss Smith in entertaining. About forty guests were present.

Miss Ettie Mitnick entertained very informally on Tuesday evening at a "Progressive Yinko Party" at her home on Bondois street. After several games, a tempting course was served.

Sara Patton, of Marietta.

At 10 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Reeves left for their wedding journey. The bride wore a fetching traveling suit of blue with hat to match.

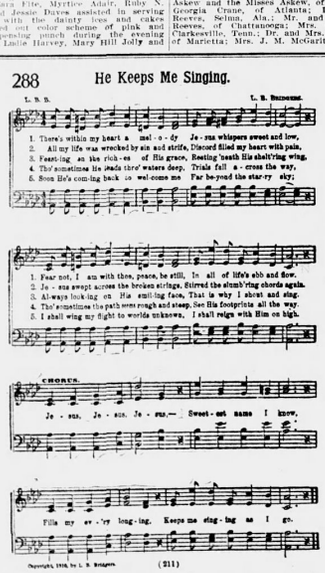
Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Reeves will be at home in the Corinthian apartments, Atlanta.

Among the many beautiful gifts received were a chest of silver from the groom's family, one from the office force of the Northwestern Insurance company, a silver service from the official board of North Rome Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Reeves is a deacon and a dinner set of gold and white china from the bride's parents.

Among the prominent out of town guests were Mrs. Harry Clark, of New York; Mrs. S. H. Askew and the Misses Askew, of Atlanta; Miss Georgia Crane, of Atlanta; Dr. and Mrs. Reeves, Selma, Ala.; Mr. and Mrs. Horace Reeves, of Chattanooga; Mrs. C. H. Smith, Clarksville, Tenn.; Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Patton, of Marietta; Mrs. J. M. McGarity, of Atlanta.

288 He Keeps Me Singing.

L. B. B. L. B. Bridgers.



Copyright, 1910, by L. B. Bridgers. (211)

This beautiful hymn, familiarly known to hundreds of our Sunday Schools, has within the last three years sung its way around the world.

Mr. L. B. Bridgers, of Atlanta, an evangelist of national reputation, is its author.

Mr. Charlie Tillman has issued a Piano Variation of this hymn, composed and arranged by Chas. Astin, who is well known as a composer and teacher of music.

In arrangement, the introduction is suggestive of the theme, which is applicable to church services where pianos are used; then follows an interlude which may be appropriately introduced in any of the church songs.

At this point the arrangement is characteristic of the piano only—a brilliant variation in the same key is followed by a variation in five flats, and is a perfect imitation of a high-grade music box.

Every precaution has been taken to preserve the simple sweetness and dignity of this beautiful Gospel message which comes from the soul of a man who, under fearful trials, can still say: "I know that my Redeemer lives, for He keeps me singing as I go."

9--15--25---The Magic 3 in Laces & Embroideries

There's luck in threes—extra good luck for Monday. For under the three prices of 9c—15c—25c—we group laces and embroideries often worth three times more than present prices. Here's what:

9c

15c to 30c Embroideries, 9c—All broken sets of narrow embroideries. Edges and insertings. 3 to 6 inches.

15c to 25c Val Laces, 9c—French Calais, Normandy and Point de Paris Vals in edges and insertings from 1 1-2 to 4 inches.

15c

25c to 40c Colored Embroideries, 15c—White Swiss grounds with hemstitched or scalloped colored embroidery edges. Black and about all colors. 3 to 7 inches.

25c to 50c Embroideries, 15c—Odds and ends of Swiss insertings and bands; some with galloons and straight edge bands. 2 1-2 to 4 inches.

25c

39c to 75c Shadow Laces, 25c—Charming patterns in the popular allover shadow laces. 18 and 45 inches wide—think of 45-inch allover shadow laces for 25c.

49c to 75c Embroidery Flouncings, 25c—Broken lines of 27-inch Swiss flouncings in charming patterns of blind, shadow and eyelet embroidery.

(Laces, Main Floor, Right Aisle.)

Madame Grace Corsets for Summer Gowns

Women who make a study of correct lines and the corsets which produce them—are usually devotees of the Madame Grace.

For they have learned that the Madame Grace "gloves" the figure so smoothly that when a woman is gowned there are no ugly lines to show where the corset begins and ends.

Comfort is an essential of the Madame Grace. Its devotees acquire poise and a graceful carriage, yet are scarcely conscious of wearing a corset. Madame Grace corsets for summer are developed in beautiful and flexible materials. $3.50 to $25.

(Corsets, Second Floor.)

Brassieres Are Needed

Brassieres keep the sharp lines of the corset from showing through; keep everything neat and trim underneath. Prices start at 50c for cambric embroidery trimmed and climb little steps to $7.50—the better kinds being made of all-over lace or hand embroidered linens.

A $10 Hat Sale

Formerly $15 to $25

Twenty-seven hats formerly $15, $17.50, $18.50, $20 and $25, will leave here Monday at $10. Some of them are pattern hats brought on for the Mid-Summer Opening; some are copies of Paris hats; some are the creations of our own artists, just recently down from the work rooms.

Splendid $3 Mesh Bags $1.95

Today we have 150 of these splendid German Silver Mesh Bags. Tomorrow at the closing bell we should have not one. Their maker is angling for our account. He threw out this bag as "bait." We snapped up 150 of them—don't know whether we'll be able to get any more at the price.

Made in popular and ever serviceable unbreakable mesh. Narrow frame neatly engraved. Long link soldered chain handle. Bottom of bag trimmed with ball and cone fringe. 6-inch size. Only $1.95.

N. B.—To this lot we have added some bags from regular stock that are slightly shop worn. Formerly $3 to $5. Tomorrow at $1.95.

A PROMINENT TENNESSEAN

MISS ARMSTRONG is president of the Tennessee Woman's Press and Author's club, which will meet this week at its club house at Bloomington Springs. She is editor of the Lookout which is published at Chattanooga, and which is a magazine of southern society. At the recent Confederate reunion Miss Armstrong was maid of honor for the south. She is one of the cleverest and most attractive young women of the state and the honors that have come to her have been won by a personality and mentality which make her a notable figure in southern newspaper and social life. The club of which she is president includes one of the most prominent women in the world of letters, Mrs. Corra Harris and Mrs. John P. Oliver being the vice presidents with Mrs. Emma L. Scott, Mrs. J. A. Epperson and Miss Laura Thornburg as the other officers.

MISS ZELLA ARMSTRONG, OF CHATTANOOGA.

Dinner Dance Closes Tennis Tournament at Piedmont Club

Saturday evening the terrace at the Piedmont club presented an unusually attractive appearance with its flower-laden tables.

While no formal parties were given a large number were present, who dined in small congenial parties and who afterward attended the dance, which proved a pleasant close to the evening.

A party dining together included Mr. and Mrs. Charles Selple, Mr. and Mrs. William F. Spalding, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas H. Daniel and Mr. and Mrs. James T. Williams.

At another table were Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Sisson, Mr. and Mrs. Carleton Y. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin S. Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Dargan, Dr. and Mrs. Willis Westmoreland and Mr. Milton Dargan, Jr., dined together.

Others entertaining small parties were Captain and Mrs. Grayson Heidt, General and Mrs. Robert Evans, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Nunnally, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Inman, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. DeGive, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Black, Dr. and Mrs. Charles Remsen, Dr. and Mrs. Leroy Childs, Mr. Lucius McCleskey, Mr. E. T. Lamb, Mr. Jesse Draper, Mr. Jackson Dick, Mr. H. M. Scott, Mr. Edward R. Austin, Mr. C. N. Ninninger, Mr. J. O. Harris, Mr. Dozier Lowndes and Mr. Louis Carhart.

Club Dance

One of the enjoyable events of the week was the dance given by the boys of the "Tuter Set" club in honor of the girls.

Those dancing were Miss Lois Carrol, Miss Elizabeth Tinsley, of Louisville; Miss Adelaide Calloway, Miss Fat Wyche, of Montgomery; Miss Mary Anderson, Miss Marie Kitchen, Miss Katherine Darby, Miss Margaret Bramlet, Miss Sadie Bearden, Miss Frances Flemister, Miss Mary Frances Bowden, Miss Irene Bearden, Miss Margaret Jester, Mr. Ernest Allen, Mr. Mercer Lee, Mr. Alvin Lovingood, Mr. Clarence Troth, Mr. Alonzo Stroble, Dr. Matt Wheeler, Mr. Harry Morris, Mr. Pope Franklin, Mr. Dick Elkin, Mr. R. C. W. Ramspeck, Mr. L. P. Dalhouse, Mr. Paul Turner, Mr. W. E. Close and Mr. E. W. Lively.

The chaperons were Mrs. J. Q. Bowden and Mrs. O'Brien.

Abernathy-Barrett

The marriage of Miss Grace Abernathy and Mr. Edgar Barrett took place Saturday morning at ten o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. R. I. Abernathy in West End.

The wedding was a very quiet one and witnessed only by the immediate family and intimate friends.

After a wedding trip of several weeks, Mr. and Mrs. Barrett will be at home at 133 Peeples street in West End.

Garden Party at Mrs. Slaton's Home

It is very appropriate that Mrs. John Marshall Slaton should have granted the use of her beautiful lawn to Atlanta chapter, D. A. R., for a garden party, for she is charter member of the chapter, one of its ten distinguished exregents, and a woman who is broadly interested in patriotic work. At the time the chapter was organized she was the only young girl in it. During her administration as regent the chapter held its meetings in Craigie house, the Massachusetts building in Piedmont park. At the last state conference (D. A. R.) held in Augusta, Mrs. Slaton took a prominent part in the opening exercises. Her response for the state society to the welcome extended by the regent of the hostess chapter of the hostess city was as felicitous in style and expression as to charm all present.

The garden party will occur on Wednesday afternoon, June 25, from 5 until 7 o'clock.

The scene will no doubt be a gay and beautiful one, with Nature's ideal setting in all of its June freshness, and the picturesque Elizabethan house as a background suggesting the English afternoon social events some of us have enjoyed on our visits and travels, and others, in our reading.

The social season is dull; the club season has closed; the "Woman's Edition" is out—therefore our prominent women are at comparative leisure now, and all will welcome the opportunity for social diversion, for a "vacation" parting with friends; for relaxation in the "open."

Mrs. Slaton and Mrs. Grant, her mother, will be assisted in receiving and entertaining the visitors by all the ex-regents and the board of management of the chapter, and by numbers of social chairmen among the friends of the chapter.

In addition, a large number of young ladies and girls will be present to contribute their part to the success of the occasion.

A cordial invitation to be present is extended to the public, including particularly gentlemen, members of other local chapters and those of nearby towns who could reach their homes after the party in a comfortable way and at a convenient hour.

The convenient location and social and artistic inducements of the occasion will rival an auto run out Peachtree road with the Country club stop, which is the daily habit of many.

Cooling drinks and suitable refreshments will be served. Wurm's orchestra will play throughout the afternoon, and several noted artists, Madame Yorsten, Miss Mary Wyatt Lovelace and Mr. Willifred Watters will sing.

Pimples and Blemishes? You Can Quickly and Easily Get Rid of Them!

Secrets That Have Made Valeska Suratt the Famous, Self-Made Beauty-Actress of America

By Valeska Suratt

ONE pimple tells just as much of the condition of the blood as a hundred would. Once they begin, they repeat themselves over and over again. The use of blood tonics is common, but it must be remembered that most of these "tonics" are nothing more nor less than "system" tonics. What one needs is a thorough blood cleanser. To show the remarkable efficacy of the blood cleanser I give you here. I have seen innumerable cases where young and middle-aged women had been afflicted for years with these troublesome outbreaks, and after using many of the tonics publicly recommended, had used this with complete success inside of a month's time.

I have never seen a return of the trouble after its use. It is very simple, absolutely safe, and wonderfully efficacious.

Dissolve twelve ounces of granulated sugar in one-half pint of water, add one ounce of sarsene, and mix the whole together thoroughly, then add more water to make one pint. Sarsene is a liquid which you can get at the drug store by the ounce. Get it in the original package. Take one or two teaspoonfuls of this mixture three or four times a day, with a little water if desired.

• • •

CAROLINE G.—No, the bust cannot be developed safely in a lasting way by the use of mechanical contrivances. They are furthermore dangerous.

This is the formula, try it. In a half pint of cold water, dissolve two ounces ruetone and half a cup of sugar, all well mixed together. Of this take two teaspoonfuls three or four times a day in a wine-glass of water, after your meals. The ruetone will cost you one dollar at the drug store.

• • •

POOR ATTEMPT.—For superfluous hair, light or heavy, and even on the tenderest skin, this is superb and dissolves hair almost like magic.

Get one ounce of simple sulfo solution. This you can get at the drug store for one dollar. Apply it with the finger tips to the superfluous hair, keeping the hair moist with it for two or three minutes until it has been dissolved. Then wipe it off with a damp cloth and wash the skin.

• • •

First wash the face with hot water and soap. Then sprinkle some neroxin generously on a sponge made wet with hot water. Then rub well for a few minutes on the parts of the skin which are affected with blackheads. You should be able to secure the neroxin at any druggists for fifty cents. Never pinch or squeeze out blackheads.

• • •

MRS. A. M.—The skin can be made as pure and milky white as the petal of a rose, and the hands and arms as well, with every freckle and spot gone

Add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine. Keep stirring while adding one ounce of sintone, until it is all dissolved. Then let it cool. If the cream is too thick to easily flow from a bottle, thin it down a little with more hot water. The cream will be white and satiny. Hold a wet, hot towel to the face several times for several minutes. Rub this cream on the entire face. Then wipe off with a soft dry cloth. Then apply again and let it dry on the face. Repeat this again at night. Any good druggist will let you have sintone for about fifty cents.

• • •

MAUD N.—Bald spots can be made to fill out and the hair grow wonderfully in a short time by the following formula. It will also positively stop the hair from falling out.

Mix half a pint of alcohol with half a pint of water. To this add one ounce of beta-quinol. Shake thoroughly, and then it will be ready to use. If you prefer, you can use imported bay rum instead of the water and alcohol. The beta-quinol you can get at almost any drug store for not more than fifty cents. This formula should be applied very freely to the scalp after brushing it generously for a few minutes all over. Rub the tonic thoroughly into the scalp with the finger tips.

• • •

Never omit the use of a shampoo. Never use soap on the hair. Egrol, which you can get at any drug store for twenty-five cents, is unsurpassed in its action in ridding the scalp of every particle of scurf and foreign matter.

• • •

RUTH D.—A difference of 5 or 10 years can be made in your appearance by the use of this formula. It rejuvenates the skin wonderfully, removing it in a really astounding way all wrinkles, deep lines, crows' feet and sagging of cheeks.

For all these the following formula is absolutely unequalled: Pour half a pint of hot water in a bowl and place the bowl in a pan of water over a slow fire. To this add two ounces of eptol. Stir until it is dissolved and starts to cream. Then remove from the fire, slowly add two tablespoonfuls of glycerine, and continue to stir until it is cold. Eptol may be obtained for no more than fifty cents at any good drug store. This cream should be applied very liberally and thoroughly rubbed into the skin until it has disappeared. The cream will not grow hair on the face. Keep the cream in an air-tight jar or bottle.—(Advt.)

WEDDINGS

King-Camp

One of the prettiest of recent weddings was that of Miss Mattie Camp and Mr. Alexander Stephens King, which occurred at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. J. T. Lassiter, Jr., at 8 o'clock Thursday evening.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Joiner, pastor of the Hapeville Methodist church.

The decorations of the home were beautiful. They consisted of southern smilax and daisies.

To the first strains of the wedding march, which was rendered by Mrs. Lassiter, the bridal party marched down the long hall, the first to appear being the little flower girls, Elizabeth Camp and Ethel Lassiter. They wore lovely lingerie dresses with blue ribbons, and carried armfuls of Killarney roses.

Next came the maid of honor, Miss Louise Dunlap, and the best man, Mr. Howell Smith.

The maid of honor was unusually lovely in an exquisite gown of white edging combined with shadow lace. She carried pink roses.

Next came the bride and groom. The bride wore a Copenhagen blue coat suit with a suggestion of Bulgarian embroidery introduced in the trimmings. Her smart coat opened over a cluny waist draped in blue chiffon. Her hat was a model of blue hemp with an ostrich feather shading from orange to blue. She wore bride roses.

Among the out-of-town guests present were Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hardy and Miss Ruth Hardy, of Stovall; Miss Bessie Camp, Mrs. Lizzie Hall Camp, Miss Rebecca Camp, Miss Elizabeth Camp, of Moreland; Miss Louise Dunlap, of Chipley; Mrs. William Anglin, of Chicago; Mr. and Mrs. E. R. King, of Fort Gaines; Miss Willie Ivy, and Miss Adeline Ivy, of Tennille, and Miss Julia King, of Milledgeville.

Mr. and Mrs. King left for a stay of several weeks at Atlantic Beach.

Hudson-Medlock

A wedding of unusual interest was that of Miss Helen Clare Medlock and Mr. John Henry Hudson, of Savannah, which occurred at the Tattnall Square Baptist church, Macon, Tuesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

The beautiful ring ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. R. C. Granberry, assisted by Dr. John G. Harmon, of Mercer University.

The church was artistically decorated with ferns, southern smilax and hydrangeas. Before the arrival of the bridal party, Miss Julia Carstarphen sang a solo, accompanied by Miss Thelma Faust, on the violin.

To the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march rendered by Miss Elizabeth Warren, the bridal party entered as follows: First, down each center aisle came Mr. J. Will Barnett and Mr. Harley Jackson Ballew, followed by Miss Edith Robertson, of Dublin, Ga., and Miss Mabel Ford, of Jacksonville, Fla. Immediately preceding the bride came her sister, Miss Marion Medlock, maid of honor.

The bride entered on the arm of her brother, Mr. J. Wallace Medlock, of Jacksonville, and was met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Mr. Tom Fort Sellers.

The bridesmaids were gowned in white silk ratine, with touches of pink, and wore white picture hats trimmed in pink, and they carried bouquets of pink gladioli. The maid of honor was dressed in pink silk ratine with trimmings of cluny lace, and pink charmeuse with which she wore a white hat trimmed in pink roses, and she carried Killarney roses.

The bride wore a suit of Copenhagen blue, with hat to match, with touches of pink, and she carried a shower bouquet of brides' roses and valley lilies. She wore a handsome LaVallere of diamonds and pearls, a gift of the groom.

Immediately after the ceremony the bride and groom left for their home in Savannah.

Mr. Hudson is a graduate of Mercer university, having been president of the class of '12. For the past year he has been a popular professor at the Norman Institute, Norman Park, Ga.

Mrs. Hudson is a talented musician, having graduated in piano and also having been a member of the choir of the Tattnall Square Baptist church.

Many handsome presents were received by this popular couple, among which was some silver that was a wedding present of the bride's grandmother, fifty-seven years ago.

Laine-Depuy

An interesting event of the past week was the weddingof Miss Mary E. Laine to Mr. Frank J. Depuy, formerly of Atlanta, now of Colorado Springs, Colo., which took place at the Central Congregatoinal church, Wednesday last at high noon.

The church was decorated by the Ladies union and Christian Endeavor society with palms and daisies.

The bride entered on the arm of her father, Mr. George W. Laine, to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. E. E. Eagan.

The bride's gown was of cream mull combined with a piece of hand embroidery brought years ago from a Mexican convent to form part of her mother's wedding trousseau. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of Richmond roses and lilies of the valley.

Mr. C. A. Depuy, brother of the groom, was the best man and Rev. Parker W. Fisher, cousin of the bride, performed the ceremony.

Mr. George W. Laine, Jr., and Mr. Gordon W. Donaldson were the ushers.

Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Depuy, of Boston, Mass., and Rev. and Mrs. Parker W. Fisher, of Leburn Ky. Mr. and Mrs. Deuy were the recipients of fany handsome gifts. They will make their home in Colorado Springs, Colo., after the 15th of July.

Gains-Culpepper

Miss Minnie Lou Culpepper and Dr. Cecil Dean Gains were married on June 18, at the First Presbyterian church of Ensley, Ala. The ceremony took place at 9 o'clock, Rev. Boyd, of the Methodist church officiating.

The strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Mrs. A. G. Reynolds, announced the bridal party's entrance.

The bride was attended by Miss Roberta Russell, Miss Bertha Bullard, Miss McLemore Supple and Miss Ella Shumate.

The maids wore white lace dresses over pink and carried baskets of pink and white sweet peas.

Mrs. W. D. Shumate, a sister of the bride, was matron, and wore white crepe de chine, trimmed with point lace. She carried an arm cluster of pink sweet peas.

The ushers were Mr. Harry Elliott and Mr. Berry; the groomsmen, Dr. Goode, Dr. Hann, Dr. Varren, Dr. Harls, Dr. Cleaveland Seay.

To Keep Skin White, Velvety, Wrinkle-Free

(Aunt Sally in Woman's Realm.)

C. M. W. says: "My neck is so discolored from wearing high collars I cannot dress decollete. What do you advise?" The treatment recommended is "Anise" will doubtless overcome this condition.

A. F. G. asks: "What should I do for crow's-feet and for wrinkles at the mouth corners?" Try a wash lotion made by dissolving 1 oz. powdered saxolite in 1-2-pt. witch hazel. This is immediately effective in any wrinkled condition. Use daily for awhile and results will astonish you.

Anise: A simple way to keep your skin smooth, soft and white is to apply ordinary mercolized wax before retiring, washing it off in the morning. This keeps the face free from the particles of lifeless cuticle which constantly appear. The wax absorbs these wornout particles, so the younger, fresher, healthier skin is always in view. An ounce of mercolized wax may be had at small cost at any drug store. Use like cold cream.—(Advt.)

WEDDINGS

Dunn-Toole

A beautiful wedding of much interest to many friends was that of Miss Martha Toole and Mr. Wilbur Dunn, of Kansas City, which took place at the home of the bride on Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock.

While the guests were assembling, Miss Frances Faust accompanied by Miss Thelma Faust on the violin rendered lovely music and Mrs. F. E. Dennis accompanied by Miss Faust played Mendlessohn's wedding march for the bridal party.

Attending the bride was her sister, Miss Ruth Toole, maid of honor, and Mr. Roscoe McCormick, of Peoria, Ill., who acted as best man to the groom.

The wedding was one of exceptional beauty in every detail. In the living room, where the ceremony took place a pink and white color scheme was successfully carried out a profusion of amaryllis lilies and carnations being used. The altar before which the bridal party stood was formed of graceful southern smilax and stately palms.

The dining room, where the bridal party was seated was particularly attractive with its decorations of carnations and ferns.

On the veranda, profusely decorated with ferns, palms and pink and white oleanders, fruit punch was served by Miss Lucile Kelsall, and Miss Laura Gerig, of Charleston, S. C.

The bride wore a traveling suit of blue eponge with hat to match, and carried an exquisite shower bouquet of brides roses and valley lilies. The maid of honor was gowned in white crepe de chine with pearl trimmings, and carried lilies tied with long bows of green tulle.

Mr. and Mrs. Dunn left immediately for points of interest in several states, and after July first will be at home to their friends in Kansas City, Mo.

The out-of-town guests atending the wedding were Mrs. Helen A. Dunn and Mr. and Mrs. Roscoe McCormick, and Master McCormick, of Peoria, Ill.; Mrs. Clara B. Celger, of St. Petersburg, Fla.; Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Thompson, of Bonaire, Ga.; Mrs. Stewart Bryant, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Bryant, Mrs. H. E. Talton, and Misses Fay and Lucy Talton, Miss Clara Howard, and Mr. Redding Talton, of Kathleen, Ga.; Mrs. Arthur Toole and Miss Julia Ernest, of Dublin, Ga.; Mrs. Laura Fester, of Milledgeville; Miss Laura Gerig, of Charleston, S. C.; Miss Sara McDowell, of Valdosta, Ga., and Mr. J. Ernest Toole, of Albany.

Jester-Hatcher

Miss Laura Belle Jester and Mr. J. Lawrence Hatcher were married Wednesday evening at half past seven o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. M. A. Jester.

The bride wore a lacy lingerie gown with white ribbons.

Mrs. Alfred Harbour and Miss Pat Wyche served punch during the evening.

LeBaron-Hamrick

Of interest to a large circle of friends was the wedding of Miss Jessie Decalvo Hamrick and Mr. Durward Arthur LeBaron which took place on June 14, at the home of Dr. S. R. Belk in West End.

The only attendant was Miss Pearl Pitt.

Mr. and Mrs. LeBaron will make their future home in Macon.

Mallory-Torrey

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Lorraine Mallary, of Macon, announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Janet, and Rev. Reuben Torrey, of Northfield, Mass., the marriage to take place this Tuesday at the Mallary home in Vineville.

Gibson-Thompson

The wedding of Miss Julia Thompson and Mr. Count D. Gibson took place Wednesday morning, June 18, at 11 o'clock at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. P. Thompson, of Covington.

The beautiful home was artistically decorated with pink and white sweet peas, ferns and smilax.

During the ceremony the bride and groom stood under an arch of smilax in the entrance to the open parlors. Rev. John B. Gordon was the officiating minister.

No invitations were issued, only members of the immediate families being present.

Later they expect to make an extensive western tour.

Wilson-Daniell

A pretty wedding of the past week was that of Miss Vera Belle Daniel and Mr. Homer Leon Wilson, on Thursday afternoon at Collins Memorial church. The ceremony took place at 5 o'clock. Mrs. Gordon Stowers sang, accompanied on the piano by Miss Millie Laughry, after which the bridal party entered to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march played by Miss Maggie Moore. Rev. W. H. Clark performed the ceremony during which Miss Moore played "Traumeri."

The church was very beautifully decorated in smilax and magnolias.

The maid of honor, Miss Bertha Hudson, and the bride's maid, Miss Reggie Sue Daniell, wore pink messaline draped with chiffon. Large hats to match, and pink and white sweet peas were worn.

The best man was Mr. Sidney Daniell, and the ushers were Mr. Cole Whittaker and Mr. Jamie Hudson.

The out-of-town guests were Miss Lois Clements, of Culloden, and Miss Lucile Wilson, of Marietta.

Hebrew Sunday Schools Hold Picnic

The annual picnic of the Hebrew Sunday schools took place last Thursday morning at Grant park. Six hundred children joined in a day of merry frolic including fishing, baseball and football games.

Mr. M. Lichtenstein, the superintendent of the Alliance Sunday school, and Mr. M. Sheinbaum, the superintendent of Ahayathzion Sunday school and an able corps of teachers had charge of the games.

Dr. T. Loeb, the principal of the Hebrew school, assisted by Dr. L. Holtz and Mr. Friedson had charge of the festivities from the time the first merry-maker reached the park in the morning until all had departed at twilight, there was no pause in the fun and enjoyment.

Punch and ice cream and cake were served to the children by the ladies of the Hebrew Educational Auxiliary society.

Mrs. Sarah Buchman, Mrs. L. Zion, Mrs. Mollie Hirsowitz, Mrs. Josephs, Mrs. Shurman, Mrs. Kline and Mrs. Silverman.

Afternoon Tea

One of the many affairs given for Miss Mary Mashburn and Miss Loretta Trennor, two brides-elect of this month, was the tea at which Miss Ethel Millican entertained for them and their attendants on Thursday afternoon at the Georgian Terrace.

The table was decorated with smilax and flowers, the centerpiece being a rustic basket filled with roses and corn flowers.

The souvenirs for the brides were minature bride's bouquets. The other guests received miniature corsage bouquets.

The guests included Miss Mashburn, Miss Trennor, Miss Leila Powell, Miss Anne Skinner, Miss Millican, Misses Lillian and Kate Bellingrath, Mrs. Wofford Felton Edwards, Mrs. Tracy Newton, Mrs. John Grice, Mrs. Jack Salmon and Miss Genevieve Sewell.

Benefit Recital

A recital to which the public is invited will be given Monday evening, June 23, at 8:15 o'clock by Miss Carmen Werber at the Georgia Avenue Presbyterian church, Georgia avenue and Grant street.

The recital is given under the auspices of Miss Werber's Sunday school class for the benefit of the manse fund. No admission will be charged, but a free-will offering will be taken.

Children's Party

Mrs. Emil Dittler entertained at a lovely party on Tuesday at her home on Washington street, in honor of little Louise Lissaner, of New York, and Alex Dittler, Jr.

About fifty children were present.

Games were played and refreshments were served during the afternoon.

Prizes were won by Marion Pinkussohn, Louise Weilhouse, Janette Samuels and Walter Wolf.

Luncheon to Visitors

A large and beautiful reception of the week was given by Mrs. Howard Dobbs at her home in West End, in compliment to her sister, Mrs. E. M. Bass, of Carrollton, and Mrs. Robert M. Hopkins.

The entire lower floor was open to the guests, the large porches and reception rooms were elaborately decorated with ferns and palms and garden flowers. The drawing room, where the party stood to receive their friends, was a bour of ferns and cape jasmine. Unshaded tapers burned on the mantle and cabinets.

Punch was served by Miss Theadosia Willingham, Miss Marian Morgan and Miss Willie Loyless. The music room, where an orchestra played delightful music during the calling hours, was also fragrant with blossoms.

Mrs. Dobbs wore a handsome gown of cream lace over pink.

Those assisting in entertaining were: Mrs. A. L. Coffee, Mrs. W. A. Hartman, Mrs. W. K. Jenkins, Mrs. Dobbs, of Powder Springs; Mrs. W. B. Disbro, Mrs. W. A. THE WEEK IN RETROSPECT

THE initial event of the week in which a cordial interest centered was the marriage Monday evening of Miss Charles Owens to Mr. Edward Buckingham Hall, of Morristown, N. J. Two distinctive features marked the wedding, the flowers chosen for the decorations and the group of young people who acted, not as ribbon or ring-bearers, but as real attendants, the little girls, Theodore Owens and Harriet Shemake, cousins of the bride, entering on the arm of their young escorts, Donovan and John S. Owens, Jr., brothers of the bride.

The young women wore the daintiest of hand-made frocks and carried little bouquets of the chosen flowers set in stiff old-fashioned lace paper holders. The young men wore long trousers with their well cut black coats and Eton collars.

Except for the Bermuda lilies and lilies of the valley used on the altar and prie dieu, the flowers throughout the house were field blossoms, combining the white and gold of daisies, the scarlet of poppies and the vivid sky tints of cornflowers with a further touch of color in sprays of snap dragons and their slipper-shaped red and yellow blooms.

The maid of honor, Miss Marion Goldsmith, carried the same lovely flowers, which were in delightful harmony with the Dresden gown she wore, a quaint creation in flowered chiffon over petticoats of white accordion plaited chiffon.

A suggestion of the flowered roadsides was given to the bride's bouquet by the shell pink of wild roses, the delicate petals circling the stamens of gold and fringed about with a shower of lilies of the valley.

UNIQUELY beautiful, and characterized by a number of artistic innovations, was the wedding of Miss Ruth Tribble and Mr. Samuel Kenny Dick, which took place Thursday evening in Athens.

The softly beautiful twilight hour was chosen for the church ceremonial, and a distinctive simplicity marked the details of the wedding. In striking contrast to the usually profuse wedding decorations was the adornment of the church.

Only two tall silver floor vases, filled with white lilies and placed on either side of the white altar, broke the fresh greeness of many palms and ferns, and the simple setting threw into lovely prominence the bridal party.

In the dusk, after the wedding at the church, the guests repaired to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Tribble, where they entered into the brilliantly illuminated gardens. A hedge of spruce and pine set about the lawn enclosed it, and rendered it private. Many lights contributed to the beauty to the picturesque scene, and showed the garden flowers and plants which formed natural adornment.

Indoors all the rooms were filled with flowers and so naturally artistic were the arrangements that the interior seemed but a lovely continuation of the outdoor scene.

The bride is a young woman of much charm and piquant loveliness. She is known and admired throughout the state and in Washington, where she has spent much time since her father's assumption of congressional duties.

Mr. Dick is prominently identified with the social life of Atlanta and Athens, and has many friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Dick will make their home at the Summer on their return from their wedding trip.

THE Piedmont club has been thronged each afternoon of the week with groups of enthusiastic spectators who gathered on the wide verandas to watch the tennis tournament, which has been an interesting feature of the week. While the participants have been mostly well known tennis players among the men, enthusiasm has run high among the devotees of the game. Tennis teas have been a feature of the week, tea being served on the terrace at the close of the game and followed by the usual informal dance. Friday afternoon Mrs. W. C. Hall and Mr. Carlton Smith played against Miss Stanton, of California, and Mr. Nat Thornton.

Among those present at the game and the dance which followed were Miss Bessie Woodward, Miss Emily Winship, Miss Caroline Muse, Miss Esther Smith, Miss Lottie Peck Wyly, Miss Helen Hawkins, Miss Gladys Le Vin and Miss Passie May Ottley; Mr. Ernest Ottley, Mr. Eugene Haynes, Mr. Arthur Clarke, Mr. Prince Webster, Mr. Edward Gay and Mr. Burton Clarke.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lincoln Gately entertained a number of guests at a prettily appointed table on the terrace, Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Gray being the honor guests. The party was completed by Mr. and Mrs. Doughty Manley, Mr. and Mrs. Ten Eyck Brown, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Smith, Miss Agnes Gray and Mr. Theodore Smith.

Dr. and Mrs. John W. Somerville, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Callaway, Mrs. Harvey Johnson, Mrs. George Perrigo, of Chicago, and Mrs. St. Julian Ravenel, of New York, were together.

Among others watching the tennis players from the lawn or having tea on the terrace were Mr. and Mrs. Victor Smith, Mr. and Mrs. Alex Smith, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Albert Thornton, Mr. and Mrs. George Howard, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Weyman, Mr. and Mrs. Louis Gholstin, Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence May, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Barnett, Mr. and Mrs. Macon Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Nash Broyles, Judge and Mrs. Don Pardee, Mr. and Mrs. Walnesby, and Mr. and Mrs. Howard, of New York.

THE question of schools is already being discussed by parents and the question of the boy, always a difficult one, has been decided satisfactorily by a number of Atlantians. Wednesday, a date which has been eagerly anticipated by the lucky youngsters, will see the departure of a group of boys in charge of Mr. James Moore to spend the summer at Greenbrier camp.

At the camp the boys live in the open, wearing track suits for the most part, and at other times the khaki of the boy scout. Half the time is spent on and in the river that runs like a street by the tent houses and in the background rise the Virginia hills.

Leaving with Mr. Moore this year will be Harry Stearns, John S. Cohen, Jr., Jack Kontz, John McRae, John Hopkins, Allen Whittaker, Robert Whittaker, Edgar Dunlap, Jr., Joseph McCord, Clifford Hatcher, Jr., and Edward Newell.

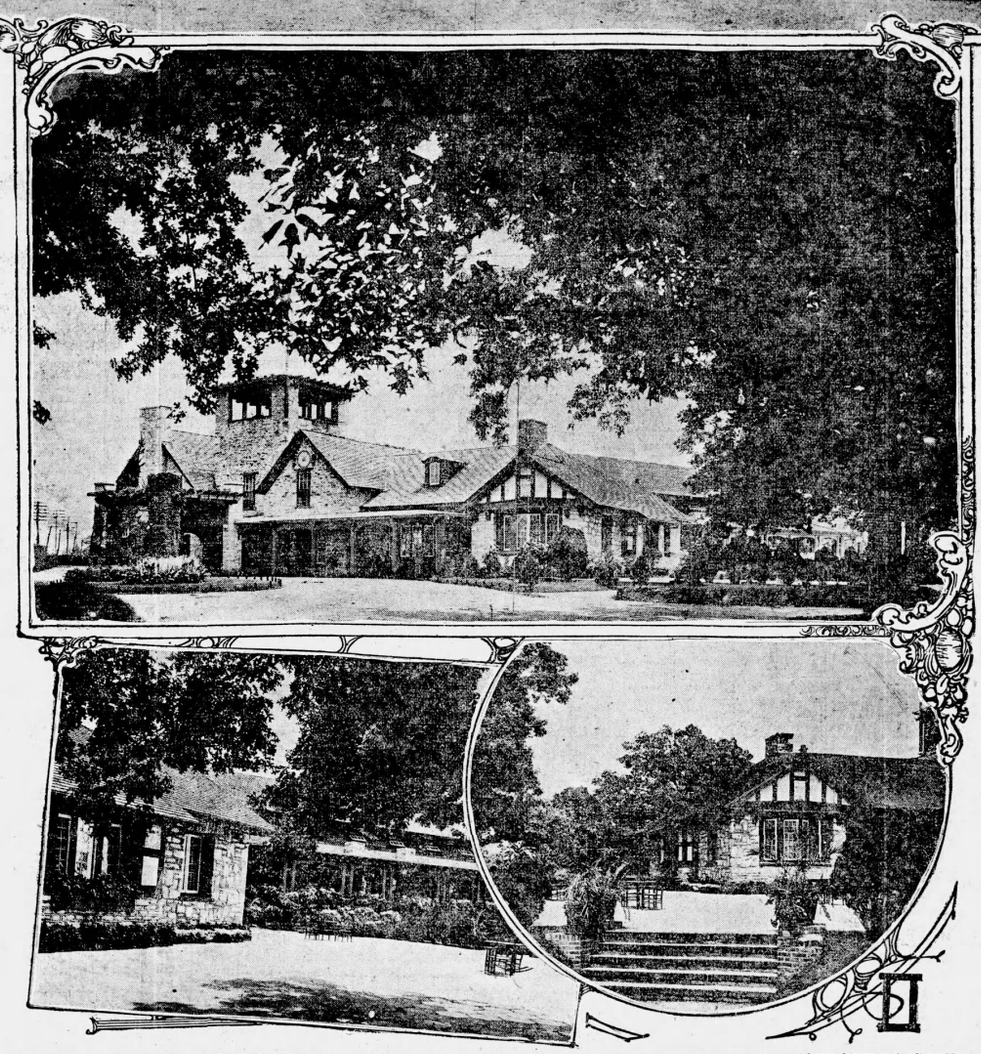
DR. THOMAS S. BAKER, one of the leading educators of the day, was the honor guest at a very delightful supper party Wednesday evening at which Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson entertained.

Pink and white sweet peas added to the attractiveness of the beautifully appointed table, the same colors being carried out in the minor details.

Dr. Baker is director of the Tome school for boys and the guests invited to meet him were a number of those interested in the school, including Mr. and Mrs. George McKenzie, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Brandon, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Cohen, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Inman, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Kiser, Mr. and Mrs. Linton Hopkins, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Weyman and Mrs. Howard Bell.



The above pictures are interesting views of Atlanta's oldest country club, which years ago began its career as a tiny stone house where numbers of horse lovers met after rides and drives through the then country roads adjacent to the club. The horse shows which, until the past two years, were annual events, had their inspiration at the Driving club, and it has been the scene of some of the most beautiful entertaining of the city, all of Atlanta's famous visitors having been the honor guest at some function at the club. At its spring meeting this year, which is the formal opening for the after-winter season in Atlanta's social life, the name of the club was changed, the word Driving being dropped, the club to be called simply the Piedmont club.

The club officers are: President, Mr. J. H. Nunnally; vice president, Mr. Brooks Morgan; board of governors, Mr. Jack Spalding, Mr. George C. Walters, Mr. Jesse Draper, Mr. John S. Cohen and Mr. Preston Arkwright.

Under Mr. Nunnally's regime the ball room has been built, the big porch added to it later as the happiest of afterthoughts, and the New York room enlarged and two rooms made of it instead of one. The material additions are one thing, but of even more importance are the social features which have been instituted during Mr. Nunnally's term of office, which have helped to make the club one of the most delightful of the south's country clubs.

To Miss Tinsley

Miss Jamie Arnold delightfully entertained Wednesday afternoon in honor of Miss Elizabeth Tinsley, of Louisville, Ky., who is the guest of Miss Mary Frances Bowden.

Miss Marcella Steedman was hostess at a 500 luncheon Friday morning in honor of Miss Tinsley, her guests Misses Elizabeth Tinsley, Miss Frances Flemister, Miss Mary Frances Bowden, Miss Agnes Bell, Miss Jamie Arnold, Miss Ermine Griffin, Miss Adelaide Galloway, Miss Isabelle Simpson, Miss Margaret Culberson, Miss Ethel Law, Miss Rowena Simpson, Miss Elizabeth Small, Miss Margaret Davis, Miss Eva May Willingham, Miss Kirby Willigham, Miss Eloise Baldwin, and Miss Marcella Steedman.

Cooking School Teacher Thanked

Mrs. S. R. Dull, who has been conducting a two weeks' school for the business women's committee of the North Avenue Presbyterian church, has held the interest of a large and delighted class.

She made the gas stove new to most of the members, and by her apparent delight in making good things to eat and the ease with which she accomplished it, has made cooking seem a thing of pleasure.

The members of the business woman's committee add also the entire class wish to express their keen appreciation of Mrs. Dull as a teacher, and to the gas company for making it possible to benefit by her skill.

Domino Party

Mrs. Robert Hugh White entertained with a pretty domino party Saturday morning in honor of Miss Elizabeth Tinsley, the guest of Miss Mary Frances Bowden.

Those present were Miss Elizabeth Tinsley, Miss Frances Flemister, Miss Mary Frances Bowden, Miss Virginia Woodfin, Miss Elizabeth Small, Miss Ermine Griffin, Miss Hortense Loeb, Miss Edith Boone, Miss Mardella Steedman, Miss Eva Mae Willingham, Miss Grace Bloodworth, Miss Lois Wilkinson, Miss Martha Crane, Miss Hilda Castleberry, Miss Jamie Arnold and Miss Agnes Bell.

Reception Committee at Birthday Celebration

The following ladies have been invited by Mrs. R. K. Rambo, president of the Woman's auxiliary to Wesley Memorial hospital, to serve as a receiving committee on Saturday, June 2, in the parlors of the hospital:

Mrs. John A. Miller, Mrs. J. P. Westmoreland, Mrs. John H. Raines, Mrs. R. P. Milam, Miss Susie Wells, Mrs. J. H. Bradfield Mrs. H. O. Reese, Mrs. Howard Palmer, Mrs. W. P. Howard, Mrs. H. H. Tucker and Mrs. C. A. Mauck.

All friends are cordially invited.

Happenings In Londontown

LONDON, June 21.—I stated some time ag that the king does not intend to perpetuate the Edwardian practice of inviting crowned heads and their consorts to Windsor castle during the November season of the court, for the present, at least. The series of state visits of this nature during the earlier years of the century served an important purpose; but there would be some consideration of court usage to be overcome before the series could be resumed as a regular thing. Some of these visits, for example, have not yet been returned, and it would not be quite en regle for a European potentate to enjoy the hospitality of the English crown twice over unless he himself had acted as a host in between. The case is somewhat different when there has been a change of monarchs on both sides; but for the time the tendency on his majesty's part is to regard the month of June as a more appropriate month for the state hospitalities than the dreary chills of November. It is for this reason that the chief fixture of the kind for the present year will be the visit of M. Poincare to London at midsummer.

The king and queen, however, will keep open house at Windsor during the closing weeks of each year, and are to receive visits, not only from uncrowned royalties, but also from the ambassadors and their ladies. It has always been usual for the chefs de mission to see something of the sovereign in his Windsor home at that season of the year, and the custom goes back to early Victorian days. But there is ground for saying that next November their visits will be on a more important scale, King George is fully convinced that the geniality and intimacy of social intercourse will be of the utmost service in seconding the efforts of Sir Edward Grey along the lines of formal diplomacy. This is the reason why his majesty has been devoting so much attention to the agreeable task of cultivating the acquaintance of the greater diplomatic chiefs by dining at their houses and receiving them at Buckingham palace in return.

It is being said, also, that the bride and bridegroom of Berlin are to be the guests of our court at Windsor in the autumn. They will receive a cordial welcome, both there and at Sandringham and are likely to be seen in England much more frequently than the bride's brothers have been. The visit will be none the less agreeable because it will not be made under state conditions, which would be out of place in the circumstances. It is very desirable that his majesty should be able to devote himself to his favorite outdoor recreations in winter time without the distraction of formal pageantry.

The duke of Connaught was present at the opening of the royal naval and military tournament, accompanied by the crown prince and princess of Sweden, Prince Arthur and Princess Patricia of Connaugh and Prince Louis of Battenberg. The crown princess looked charming in a pale corn-colored costume and a black hat, and she brought her four children with her, who appeared to be delighted with the show. Princess Patricia was in nattier blue, and a large black hat trimmed with blue ostrich feathers. Among the large audience were Lord and Lady Acheson, Colonel and Mrs. Sutton, Colonel Algernoon and Lady Edith Trotter and their children and Captain Gurney.

The Duchess of Connaught has been pronounced out of danger, and everybody is feeling relieved and pleased in consequence. The real nature of her illness has been kept strictly private. But there are many people who make a hobby of professing to be "in the know." Any opinions that have circulated through this source have not been officially confirmed, and cannot, therefore, be regarded as correct. That the duchess' illness and operations were severe and complicated was allowed to be known through the papers. Other statements, however, have been mere guesswork by people who respect prestige in that line, and who would rather die than appear to know nothing of somebody else's private affairs.

The decision of the late King Edward to abandon the occupation of Osborne House was a far-seeing one. But his generosity in placing the property at the disposal of the nation has naturally affected the whole social outlook in that of the island. The manner in which the collateral branches of the royal family are curtailing their residential property is a sing of the times, which is to be seen spreading every year among the families of the old nobility as well. It means that the maintenance of houses, which are required for occasional use only is no longer regarded as a sign of social standing, and the tendency is thoroughly wholesome, beddes being inevitable under modern conditions.

One result of the marriage of the kaiser's daughter to the Duke of Cumberland's heir is the resumption of monarchy and the duke. The latter friendly relations between the English has for years been at loggerheads with the court because of the countenance given to his sister's marriage to a baron.

ATHENS

ATHENS.—The Senior dance, Wednesday night, closed the commencement festivities and ended one of the most brilliant weeks in the social history of Athens. Among the visitors at the dances every nice were: Miss Jessie Thompson, Atlanta; Miss Ora Swift, Colorado; Miss Mary Murphy, Myrtis McKenzie, Louise Parker, Elise Hazzell, Dorothy Daves, Bertha Moore, Virginia Lipscomb, Adgate Ellis, Wyvliff Worm, Helen Dykes, Louise Bruglen, Helen McCurry, Callie Hoke Smith, all of Atlanta; Miss Helen Baxter, Omaha; Miss Elizabeth Lord, Louisville; Miss Lucile Pelcock, Columbus; Miss Rachel Nunnally, Monroe; Miss Josephine Miller, Birmingham; Miss Jane Thrall, Williamsport; Miss Frances Lockett, Albany; Miss Cora Brown, Atlanta; Miss Durkee, Griffin; Miss Zeigler, Shreveport; Mrs. McGowan, Mrs. Phinizy of Augusta, Mrs. Rutherford Bertha Moore, Virginia Lipscomb, Adgate Ellis, Lipscomb, Atlanta; Mrs. McKenzie, Miss Edith McKenzie, Montezuma; Mrs. William Bradshaw, Fairmont; Mrs. Charles Mell, Augusta; Miss Sarah Hill, Miss Ruth Slack, Lavonia; Miss Ruth Northen, Miss Isetta Phinizy, Miss Mays, Miss McKimmury, Miss Wheeler. Miss Wheeler wore pink charmeuse; Miss Minnie Thomas was in pink embroidered crepe; Miss Boozier was in white lace over pink satin; Mrs. White, the gracious hostess, wore a champagne embroidered marquerite.

Mrs. Mell's pretty tea was in honor of several popular visiting girls. The house was beautifully decorated with smilax, Cherokee roses and quantities of sweet peas and daisies. The lilting room was in green and white, daisies and Queen Anne lace basket-arrays being used. The dining room was gorgeous with swansonia blossoms, and the drawing room with pink sweetpeas. In the receiving line were: Miss Mildred Mell, Miss Sarah Mell, Miss Adgate Ellis, Miss Dorothy Daves, Miss Virginia Lipscomb, Miss Laura Cobb Hutchins. Assisting were Mrs. Morton Hodgson, Mrs. John Mell, Mrs. Hughes Spalding, Mrs. Charles Mell, Mrs. Boozier, Mrs. J. L. Hutchins, Mrs. W. A. Carlton, Miss Ellen Mell. Miss Mildred Mell wore a lovely gown of flame chiffon with touches of real lace; Miss Sarah Mell wore a dainty gown of shadow lace flounced with pink. Miss Daves wore a white lace; Miss Ellis was in blue embroidered chiffon; Miss Lipscomb wore pink satin. Miss Hutchins wore white charmeuse. The beautiful party continued before the twilight hour and extended into the evening—proving one of the largest and most brilliant of the week's events.

Judge Hamilton McWhorter was host Tuesday evening in honor of his house guest, Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Chicago.

The marriage of Miss sara frances White to Mr. Morton low, on Wednesday evening, was an event of state-wide interest, taking place at the old country home of Judge and Mrs. Jas. Hall. The bride's attendants were Mrs. Hugh White and Mrs. William Bradshaw, matrons of honor; Misses Minnie Thomas, Lil Hodgson, Marguerite Thomas and Lil Hodgson, bridesmaids. The groomsmen were Mr. John Welch, Mr. Hugh White, Mr. Jesse Draper, Mr. Paul Miller. Among the out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Wyvliff Goldsmith, Mr. George Low, Mr. and Mrs. Greg. "48-Six" Seven-Passenger Touring—$5000

THE PEERLESS FOR CONFIDENCE

THE outward beauty of the Peerless is immediately acknowledged. It is one thing that individualizes the Peerless among all other cars, anywhere. Yet the beauty of the Peerless is a secondary consideration.

Safety, strength, comfort and durability are the principal merits that give preference to the Peerless—the car of matured details; power for hills, flexible control for city traffic, electric starting for convenience, irreversible steering gear for effortless driving, maximum comfort for every passenger, and durability of parts obtained by scientific heat treatment of steel—these, in addition to beauty—are Peerless characteristics. Practically and esthetically the Peerless is all that the name implies.

Three Six-Cylinder Models. "38-Six," 48-Six," "60-Six." Prices $4300 to $7200.

THE ARCADE AT COX COLLEGE AND CONSERVATORY

COLLEGE PARK, GEORGIA

Here is given a good view of the grand stairway and spacious elevator. This elevator service is more appreciated by young ladies than the general public may realize, since its use is a wonderful saving of time, physical exertion and health.

This is but one of the many features of Cox College which adds to the efficiency of the college work, among which figure largely modern laboratories, commodious lecture rooms, museum and a mounted telescope. The Academy furnishes splendid preparation for college work. For college entrance 15 units are required. High standards are maintained and a strong faculty is in charge. In the Conservatory department are found many pianos, pipe organs, orchestral outfit, a large concert hall, and most important of all, a faculty of artists of national and international fame.—(Advt.)

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

INCREASES THE JOY OF SUMMER VACATIONS

THE coming of summer is fraught with the keenest of anticipations. We are looking forward to that trip to the seashore, lake, mountain or country and the amusements attendant upon the season. If we have red blood the sports and pleasures of the vacation period such as tennis, golf, boating, fishing, etc., appeal to us.

But this season of outdoor enjoyment also brings with it added responsibilities, in the extra care which must be devoted to the toilet. The hair in particular needs much more attention than at any other time. The sebaceous gland throws off more waste material and there is a consequent larger and more rapid accumulation of dandruff, which makes the frequent and intelligent use of Newbro's Herpicide imperative.

Regular applications of this valuable scalp prophylactic keeps the head perfectly clean and the hair and scalp healthy. Herpicide adds gloss and beauty to the hair and thus increases one's personal charm and attractiveness.

The cooling effect, the sensation of cleanliness and the exquisite odor all tend to make Newbro's Herpicide a most delightful hot weather hair dressing. It stops itching of the scalp almost instantly.

Send 10c for Trial Bottle and Booklet. SEE COUPON.

Herpicide is sold at all toilet goods counters in 50 cents and $1.00 sizes, where it is guaranteed to produce results or money refunded.

The Manufacturer and His Trade-Mark

Behind every trade-mark that really amounts to anything there are brains, energy, ambition, and work—hard work—joined hand in hand to produce some article of worth that will deserve and win universal approval.

After a manufacturer has spent a great many years in organizing his business and perfecting his product, his name and his trade-mark amount to something worth while, or else he has toiled in vain. The name or trade-mark alone of many a big concern is worth thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars. It is often called good-will. It might be called reputation.

The trade-mark is the directing finger, pointing the way to articles of quality and dependability.

Manufacturers of trade-marked articles are no longer satisfied to advertise their trade-mark only. They are coming to understand that they must also advertise the place where their goods may be purchased. That is why you see trade-marked articles advertised more and more in THE JOURNAL, because the newspaper is the chief advertising medium for creating actual demand upon the retailer.

MAKING A MOVING PICTURE PLAY

CHAS. M. SEAY THE DE LASCO OF THE "MOVIES"

COACHING THE "VILLIAN"

A THRILLING SCENE

RESTING

TELLING THEM HOW TO BE FUNNY

By Angus Perkerson.

ENTER BUD, right entrance.) "Where shall I build the chicken house, Sis?"

Sis (leaning upon the letter box), "In the front parlor, dear."

Charles Morgan Seay (waving his arms like Mrs. Leslie Carter in an overwrought mood), "Not that way. This isn't a sleep-walking impersonation. You've got to get your emotion 'over.' See? Frizzle the films."

As though he were grinding coffee for breakfast, the photographer winds off another reel. Mr. Seay changes from art to routine, and holds aloft a number which concludes the scene. The photographer mentions the heat in a rather striking way, and the company suggests a rest.

This is how they talk and act in staging a "movie." If you've never glimpsed "back stage" at the "movies;;" you've missed the best part of the films.

John Bunny is his fattest moments was never so funny as an actor reading impromptu lines and posing for a scene. And no dramatic star of them all is half so absorbing as Mr. Seay as he directs the scene with one hand, takes the part of the heroine with the other, the role of the hero with the——

Well, perhaps he hasn't three hands, but nevertheless he finds opportunity to be the hero, and, occasionally, he pushes the photographer aside and grinds off a few reels himself.

Within the last few weeks the Edison Moving Picture company has staged five moving picture plays in Georgia, and last week completed the final one at a little tumble-down cabin on the Bolton-Buckhead road, five miles from Atlanta.

STORY OF MOUNTAIN FOLK.

The story of a mountain family and of Pinky, the little mountain beauty, who showed them the way to a happier manner of life, was pictured.

Charley Seay, director of the company which is staging "movies" in Georgia, wrote the scenario, and he knew what he was writing, for he is Georgia bred and knows the ways of the mountain people.

Just to get the atmosphere, the Georgia "feeling," the pines, the mountain cabin, the mountain folk themselves, the Edison company sent six actors, Mr. Seay and a photographer here to produce a series of five plays, all of Georgia and of Georgia people.

To watch the "movie" actors as they posed at the little house on the Bolton-Buckhead road was like seeing a bit of the real clay from the surrounding hills impressed upon the films.

It was curious to observe homely things put into the pictures; a dinner horn, for instance; a cabin which was typical of the mountains, even though it stands in a little hollow of the land, only a few miles from Atlanta; and Pinky, the little mountaineer, who talks through her nose, but has a Georgia look.

It gave the "movies" an intimate, personal touch, a "nearness" that never could be felt in the theaters.

For this reason, and for the novelty and insight of seeing a picture actually being made, this "back stage" at the "movies" was more interesting than the most absorbing of pictures completed and thrown upon the screen.

Whoever delights in moving picture plays (and, that is everyone), and whoever thinks sometimes of being a moving picture playwright (and that is nearly everyone), should have seen the Edison company as it concluded the mountain story at the cabin near Atlanta.

For the reason that several weeks must elapse before the picture is shown, the company would rather that the plot be given only in a general way.

But it is enough to say that the play shows development of character and points a moral, and for his purpose describes the progress of a mountain family. You must have noticed in the theaters a difference in the nature of the films. Moving picture companies, like magazines, or other publishers of fiction stories, have a different purpose.

The picture completed last week was absorbing enough, but its chief value lay in the lesson which it taught and the manner in which it developed character.

In writing the scenario, Charley Seay chose scenes and characters with which he was familiar.

"I tried to get the human element into it," he explained. "The every-day touch But chief of all I wanted to show character—how people think and act. That sort of story will get by where a love story won't. About nine out of every ten love stories submitted to moving picture companies are the same, with some little variation, and, of coure, they are not available.

"But if you'll just take people and write about them as they are, people you know, people you understand, why, then you are going to produce a scenario that will sell."

This was Mr. Seay's plan in the picture play produced last week. He made no attempt at a wild and improbable story. He simply took a very human, a very probable incident, and developed it into a moving picture play which will impress everyone as human and interesting, whether he be a Georgian or an upstate New Yorker.

In writing his play he arranged it in this manner. First, he gave the title, then a list of the characters; thirdly, a very brief synopsis of the play, and lastly, short but important directions of how each scene is to be produced. For instance:

"Pinky leans on letter box. Brother passes by, speaks to her, exits. Country lover enters. Offers her a trinket. She refuses. He exits."

That gives you at least an idea of how the scenario is written. Each scene is described in a similar manner. Occasionally directions are given for a line of explanation to be thrown upon the screen, such as:

"PINKEY DECIDES TO MARRY HILTON." The

THE chief aim of women's styles this summer seems to be what it has always been—something different.

Not only must styles be different, but it possible they must be incorrect.

Such an incompatibility can be explained only by illustration. For instance, there is the petticoat effect, otherwise known as the "drag-skirt."

A year ago milady's friends would have been inexpressibly shocked to see her sweep down Peachtree street with the hem of her undergarment trailing the pavement.

But you can get away with anything if you do it a la mode. When milady wears a girdle skirt and dons a summer straw she can allow the petticoat to fall all over the bricks and gain only an envious stare or a smitten smile.

One condition attaches. The petticoat must be very new and very much ruffled. Red flannel is au fait with the girdle skirt.

The skirt which tops the petticoat is not split of necessity. Of course these creations with the chasms down the silken sides obviate the precipitation of the petticoat, for the cardinal flare between splits is then perfectly properly visible without the sweeping up of banana peelings. But it is the very cream of style to wear the ruffled petticoat below a skirt which is innocent of the tiniest division. Then does the shade of Dame Fashion herself flicker with beryl shadowings.

HOW TO BE DIFFERENT.

The favorite method of being different and stylish this season is to ape the other sex. Take hose, for instance. They are called the "two-tone" stockings, these new creations of diverse colors. They are made of solid silk throughout, but the part covering the ankle is somewhat heavier than the rest. The toe and heel are of plain black and are identically like the socks that grandfather used to get with tobacco coupons. But at the ankle the color changes to red, white, blue or some other hue, patriotic or unpatriotic, that suits the taste. Afterward, the sober color of black is resumed.

Among the most surprising of the fashions is a new style in coats. Why milady should pick out the heaviest of heavy coats for stylish summer wear, is beyond the male mind. But such coats are stylish. They call it the sport coat, and indeed it is exceedingly "class." We imagine Eskimos would dote on it They say that it is made of summer chinchilla. Evidently the word means something cool, for the coat itself appears to be formed of clippings from the polar bear.

THIS SPORT COAT.

The sport coat is white and is a long kind of snug-fitting-thing that comes below the knees. Sporty soft collar, sporty Norfolk belt, sporty patch pockets make it the creme de la creme of sportiness. You wear it with a rating skirt and a plain panama hat, one of these simple little sky-pieces that cost anywhere in the neighborhood of twenty-five cold hard dollars.

When milady dons her sport coat she is really the most attractive thing on Peachtree street. Of course you can wear it for outing trips, but in order to be slightly different, therefore stylish, one should wear it in the heart of the fashion section of the city on the most fashionable of fashionable days.

Then there are shoes. In this respect styles have gone from one extreme to another. When spring first swept into Atlanta, one of her first disclosures was that the high heels of winter were gone, to be replaced by rubber soles and no heels at all.

But now the fashion in shoes are brown tops and simple laces. The shoe with the Cuban-French heel is back again, the new arch and the cut steel buckle are here once more.

The shoes are very beautiful, all in shiny black patent leather. There is the tiniest of tiny distinctions that makes the new shoe fashionable, and a shoe with a plain French heel out-of-date.

It lies in the shape of the heel. Now milady can wear a French heel, with the back of it curved perceptibly inward, and the front curving in to meet the back, on certain occasions. For dances, and night affairs, they are perfectly proper.

But let milady wear a typical French heel down Peachtree street some summer afternoon and she is simply not in vogue. Two months ago the rubber soles were the only thing. Today the Cuban-French heel is the heel of the hour.

It does not curve at the back. That is the secret. Beneath the instep there is a beautiful arch, and a regular precipice, sheer and straight comes down behind. These shoes may be worn in the day time and night functions as well.

The other feature of the new shoe is a return to burbarity. Simplicity is not the keynote of fashion that it was a short while ago. The change is found in the new shoes, in the cut steel buckle. Milady who wears it is not garish, but merely different and stylish.

The cut steel buckle is a glittering thing that is fastened on the front of the shoe right here buckles usually fasten, beneath the tongue, which is of the same old colonial shape as of yore. The effect is flashy, but of course, stylish.

OLD FASHIONS RETURNING.

In other words the wheel of fashion has taken another turn. We are getting back to the old spoke of many years ago. The "drag skirt" is an adaptation of the pantalette, the cut steel buckle is a replica of Cinderella's dainty slipper. Even in children's clothing the tendency is a relapse from one time simplicity to the frills and furbelows of Lord Fauntleroy.

Witness the styles in Atlanta's down town shops. The middy blouses themselves are being painted, in louder tones. The Bulgarian middy, the Balkan middy, which is one and the same, is marked in brighter hues. The waist band is being striped in reds and blues, the collars are flashing carmine.

The clerks in the stores will tell you that rompers are no longer in demand, that simple little frocks for lassies are giving way to flounces once again.

SEEN IN THE HALL OF FAME

By Mrs. W. H. Felton

After I made a late visit to Annapolis and gathered some very thrilling geological data, I became interested in the Hansons of Maryland, for there were some Marshalls who also carried the name of Hanson as given names, showing relationships and intermarriages. Among the very large land owners was one Thomas Hanson Marshall, who was evidently a kinsman to the great John Hanson, who is one of the two celebrated men whose bronze statues have been placed in the capitol of the United States by the state of Maryland. Up to this time I had felt small interest in John Hanson, but I find he was one of the greatest of our colonial patriots, and was the very first president of the congress away back in the early history of these United States. He was born in Charles county, Md., in the year 1715, nearly 200 years ago. He lived there for fifty-eight years before he moved to Frederick county, where he died ten years later. When the patriots became indignant at British aggression Hanson fearlessly joined in giving supreme control to the provincial government as against the control of King George. He was one of the noblest defenders of the articles of confederation of the United States. He was the great leader in Maryland, when so many of my forbears signed in 1776 before the Declaration of Independence was signed and which signatures would have executed them and confiscated their property, if British arms had succeeded in America.

In 1787, when General Washington was moving against the troops of Sir Henry Clinton, and the patriots in the south were in dire struggles to defend the country from British soldiers and tories, this John Hanson was elected the very first president of the congress of the confederation. By this election John Hanson became in a political sense the foremost person in the United States and represented its dignity. His title was "President of the United States in congress assembled."

After General Washington was victorious at Yorktown and Cornwallis was signally defeated, President Hanson had the great happiness to welcome General Washington and present him to the congress, then assembled at Philadelphia.

He died in November, 1782, two years later, but the last British soldier had sailed away from New York and peace was in sight. He had represented Charles county nine times in the provincial assembly of Maryland. He raised two companies of riflemen for General Washington's army and sent money to relieve the poor of Boston who had suffered from the ravages of the enemy, and forty companies of minute men in Maryland. How many of our historians have informed themselves of this great John Hanson who was really the first president of the United States?

His hand guided the fortunes of the new nation in the year that brought final success to American arms. Some of the letters written to his wife and son-in-law show how dearly he loved his home when he was in constant and active service for his country for twenty-five years.

With Charles Carroll, the other great Marylander, whose bronze statue keeps company with that of John Hanson in the hall of fame, he spared neither strength, money or life in the service of his country.

Charles Carroll was devoted Catholic and John Hanson was Protestant in faith. Carroll's family were devoted to King Charles I of England, while John Hanson was an adherent of the house of Hanover. Carroll was educated at religious institutions in France; Hanson was educated in Charles county, Md.

Both were members of very influential families, but Hanson was more the man of the people. He was one of the stanchest supporters of what was called the "Maryland Association," organized in 1775, and was among the first of the signers that I have in previous articles alluded to, where they took a solemn oath to stand by Maryland and defied British aggression. Among those signers were nine of the Marshalls and four of my Latimer kindred, one of them being my own grandmother's father, as we now understand. This signing was set down as treason to King George, and it meant eternal vigilance in a land where great influence was used to preserve allegiance to the royal arms. Had British arms prevailed every one would have been executed or exiled as before said.

SLANDEROUS ATTACKS ON CANDIDATES.

To the most of newspaper readers it seemed a vain undertaking to try to run down the attack made on ex-President Roosevelt, who was charged with habitual drunkenness in the campaign of last year, but the sequel shows that it was time and money well expended. When it came to a showdown the proof failed to appear. During the 1912 campaign a so-called national prohibition organizer appeared in Cartersville and publicly stated that he himself saw this much abused candidate drink four stiff glasses of whisky inside of thirty minutes. The falsehood had to pass unrebuked, because there was nobody qualified to say that the speaker was a brazen liar, but which he was, and we now are satisfied that he made lying his professional business.

This is alluded to merely to say that all such tales should be taken not only with a grain of allowance, but held at arm's length on suspicion for honesty's sake.

There are very few men who are ambitious for political promotion who would care to enter a campaign with habits of this kind, and newspapers should be very careful to hold back such villainous stories until the absolute proof is presented. No sot is fit to serve in a representative capacity, and no immoral man should be allowed to appear as a legislator. Civic righteousness should be illustrated, as well as preached for example's sake to the youth of the land. The time has been *in our country when drunkenness was con*doned, but that time has gone by. A man who is too weak to control his thirst for strong drink should go to an inebriate asylum before he asks the votes of any number of people and after he thinks he is cured he should test himself in private life before he essays to become a lawmaker.

Mr. Roosevelt's vigor and physical robustness would have given the lie where he was personally known, but eternity alone can count the votes he lost where he was not so well acquainted. It was well to chase the lie down.

A SHORT SIGHTSEEING TRIP.

Washington, D. C., May 19, 1913.

As I walked down F street on yesterday afternoon I heard the fire wagons coming. Surely I never saw so many splendid engines in line of battle to meet the voracious fire fiend!

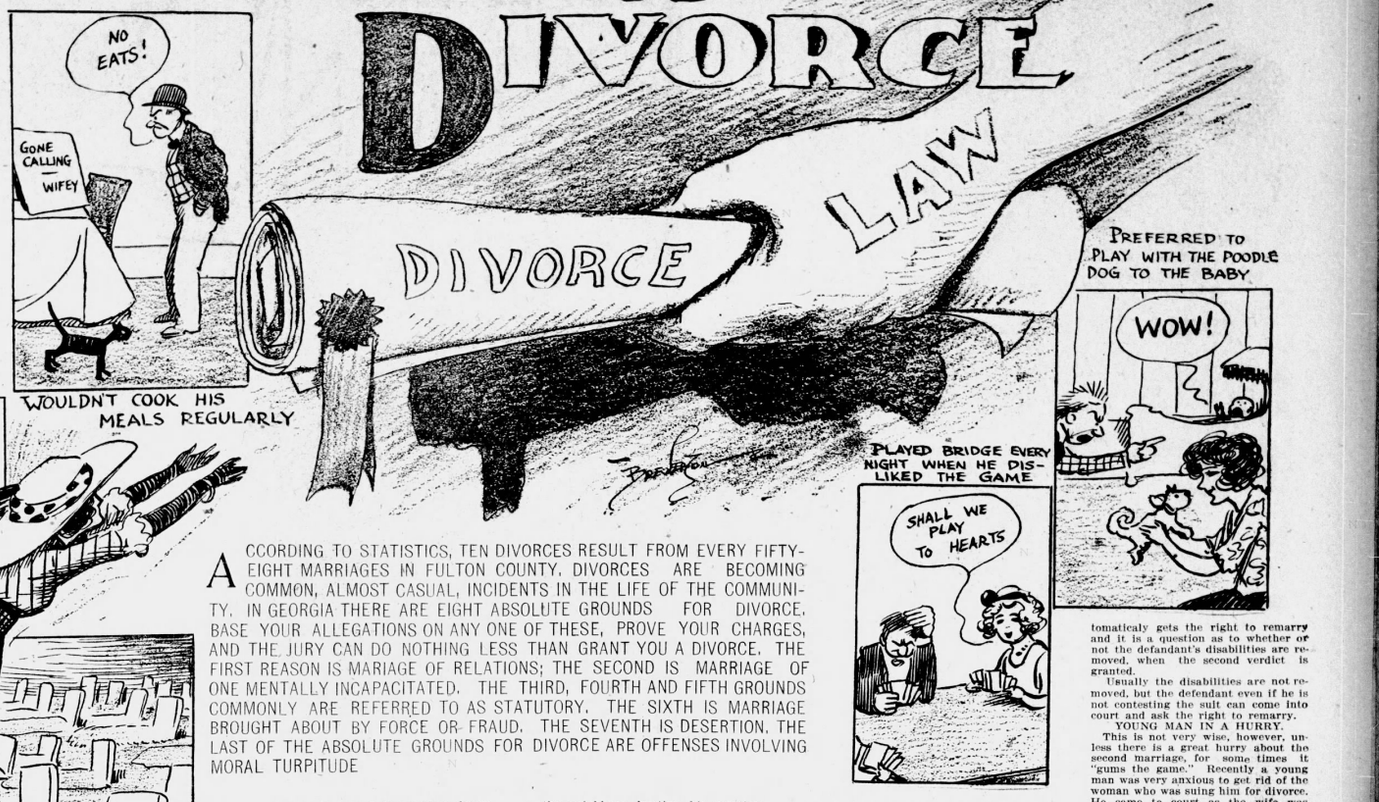
The large building occupied by the department of geological survey was all in flames down in its basement. A great express company's supply, also domiciled in the building, was being destroyed.

For hours the engines poured in great streams of water. One man, who was near enough to see, said there were twenty hose lines pouring in their floods. I never saw such beautiful engines in my life. They were handsome as the inside works of a splendid watch, and they had attached themselves to every water plug in the vicinity, and the hose were stretched along all those crowded street near the Ebbitt house and the United States treasury. Being Sunday afternoon and beautiful weather, everybody was promenading the streets, and the crowd soon banked themselves on the various sidewalks. I have not seen the morning paper to know the extent of the loss, but you may be sure it runs up into a good many figures. What it has cost the government to procure all the data and the patents and what the hindrances to progress will be I can only imagine to be enormous.

I took a street car ride out to the popular Chevy Chase club and grounds, miles and miles of the finest streets and parks on the continent, and the people who invest in a town where the taxes of $0,000,000 of people are used to beautify and extend such improvements can easily perceive what their luck has been.

My vacation or holiday is hampered by an inflamed eye which annoys me a great deal, but I knew I could not rest from reading and writing at home, so I am on a little sightseeing trip of which you will hear more anon.

HOW TO GET A DIVORCE



ACCORDING TO STATISTICS, TEN DIVORCES RESULT FROM EVERY FIFTY-EIGHT MARRIAGES IN FULTON COUNTY. DIVORCES ARE BECOMING COMMON, ALMOST CASUAL, INCIDENTS IN THE LIFE OF THE COMMUNITY. IN GEORGIA THERE ARE EIGHT ABSOLUTE GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE. BASE YOUR ALLEGATIONS ON ANY ONE OF THESE, PROVE YOUR CHARGES, AND THE JURY CAN DO NOTHING LESS THAN GRANT YOU A DIVORCE. THE FIRST REASON IS MARIAGE OF RELATIONS; THE SECOND IS MARRIAGE OF ONE MENTALLY INCAPACITATED. THE THIRD, FOURTH AND FIFTH GROUNDS COMMONLY ARE REFERRED TO AS STATUTORY. THE SIXTH IS MARRIAGE BROUGHT ABOUT BY FORCE OR FRAUD. THE SEVENTH IS DESERTION, THE LAST OF THE ABSOLUTE GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE ARE OFFENSES INVOLVING MORAL TURPITUDE

STATISTICS show that there are ten divorces for every fifty-eight marriages in Fulton county.

Statistics are generally misleading and probably they are in this instance. But the fact remains that divorces are no longer confined to the idle rich. Divorces are becoming common, almost casual, incidents of the life of a community, but the time has not yet come when divorces are uninteresting.

Despite all the talk when comes so quickly when the rumor or the announcement of an impending divorce flies about the neighborhood, little is known of the legal procedure through which a person, who desires to rid himself of a mate, has to go.

This is shown by a recent experience of a grand jury foreman, who was met in his office by a well-dressed, prosperous - looking man. He informed the surprised foreman that he would like to get a divorce at the next session of the grand jury. He explained that he wanted a grand jury divorce because sessions of that body were secret and as much as he wished to get rid of his wife, he didn't care to tell the world of his domestic mistake.

For the benefit of the man, who wanted a "grand jury divorce;" for those who rush blindly into the courts with no idea of what they are really going through, and for the benefit of the neighbor, who first learns that the adventure on the sea of life by his two "friends" has been unfortunate and that they are about to scuttle the matrimonial bark, this story is written.

THE FIRST STEP.

Of course everyone knows that the first step is to a lawyer's office, where you turn over all the money you have and promise to let him have all that you can borrow.

You tell him that you want a total divorce or a partial divorce. On legal papers a total divorce is a divorce "a vinculo matrimonii" or from the bonds of matrimony, in plain English. A partial divorce is "a mensa et thora," or, in the vernacular of the people of this country, a divorce from bed and board.

Partial divorces are not at all popular, for they simply mean that husband and wife do not have to live together; that the husband is relieved of all marital responsibilities except those imposed directly by the court, and that the wife can own property and conduct a business in her own name without interference from the husband.

A total divorce means that the party securing the divorce can remarry, and so can the divorced party if he gets his disabilities removed. In fact, in Georgia partial divorces are so uncommon that a reporter "working the court house" for years has never known of one being filed.

GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE.

There are, generally speaking, eight absolute grounds for divorce. Base your allegations on any one of these grounds and prove your charges and the jury has no discretion in the matter. It must grant the divorce.

The law says that a man shall not marry his stepmother, his mother-in-law, his daughter-in-law, his stepdaughter or the granddaughter of his wife, and the reverse is true. Prove that you have married in violation of this law and you don't need a divorce. The court will simply declare your marriage void.

A ground for divorce in Georgia, and let it be here understood that the divorce laws of different states vary widely, is mental incapacity at the time of marriage. A marriage is called off in this case just like a real estate deal or any other contract. The only difference is that the courts in their wisdom have held that a person does not have to have as much sense to get married as he does to make a contract involving property.

OTHER REASONS.

The third, fifth and sixth grounds for a divorce in Georgia, are commonly referred to as statutory, although there are really eight of the statutory grounds.

The fourth ground is where a marriage is brought about by force, menace, duress or fraud.

The seventh ground is "willful and continued desertion for a term of three years." Legal desertion can occur where the parties are still living under the same roof.

The last of the absolute grounds is the conviction of either party of an offense involving moral turpitude, under which he or she is sentenced to the penitentiary for a term of two or more years. James A. Branch, one of the brightest attorneys of the Atlanta bar, gives as a definition of moral turpitude "anything that is inherently wrong," or, in other words, anything that is a crime not against the statutes of a state or city, but an offense against society.

This completes the list of absolute grounds, and the only defense against them is to prove that the complaining party has been guilty of the same offense, or that he has had knowledge of the offense and has condoned it. Otherwise, if the allegation or ground is proven, the jury must sign the divorce verdict.

DISCRETIONARY GROUNDS.

Now come the discretionary grounds, or the grounds on which the jury is the judge of whether or not the parties should be separated by the courts. When a suit is based on discretionary grounds, all charges may be fully established, yet the jury can fail to sign the verdict.

The discretionary grounds are cruel treatment and habitual intoxication.

Cruel treatment is the most popular ground for divorce in Georgia, and nine out of ten divorce suits are based on it.

Cruel treatment covers a multitude of sins.

One man complained that his wife was cruel because she preferred to play with a poodle dog rather than his baby, and got his divorce. Another declared that his wife would not cook his meals at regular hours. Another man charged that his wife was cruel because she refused to live in the city he chose for their residence, and he got his verdict. A woman secured a divorce here recently on the ground that her husband forced her to leave a sick child to make a pleasure trip with him.

When filing divorce suits for women, it seems to be a habit to charge that the husband threatened to kill the wife, and if all of the threats were carried out, several hundred wives would be slain here every year. The charge usually proves enough, however, to get a divorce, and one wife recently got her verdict because her husband shot two men in her presence, and manipulated a knife on a third, and was generally such a bad actor that she was afraid of him.

BRIDGE CRUELTY.

One man got a divorce because his wife treated him cruelly by playing bridge nearly every night, despite the fact that he didn't enjoy the game. Generally speaking, any old kick you want to make against your spouse is covered by cruel treatment.

The case of Ring versus Ring (appropriate title) has brought from the supreme court of Georgia what is considered the best definition of cruel treatment, and superior court judges generally quote this decision in their charges to divorce jurles.

"Cruel treatment," the court says, "within the meaning of the civil code, which provides that such cruel treatment shall be a ground for divorce, is the willful infliction of pain, bodily or mental, upon the complaining party, such as reasonably justifies an apprehension of danger to life, limb or health."

The word wilful is underscored, showing that the intention to wound is necessary. In other words, a man can do anything to his wife if he doesn't intend to hurt her feelings, and still she would not have a ground for divorce under the court's construction of cruel treatment. Another important word in the long sentence is "health." Most any sort of worry can injure the health, and either party is certain, almost, to have some fault that will occasion worry to the other.

WHAT IS INTOXICATION?

Intoxication is the other discretionary ground, and often suits for divorce combine it with cruel treatment.

The courts have held that to get a divorce on the ground of habitual intoxication, one must prove that the intoxication is occasioned by drinking liquors. If a person stays simply under the influence of drugs, according to a supreme court decision, they stay married.

As a general proposition, divorces are easy to secure, for the defendant seldom comes into court and defends.

If the defendant does make a fight, there is no telling what a jury will do.

As an example of this, take the case of Smith versus Smith, which went before the supreme court of Georgia. Smith was a practicing physician and he wanted to show the court that his wife had slandered him to the neighbors to such an extent that she had actually injured his practice.

Under the supreme court's construction of cruel treatmeut quoted above, it would seem to the layman that this was a perfect case. The judge of the superior court refused to admit into the testimony in the Smith case evidence that the wife had slandered her husband to the detriment of his profession.

Because of this action of the superior court, the case was appealed to the supreme court, when the husband lost, and that body sustained the lower court, saying, "It was no error to reject evidence showing that she slandered him to the neighbors, hurting his practice as a physician."

COLLUSION IN EVIDENCE.

There must be no "collusion" about securing a divorce, the courts declare. This means largely that it is not proper, when husband and wife have decided to part, for the wife to invite the husband to knock her down in order that she may have a perfectly good sample of cruel treatment to carry before a divorce jury. Of course, after they have separated, it is perfectly proper for them to arrange the matter of alimony and the custody of the children, out of court. But this brings up another point.

The law is, that a person has to be a resident of Georgia for twelve months before he can ffte suit for divorce. It is said that now the same law is in effect in all other states, although Nevada, South Dakota and Oklahoma became famous divorce centers when they had six-month laws, which have been changed now.

If the defendant in the suit is a resident of Georgia, personal service of the suit is required. If the defendant resides outside of the state, a notice of the suit must be published twice a month for two months, and then service is "perfected." Then to make a divorce complete, a verdict must be rendered at two different terms of the court. This shows that a divorce might be secured in six months, although it generally takes a year. The two-verdict proposition is worthy of note. The form of the verdict each time is the same, and it reads like this, "We, the jury, find that sufficient proofs have been submitted to grant a total divorce between the parties, that is to say, a divorce a vinculo matrimonii."

TWO VERDICTS NEEDED.

When this verdict is first reached it means practically nothing, and the same thing is required at another term of the court before the divorce is a fact.

Clarence Pinion was suing Emily Pinion for a divorce in the Fulton courts not long ago and had his first verdict. He married again a few hours before his case was called for the second verdict in the superior court.

As a result, the parents of the second wife took out a bigamy warrant and he had to marry her all over again to keep the parents from landing him in the jail.

When the second verdict is granted the property rights of the parties are settled.

A schedule of the property belonging to both parties should be filed with the suit in the superior court, and even after the separation and before the divorce suit is filed, the husband has no right to dispose of his property. This is to prevent him from stopping the collection of any alimony that the court may award to his wife. In this connection it may be well to state that the wife, to collect alimony, may levy on property purchased by her husband from a party innocent of any knowledge of their marital troubles, and she may force a sale to get money.

PROPERTY RIGHTS.

When the second verdict is granted, the court decides the property rights, that is to say, the wife is given alimony if she is to get any, and also the custody of the children, if that has not been previously decided.

The law says that the party not at fault, that is, the one who secures the divorce, shall get the custody of the children, but provides that the court can exercise his discretion, which means that the trial judge may even award the children to a third party or appoint a guardian for them.

Most divorces are not contested, and when there is a fight it is usually because the husband wants to dodge paying alimony.

As soon as a suit for divorce is filed in the superior court, the defendant can file an answer if he wishes a cross bill, too. The law provides that the suit cannot be withdrawn without consent of both parties if an answer or cross bill has been filed.

When a cross bill is filed the whole matter is heard at once and the jury decides which party is to get the divorce.

It is not uncommon for the husband to win the first verdict and the wife the second. After such a legal dogfall there is nothing to do but go to a third trial, which decides the issue finally.

The matter of the disabilities (the right to remarry) of the defendant is more or less interesting.

The party securing the divorce automatically gets the right to remarry and it is a question as to whether or not the defendant's disabilities are removed, when the second verdict is granted.

Usually the disabilities are not removed, but the defendant even if he is not contesting the suit can come into court and ask the right to remarry.

YOUNG MAN IN A HURRY.

This is not very wise, however, unless there is a great hurry about the second marriage, for some times it "gums the game." Recently a young man was very anxious to get rid of the woman who was suing him for divorce. He came to court as the wife was about to get her second verdict, and his attorney asked that his disabilities be removed. The lawyer made such a good showing for his client, that the jury decided a wife should not be allowed to throw aside such a perfect husband and refused the divorce.

Any time after the divorce has been granted the defendaat can file a petition to have his disabilities removed.

Whether or not marriage is a contract or a status has always been more or less of a question, but the courts hold that society has enough interest in it to give any citizen the right to protest the removal of the disabilities of a divorced party.

However, like most things which are left to be dealt with by society in general, little attention is paid to the opening left the public, and regardless of the reasons for which a person was divorced, he can usually come into court a few months later and by putting his friends on the stand to show his good character, without any opposition except a few questions from the judge, he can secure the right to embark once more on the turbulent seas of matrimony.

AN ANALYSIS OF DIVORCE

Divorce was analyzed several weeks ago for The Journal by a woman, a preacher and a judge.

"Divorcitis," said Dr. Frances Bradley, "is an acute, infectious disease, common to this age, country and stage of civilization. It may be diagnosed long before it reaches the eruptive stage. Indifference, suspicion, recrimination, are all premonitory symptoms, increasing with more or less severity till the crisis in the courtroom is reached.

"We may consider the treatment of divorcitis under two heads:

THE MINISTER'S OPINION.

"Divorce," said Dr. C. B. Wilmer, "is both a symptom and a disease. It is a symptom because it merely brings to light a false relation already existing between husband and wife. But from the standpoint of human society it is distinctly a disease. It actually creates something, the harmful effects of which ramify through all society.

"In the discussion of this question we must deal with the law of cause and effect, and with fundamental principles, and not merely with the likes and dislikes of individuals. Some of the causes of the infrequency of divorce are, first, individualism, the doctrine that each individual has the right to do as he pleases, or at best to frame his rules of conduct without regard to the fact that no one lives to himself alone, that we are all members of society, and that no one can be truly himself by himself. Individualism is as much a perversion of true individuality as a slavery is the denial of true individuality.

"A second cause growing out of this first is the increasing rebellion against all authority, human and divine. A third cause is a false idea of freedom, which people show when they talk, for example, of free love. 'Ye shall know the truth,' said Jesus, 'and the truth shall make you free.'"

THE JUDGE'S VERDICT.

Said Judge W. D. Ellis:

"More divorces are granted in the United States in proportion to population than in any civilized nation in the world.

"The ratio of divorce increases very greatly over the ratio of increase in population.

"The most frequent grounds on which divorces are granted are cruel treatment and habitual intoxication.

"Many more divorces are sought by wives than husbands.

"There are many marriages of divorced persons immediately upon the granting of final divorces, and showing that divorces are frequently sought for the purpose of obtaining another chance in the matrimonial market.

"Seventy-five per cent of the cases filed for divorce are not defended. This shows that there is necessarily collusion in many of them.

"Extravagance in living is a frequent cause of divorce.

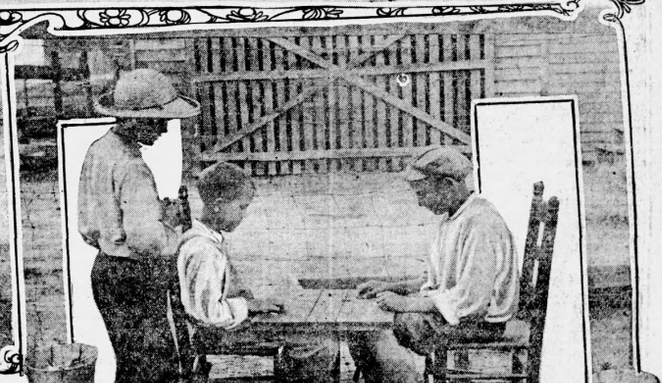
"No absolute divorce should be granted on the uncorroborated testimony of one of the parties.

"Some limit as to time of remarriage should be required. This would be deterrent and prevent the horrid spectacle of a divorce in the morning and a wedding at night.

"There should be a divorce law, but it should be safeguarded. The greater the ease for procuring a divorce the greater the number of cases."

MAKING CITIZENS

THE CHANGE WHICH HAS BEEN MADE IN THE STATE REFORMATORY AT MILLEDGEVILLE IS AS IMPORTANT, IN A WAY, AS THE ABOLISHMENT OF THE CONVICT LEASE SYSTEM. IN THE BEGINNING, THE REFORMATORY WAS A CORRECTIVE INSTITUTION ONLY IN NAME, AND WAS A JUVENILE PENITENTIARY IN REALITY. BUT IT IS NOW BEING DEVELOPED INTO AN INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL FOR WAYWARD BOYS. THE GREATER PART OF THE YOUNG FELLOWS SENT TO THIS INSTITUTION ARE CRIMINAL ONLY IN HABIT AND NOT IN NATURE. RIGHT TRAINING IS ALL THEY NEED TO READJUST THEIR HABIT OF THOUGHT AND CONDUCT AND CONVERT THEM INTO GOOD CITIZENS. THIS IS THE WORK TO WHICH THE STATE HAS SET ITSELF—A WORK WHICH, AFTER ALL, IS MORE IMPORTANT THAN THE PENAL SYSTEM AS IT APPLIES TO CONVICTS



THE state reformatory at Milledgeville has been changed from a penitentiary for juveniles to a home for wayward or untrained boys.

During the investigation of the convict lease system, the reformatory was described as a penitentiary rather than as a place of correction.

Negro and white juveniles occupied the same building and were prisoners together in the same prison.

Joseph E. Lovvorn, who has since been appointed superintendent, found this condition to exist upon his first visit to the reformatory. But within a few years' time, he and the prison commission have succeeded in making a desirable change.

The improvement wrought has come almost unnoticed in the attention given to the convict system. But the betterment in the condition of convicts has been thrown off, and the institution improvement of the reformatory.

In a way, the change in the reformatory from a juvenile penitentiary to a home, has had an even greater effect. The reformation of convicts is always doubtful, but the training of wayward boys is seldm, or never, impossible.

They are the offenders whom the state can change from good to bad, and who can be made into helpful rather than mischievous citizens.

The convict system is corrective in its purpose, and preventive in its effects. But the home for wayward boys is the institution where reformation is a fact as well as a theory.

BUILDING OVER BOYS.

This reformatory is now actually engaged upon the work of building over the boys sent there for detention. Its entire course of management has changed, the air of a penitentiary been thrown off, and the institution begun upon the work for which it intended.

Facilities are inadequate, and both superintendent Lovvorn and the prison commission find that they can accomplish but a part of what they wish. But, at least, the reformatory has changed from the mistaken course which it was following at the time of the convict lease investigation; and has begun upon a plan of reformation.

This mere change in principles is one of much importance. It was a worthy part of the improvement in the penal system, and one that will bear good fruit.

During the seven years existence of the institution, 500 boys have been received there. At this time the population of the home is sixty-one white juveniles and 120 negroes.

The reformatory in the beginning would have been merely a place of imprisonment for these boys. Now, it is a place of correction, of improvement, of training. The means of education are few and crude, but as far as its limitations will permit, the reformatory is making these boys into good citizens.

Chief of all, a wholesome atmosphere is thrown around the home. Instead of being prisoners, the boys are scholars; they are students at a school of right-living and of right-thinking.

For the most part, they have found their way to the home because of a misconception of what is lawful. A few, perhaps, are morally warped; but inmates of the home are chiefly normal boys who have been misled by conditions into state offenses.

PROPER TRAINING NEEDED.

They have been convicted of larceny and of various other crimes, but few are criminal by nature. They need nothing more than proper guidance to correct their first wayward tendencies. Intelligent training, a wholesome influence, will re-adjust their habit of thought and conduct.

After all, the misdeeds which placed them in the reformatory are but habit. Because of companionship or environment they fell into a disregard for conventions and laws which results in their offenses.

They have been unfortunate in their condition of life, and it is the purpose of the reformatory to counteract this hurtful influence. In other words, to replace bad with good habits.

Before the investigation of the convict lease system, the reformatory did little toward this end. Wayward boys were treated as prisoners, and they ended by becoming prisoners. The reformatory accomplished little in the way of reformation, and had a negligible part in bettering the citizenship of the state.

The charge from this attitude to an earnest one in behalf of the boys detained at the institution is of the utmost importance. It means that about 100 boys yearly receive training, which tends to make them efficient and honest; although a few years ago conditions at the reformatory tended to encourage them in their misetaken ways.

The change in the reformatory really has been the change from a penal to a corrective institution.

In time the change will be even greater, this home for wayward boys will become an industrial school, juveniles who are sent there will be trained in various trades, and the state will begin to do its full duty by them.

In the greatest number of instances, unfortunate economic conditions is the criminal tendency that has placed these boys in the care of the state. They scarcely are to be blamed and their condition is an appeal for aid that the state can ill afford to ignore.

THE PLEA OF JUSTICE.

In simple justice, they should be given the chance which misfortune at first denied them. The prison commission and the superintendent recognize this truth, and are endeavoring to give every help within their means to juveniles at the reformatory.

When the convict lease system was abolished the prison commission made a beginning toward the betterment of conditions at the reformatory by separating white and negro juveniles.

The two races now occupy different buildings, and never come into contact. They are employed at different duties, and are as widely separated as though in different institutions.

But this condition has not always prevailed. At one time, juveniles of all conditions, of all ages, and of both races, were thrown together; and the whole air of the instittuion was that of a penitentiary rather than of a reformatory.

The success of the prison commission in changing this condition until the reformatory became an institution which was corrective in effect as well as in name has been a most worthy accomplishment.

After the separation of the races, the reformatory set about providing means for the training of boys. Bit by bit, the first attempts were made at industrial schooling. A wood shop and a blacksmith shop were set up, and to these were added instruction such as the youngest pupils of public schools receive.

The way in which the blacksmith shop was built illustrates the slow, but determined, growth of the reformatory.

BUILDING THE SHOP.

Superintendent Lovvorn was convinced that no training could be so practical and helpful for the boys in his care as industrial work. They needed carpentering and horse-shoeing for their physical and mental welfare.

The fact that the state had no money to spare for the industrial training of its charges at the reformatory was an obstacle. But about this time the superintendent had fallen into the habit of providing necessities which seemed beyond the state's resources. When he was told that this or that was too expensive, he agreed, and then found the means of obtaining it.

A kind neighbor of the reformatory's felt a sympathy in these first efforts to establish an industrial school, and added an anvil that was a relic of the old war days. When Sherman marched to the sea, a part of his calvarymen used this old anvil to shoe their horses.

But even though that first company of Georgians whom Oglethorpe brought over, had included the anvil in their baggage, it would have served the reformatory. You see, the institution meant to quit being a juvenile penitentiary and begin being a reformatory and also an industrial school; and the age or condition of the anvil didn't matter. It was enough to make a start, and that beginning was had when the old anvil was set up in the middle of the yard, with no shelter over it, only an old hammer or so as equipment—just about such a contrivance as men of the stone age might have had.

The tools of the blacksmith were added one by one. Superintendent Lovvorn saw to that; and finally, one day, when several members of the prison commission came upon a trip of inspection, they found a blacksmith shop in full blast, under the open sky.

When these members of the commission went away they were determined that a shelter should be built for the shop if the state had to go bankrupt. And the shelter was built, and in time provision was made for a woodshop.

CLASSROOM STUDIES.

The classroom studies were advanced to the fourth or fifth grade, farming was taught, but above all a wholesome, homelike air was given to the institution. It began to develop, and it continues because the superintendent and the prison commission are determined that it shall advance toward the goal for which it has set forth.

But it is pitifully in need of better equipment, of greater opportunity for the boys in its care. The means of industrial training are but a mere beginning; the classroom studies are altogether insufficient.

The state has only begun in its efforts to benefit these boys who will later be a part of its citizenship. It seems that the needs of these inmates of the reformatory are just beginning to be understood.

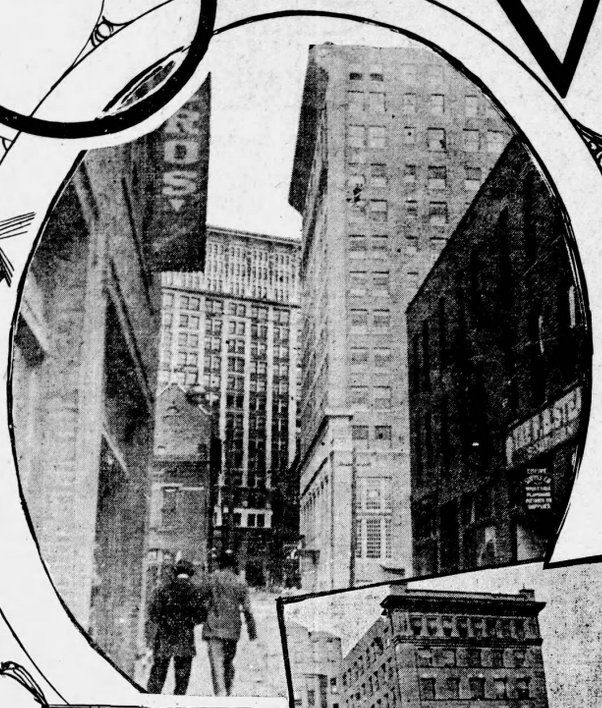
Most of the white boys received there are illiterate—they are totally untrained. Strange to say, a larger percentage of the negroes can read and write. But none of those detained at the reformatory has had fair opportunity. All are poorly equipped for life, and their detention at the home is almost inevitable.

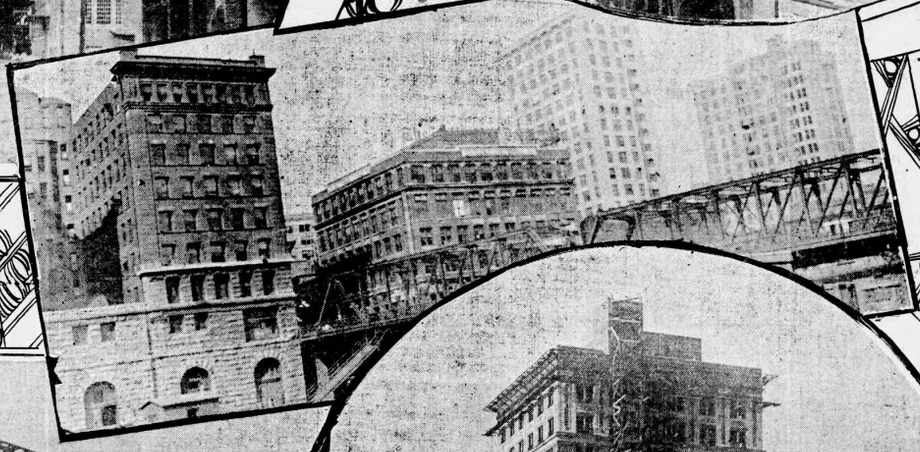
This is their condition, and this is the need that the state has set about answering.

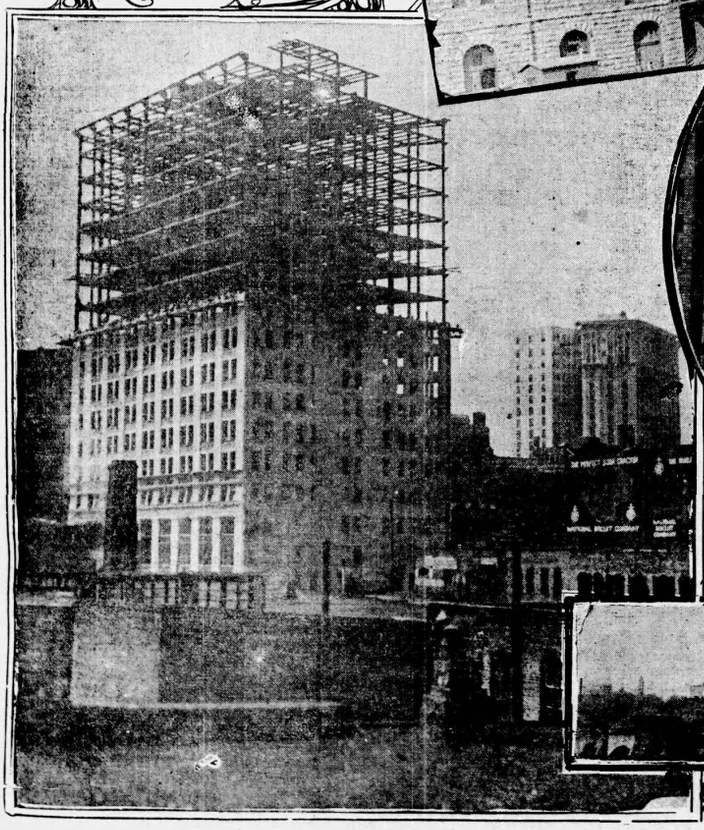
The beginning has been feeble and inadequate, but it is the hope of the prison commission and of the superintendent that the reformatory eventually will become an industrial school.

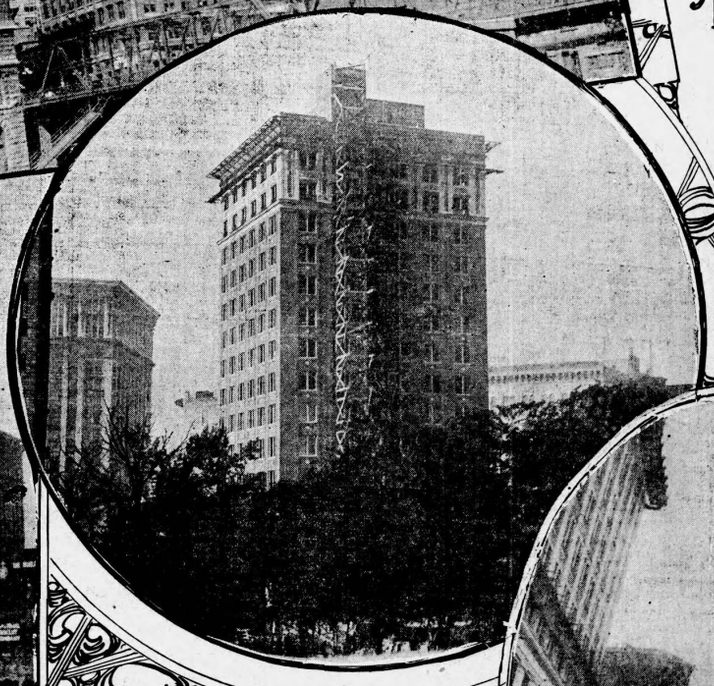
ODD VIEWS of A NEW ATLANTA

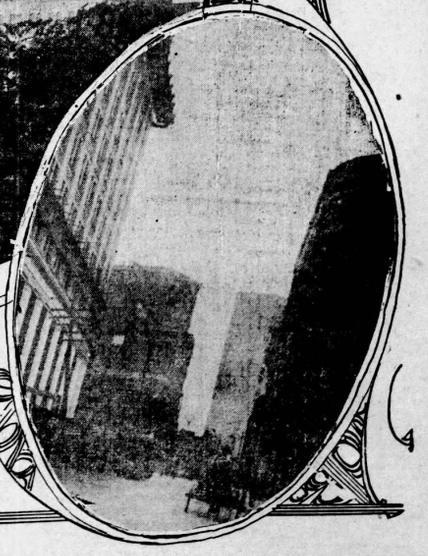
CAN YOU RECOGNIZE THEM ?











SHUT your eyes, open them, and another building has appeared on Atlanta's sky line. If this city had an Alladin's lamp all its own, it couldn't go in much more for magic in the way of building. You may think that you realize this, but unless you have spent several hours recently looking about to see what the builders are doing, you can't realize the additions that are being made to Atlanta's skyline, and the rapid manner in which the city is changing in appearance. Every day it grows a little more cosmopolitan. It reaches a little nearer to the sky with its tall buildings. It occupies the vacant spots. It tears down the old buildings and replaces them with new ones

LAGRANGE, Ga., June 19.—The LaGrange chamber of commerce is planning taking over the whole of Troup county under its general care, and developing the county along lines of the most modern farm methods in America. The development will be carried forward in three sections, as follows:

First. Under the direction of the chamber of commerce a land company will take over large tracts in the county and subdivide into farms of 100 acres each. These farms will be located together in what is to be termed "neighborhoods;" in the center of each neighborhood there is to be erected a school house. From ten to twenty-five farms will form a neighborhood. Each farm in the neighborhood will be put in thoroughly modern condition before any neighborhood is put on the market for settlers. On each farm will be erected modern barns, elegant homes, and full water system in each settlement. For the first three years all those entering a neighborhood will have to farm along given lines and under direction of the chamber of commerce and the land company. The land company will keep gangs of workmen on hand and modern machinery so that farmers in these neighborhoods having sickness or labor troubles can call for help and have their farms worked at cost. When the neighborhoods are ready for tenants they will be turned over to the chamber of commerce to be settled with proper tenants.

Second. The chamber of commerce will open a farm department and undertake to direct the farming of the entire county, regular bulletins and instructions being sent out each week, and inquiries answered, telling just what to do and how to do it along the most approved plans. All property owners in the county will be asked to sign an agreement to force tenants to farm under the general direction of the chamber of commerce farm department. Part of the pledge will embody the agreement to plant four acres of corn, one acre of sorghum and one acre of oats to every plow worked on the farm. This will make the cotton produced all profit if a little meat is raised in addition. Already dozens have come to the chairman of the board of directors and expressed their willingness to sign the agreement.

Third. An annual county fair will be held for the next five years at which time ocular demonstration will be made of the results accruing from the methods being used, and tremendous premiums will be offered each year intended to increase the production, in the county, rather than to make the farmers produce freak or unusual specimens of any given crop. Premiums will be offered for general production and not for individual matters.

The leading features of the plan have been worked out by E. B. Clarke, chairman of the board of directors of the LaGrange chamber of commerce since its organization, and president of the E. B. Clarke company. His plans and ideas have the hearty indorsement of the president of the chamber of commerce and every member of the board of directors.

The membership of the board of directors is as follows: E. B. Clarke, chairman; Hon. J. G. Truitt, Mr. J. H. Edmondson, Mr. W. S. Davis, Mr. C. N. Pike, Mr. John D. Faver, Mr. Ely R. Callaway, Mr. J. A. Perry, Col. A. H. Thompson, Mr. H. H. Childs, Mr. H. W. Caldwell. The ex-officio members of the board are Hon. W. A. Reeves, president of the board; Mr. R. L. Render, vice president of the board, and Mr. R. C. Key, treasurer of the board.

Early last fall the chairman of the board of directors of the chamber of commerce, at a meeting well attended by the members, brought before the body the vital necessity for the chamber of commerce to take hold and get to work on a systematic plan for the development of the rural sections of the county along the most modern and approved lines. His ideas were fully indorsed and steps were taken to investigate and start as early as possible the development of the entire county.

WILL ESTABLISH "NEIGHBORHOODS."

Plans have at last come to fruition and work will be commenced at once and pushed forward for the next five years which will more than double or treble the value of every acre of land in Troup county, and make the entire county a veritable rejuvenated "Garden of Eden."

To Mr. E. B. Clark, chairman of the board of directors of the chamber, is largely due the credit for the early fruition of the plans of the chamber of commerce. The work will be conducted along a three-fold line: Through a land company which will buy and develop the property of the county and subdivide all the county into 100-acers farms, the farms to be in settlements of ten to twenty-five farms; second, through a systematic direction of the farming of the county, to be conducted through the chamber of commerce, by which the nature, amount and manner of cultivation of the farm production will be directed on approved lines; and third, through the holding of annual county fairs through which will be vividly demonstrated the practical nature of the work under way and proof given of the actual progress made from year to year.

All three of the departments of the work are now well under way, and within a year's time it is believed that every acre of land in the county will be increased in value not less than 50 per cent, and the production of the county more than doubled, and along lines that will emancipate the farmer from labor troubles and the shipping into the county of corn, hay and meat.

No chamber of commerce in the state of Georgia is better fitted for the herculean task laid out than the one located at LaGrange. Not only has it wealth in its membership and a county abundantly productive with citizenship wealthy and aggressive, but it has both an official and office organization which in many respects is superior to any organization of its kind in the south.

The president of the organization is Hon. W. A. Reeves, who is vice president and general manager of the Troup county, a $200,000 fertilizer manufacturing concern, and a man who is level-headed and progressive to the last limit. The chairman of the board of directors is Mr. E. B. Clark, president of the E. B. Clark company, which company will have charge of the land development to go on in the county directed by the chamber of commerce. Mr. Clark is both a farmer and business man, and has come up from a poor boy to his present position of respect and influence in the community as a result of hard work and sound business judgment.

Amongst the membership of the chamber of commerce are such men as Hon. Fuller E. Callaway, known throughout the nation as a man of money, sagacity and power; Hon. J. E. Dunson, who is one of the wealthiest men in the state and one of its shrewdest business men; Hon. J. G. Truitt, who is a large realty holder in Atlanta and has large stockholdings in the Realty Trust company there and is one of its directors. These men and dozens of others not quite as prominent but equally as powerful and dependable, all go to make up the membership and offi-

REMODELING LAST YEAR'S DRESS

THE tunic is the open sesame of today's stylish gown. In it are endless possibilities for reclaiming last year's frock by bringing it up to the fashion-mark of today. A tunic of cotton voile or crepon over last year's dress of silk or linen will add another dress to your wardrobe. Any dress in the hands of an interested needlewoman with this Paris group in view should easily undergo a transformation that will combine low cost with fashionable success.

At the left a tunic of flowered cotton voile successfully trims a blue taffeta frock. The tunic is the thing. This is made with narrow crossed revers of taffeta edged with white voile hemstitched. This plain white voile forms the cuffs and the deep hem of the tunic. There are long sleeves, and fullness at the bodice and skirt is gathered in under a crushed girdle of taffeta. The space between the surplice lines is filled in with a plain piece of white voile hemstitched at the upper line.

There is a decided vogue of flowered tunics combined with plain fabrics, and this first model should serve as a hint for changing any frock of linen or voile.

Next in the interesting array is a dark-brown silk gown, which is given a modern note by the tunic of wine-colored cotton crepon. This forms a double-pointed bib on the bodice. There is a full skirt which hangs down to the knees. The conventional roses are embroidered in simple outline stitch filled in with French knots in shades of cerise. There is a girdle of brown silk crossed in front and tied at the left side of the back in a knot and ends.

The kimono sleeves are three-quarter length, edged with turned-back cuffs embroidered to match the tunic. A shallow yoke of shirred tulle completes the bodice. Why cannot you have an up-to-date frock like this one to replace an "impossible" dress of last season?

In the central figure there is an artistic use of drapery in soft maquisetts. This is in white with a blue coinspot border. The tunic consists of folds of the material crossed in surplice line fastening at one side. The skirt also is crossed and falls in soft folds around the hips, the border forming a point at one side. Under the tunic is blue linen rescued from last year's wardrobe, and unless treated in this way it would ordinarily be discarded. The top of the bodice is cut low in a round line and the sleeves are seven-eighths length in the tight style.

A short tunic is shown in the next model. It is one of white voile embroidered in blue and pink flowers after the tunic has been completed. These outline the bell-shaped sleeves, the draped line of the tunic and the straight bib effect on the blouse. The bodice is plain, with kimono sleeves. There is a fullness in the short peplum, which drops down to points at the sides and is cut in a straight line across the back. A girdle of voile defines the waist line. Under this is a skirt of pink linen. Around the top of the bodice is a ruching of pink-and-black tulle or maline.

The Russian tunic is a great favorite and at the side of the group is a model in pale pink cotton voile over an underskirt of corbeau-blue satin. This combination of pink and blue is seen everywhere in Paris. The tunic has a side fastening. Short kimono sleeves are edged with ruffles of voile. Embroidery in heavy white cotton follows the side line and the lower edge of the tunic. A blue satin girdle finishes the model, with a touch of dark blue tulle (which is really set on this side of the water) forming an irregular bib effect with a pleating at the top of the bodice.

Before closing your eyes to these beauties, glance at the hats. The stiffly wired bonnet of roses on the fabric hat of mousseline over silk is an excellent example of the garden hat that always returns to favor in midsummer.

In the small hat there is a slightly rolled brim and a broad band of velvet ribbon caught with a buckle in front and ending in loops behind.

Tulle is back again, as is shown in the small turban edged with velvet and trimmed with a wired bow at the back.

The combination of satin faced with straw is shown in the last hat, which has a new arrangement of the plume at one side. A silk scarf is tied around the crown.

French Fashion Notes

PARIS, June 12.

EVEN though Paris attends the sporting fetes with its customary devotion, conferences continue to be a fashionable pastime. Many of the theaters are combining the conference with an afternoon tea, and these are well attended by the elite. At the Academie recently a most representative audience wore costumes of marvelous beauty, and especially noteworthy was a Paquin creation of "bleu canard moire." The coat was very open and trimmed with a wired bow at the back.

A narrow band of gray moire outlined the extreme edge and the revers turned back to reveal the corsage composed entirely of tiny rachinas of malline lace. The skirt was draped below the knees and a knot of gray moire caught up the drapery at one side.

Another toilette much commented upon had a vest of Parma violet, which was cut square with the waist line. About the neck of this black crepe de chine model was worn a collarette of violet mousseline de soie. A very deep yoke was fitted over the hips and the skirt drawn away caught up in front with a knot of violet to match the vest. A belt of black satin rolled loosely about the waist and fastened at the side with a knot and long end, which extended to the hem of the skirt. With this costume was worn a hat of black satin straw adorned with violet plumes.

A smart gown of brown mousseline de soie was draped across the front in Grecian style and a collar of ecru malline lace was slightly fulled about the Vallandi neck line.

Many picturesque gowns appeared at Longchamps Sunday, and one of the most successful was of mustard-colored tussore. The skirt, gathered to the waist, was full about the hips and drawn tightly about the feet. Over this was a mantle tunic, the sleeves of which were loose and pointed; a Medici collar of dotted tulle with a fine wire passed through the edge extended above the cellarless mantle.

The modes this season are widely varied. This is forced upon one who frequents the fashionable gatherings. Each woman interprets the fashions which her couturier offers her in a manner to enhance her charms. The lines in many instances, the contrary. Lately, however, combination characterizes up-to-date elegance.

The elaborate embroideries done with brilliant colors continue to be smiled upon, and those of Byzantine, Roumanian, Persian and Valdaque design are utilized in every possible manner.

Collars are constantly appearing in a new phase and, whether of the Medici or Dutch style, have original touches which make them irresistible. The neck must be free and uncovered, and it is to be hoped that this fashion continues in favor.

One of the quaintest fashions introduced recently is the wearing of gloves with extremely long uppers. These are pushed up into manifold creases about the arm.

The heelless slipper of soft, pliable leather, laced halfway to the knees with narrow ribbon, is being worn by many of fashion's devotees.

CONCERNING HEALTH and BEAUTY

By MRS. HENRY SYMES

HINTS to the VACATIONIST

Sit on a Cushion

Wear a Sweater After Bathing

I AM presuming, and earnestly hoping, that every one of my readers takes a vacation each year. Every one needs a relief from the regular routine of duties, whether they be performed in the house, office, factory, shop or in the social field. The person who boasts that he or she does not need a vacation will sooner or later grate on his own and other people's nerves just because the constant strain will finally become too much to bear.

The vacation period should be a carefree time; but some of us, I am afraid, carry this freedom a little too far. I mean that we rush into pleasures without taking any thought of the after effect. Do not think that I want you to be a wax figure; far from it! I urge you to live in the open air and bright sunshine as much as possible; but take every precaution so that the skin will not be burnt.

This care should be taken particularly at the seashore. The arms, face and neck should be thoroughly saturated with olive oil or smeared with cold cream before one goes in bathing, to prevent the skin from burning.

It is also well to protect the hair from the water. This may easily be done by twisting a stocking into a cable and pinning it around the head. Over this slip the rubber cap and then don the pretty bathing hat. Now the hair removed from sight will decrease the beauty of any pretty face, so that it is quite a good idea to wear false bangs and curls. These can be easily removed and hung up to dry without any bother or discomfort to the wearer when the frolic in the water is over.

If you have failed to take any of these preliminary steps before bathing and your hair becomes wet, be sure to let it dry thoroughly immediately after you have shaken off the water. This may be done while strolling or running up and down the beach. During this exercise a sweater should be worn so that one will not take cold. The water reduces one's temperature and makes one more susceptible to a cold.

Some of you will be spending your vacation in the country. Few of you, no doubt, have had the opportunity of studying nature and therefore are not able to detect the poisonous plants and berries from those which are quite harmless. For this reason I warn all of you not to touch those which are unknown to you.

If, by any chance, you should suffer from ivy poison, try to secure some plantain leaves, which will give great relief. I shall tell you how you can distinguish the plantain leaf.

First of all, it grows low down among the grass, many leaves springing from the one center. The leaf is long, oval and green, with parallel veins running lengthwise. It should be torn and crushed between the fingers and the green juice applied directly to the inflamed, poisoned spot of the skin. A little poultice can be made of these leaves in your fine handkerchief and bound around the finger or hand. In case of poisoning, an ounce of prevention is certainly worth a pound of cure.

Sitting on the grass when it is dry will never do any harm, but it is when the grass and ground are damp that much damage might be done. Therefore, a little hint regarding the importance of sitting on a pillow will not come amiss right here. Once more the ounce of prevention is worth while.

When sitting out in the sun to read, sew or merely to rest it is well to protect the eyes from the strong glare with an umbrella. Now, no one likes to carry an umbrella on a rainy day, so I do not propose to have you hold an umbrella while the sun is out in all its glory. Ask one of the farm hands for a pitchfork. To its handle fasten your umbrella securely and then thrust the prongs into the ground. Could you wish for a better tent? Its portable quality should appeal to you all.

To get the most benefit out of your holiday keep in a happy frame of mind. Let nothing ruffle your temper and try to be considerate of others. Take your vacation in earnest, as you should work in earnest. Forget your work, and with a free body and mind let your much-needed trip give you rest and strength for future duties.

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

REPLIES to letters sent to the writer of this department will be printed in regular order; but no replies in print may be expected in less than three or four weeks.

Correspondents desiring immediate replies to queries may get them by inclosing a stamped self-addressed envelope. Personal inquiries will receive prompt attention if accompanied by a stamped and self-addressed envelope.

For the Eyebrows

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Please tell me what I may use to increase the growth of my eyebrows.
FLORENCE.

Vaseline applied to the eyebrows at night will stimulate the growth of them. It is a good thing to keep a tiny eyebrow brush and use it every day, training the hair carefully. The brushing stimulates the hair roots.

Bald Spots

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Will you kindly tell me what I can do to cover some bald spots on my head? I have had a slight fever and my hair has fallen out in places.
DORIS.

Following is the recipe for a tonic which will improve the condition of your hair:

Distilled rosewater	6 ounces
Aromatic vinegar	6 drams
Pure glycerin	2½ ounces
Tincture nux vomica	½ ounce
Tincture cantharides	½ ounces

Mix thoroughly. Apply in morning.

Another very efficient remedy for bald spots is made as follows:

Salicylic acid	10 grains
Resorcin	1 drachm
Phenol	5 drops
Lanolin (or vaseline)	1 ounce

Rub into the part night and morning.

A Hair Oil

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Will you please give me the recipe for a hair oil?
BEATRICE.

A very splendid hair oil is made of:

Sweet castor oil	2 ounces
Cocoanut oil	2 ounces
Oil of rosemary	1 dram
Oil of jasmine	½ dram

Mix oils with gentle heat. Bottle. Shake for five minutes with water.

Perspiring Feet

Dear Mrs. Symes.
I shall be most grateful if you will only give me a recipe to be used on perspiring feet.
SUSAN.

Following is the recipe you desire:

For Perspiring Feet

Salicylic acid	20 scruples
Boracic acid	1 ounce
Talcum powder	1 ounce

Croup and Mosquito Bites

Dear Mrs. Symes.
I heard you say that if turpentine is good in cases of croup, it must be good for other ailments. What do you find helpful for relieving the itching of mosquito bites?
SALLY.

Turpentine is one of the best remedies for croup. Saturate a piece of flannel with it and apply to the throat and chest.

To relieve the itching put moistened salt over the swollen part and bind tightly.

Callous Feet

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Please tell me of an inexpensive cure for callous feet.
BERTHA.

After bathing the feet in warm, soapy water, dry them and rub the callous parts with a piece of toilet pumice and then anoint with a little cold cream.

For Tender Feet

Dear Mrs. Symes.
I have heard that salt water is very good for tender feet. Please tell me how to use it, for I am forced to stand all day and by night time my feet are very sore and tired.
ANXIOUS.

Bathing the feet in salt water will give you great relief. To a gallon of water add a handful of salt. Have the water as hot as can be comfortably borne, immerse the feet and throw the water up over the knees with the hands. When the water grows cool rub the feet and limbs with a rough dry towel. You should not wear the same pair of shoes and stockings two days in succession. A change each day will be found most helpful.

Oily Hair

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Will you kindly tell me what I can do for my hair, which is very oily?
WINIFRED.

The oily condition of the hair is due to a poor circulation, and the best cure for it is a vigorous scalp massage. Shampoo your head as often as it is necessary, but be sure to dry it thoroughly after every washing. Every day rub the lotion for which I am inclosing the recipe into your scalp:

Formula for Oily Hair

Alcohol	2 ounces
Witch hazel	2 ounces
Resorcin	14 grains

To Develop the Chest

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Will you please give me an exercise that will fill out the chest?
W. T.

Also give me the recipe for a glove cosmetic.
W. T.

Following are the directions for an exercise which will expand the chest:

Depress the chest, letting the shoulders come forward, with the head up and back. Raise the chest by muscular effort, not by breathing, to the point of greatest expansion. Raise and lower the chest in this way eight times.

To make a glove cosmetic use soft, large kid or cloth gloves, three or four sizes too large. Rip them open and spread the inside with the following preparation, then sew the ripped seam up:

Cosmetic Glove Paste

Ground barley, the white of an egg, a teaspoonful of glycerin and 1 ounce of honey.

Perspiring Hands

Dear Mrs. Symes.
I should like to know you very much if you will give me a relief for perspiring hands.
W. T.

A remedy for perspiring hands is made of:

Tincture of belladonna	½ ounce
Cologne water	3 ounces

Mix. Use the liquid whenever you choose during the day, and at night after first washing the hands in hot water and drying them thoroughly and carefully. Rub the lotion well into the skin.

Keep the mixture out of the way of ignorant persons and children.

Recipe for a Cold Cream

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Will you kindly print your recipe for the witch hazel cold cream?
A MOTHER.

Here is the recipe for the cream:

Witch Hazel Cold Cream

White wax	1 ounce
Spermaceti	1 ounce
Oil of almonds	¼ pint

Melt, pour into a mortar which has been heated by being immersed some time in boiling water. Very gradually add 3 ounces of rosewater and 1 ounce of witch hazel, and assiduously stir the mixture until an emulsion is formed, and afterward until the mixture is nearly cold.

This cream is particularly useful to heal sore or scratched skin.

A Mouthwash

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Will you please tell me what I can use for a mouthwash?
PETE.

A very good mouthwash consists of:

Oil of sage	2¾ fluid drams
Oil of lemon	2¾ fluid drams
Alcohol	5½ fluid ounces
Water	2¾ fluid ounces

A Complexion Clearer

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Have you a recipe, containing sulphur, for clearing the complexion? If so, please publish it as soon as possible.
MABEL.

The following treatment is excellent for clearing the complexion: Rub the face over, just before washing it, with 2 teaspoonfuls of flowers of sulphur mixed in half a pint of new milk. This mixture should stand a little while before it is used on the face.

To Remove Stains From the Hands

Dear Mrs. Symes.
I am a young housekeeper and have such a difficulty to remove stains from my hands. Will you kindly tell me what I may use?
FREIDA L. P.

Lemon, borax or ammonia is excellent for removing stains from the hands. Every housekeeper should keep in her home lemons, for they are splendid for whitening and softening the skin, especially after any hard labor.

A Rest Is Necessary

Dear Mrs. Symes.
I am a stenographer and frequently I do not go out during my noon hour. Do you think this will prove injurious to my health if I keep up the practice?
KATHERINE.

I do not think that the close confinement, from morning until evening will do you any good. If you eat your lunch in the office, go out for a walk in the fresh air after you have finished eating. You will find that you will be in a much better condition to continue with the work in the afternoon.

A Cure for Constipation

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Please tell me a harmless cure for constipation.
S. F. G.

A splendid cure for this trouble is made of 1 pound each of figs, dates and raisins and a pinch of senna leaves. When all have been mixed thoroughly, cut the mixture into pieces the size of a walnut and take one or two if necessary every night before retiring.

The Hair Remedy

Dear Mrs. Symes,
I have been told that it is possible to remove a wart with a hair. Is this true and if so how it is done?
Will ammonia and peroxide remove superfluous hair?
SOPHIE.

A wart can be removed by tying a hair tightly around its roots. In a few days the wart will shrivel and drop off.

Regular applications of peroxide and ammonia will in time kill the roots of superfluous hairs. You must not, however, expect quick results, for the process is very slow.
ADA.

Sleeplessness

Dear Mrs. Symes,
So often I have such difficulty to get asleep. But I notice that when that is the case my feet are usually cold. Is this the cause of sleeplessness?
ADA.

Cold feet often are responsible for sleeplessness. It is a mistake to go to bed when the feet are cold. A hot mustard foot bath or a brisk rubbing with salt will quicken the circulation and make them warm.

A Toilet Powder

Dear Mrs. Symes.
Will you please tell me how to make a pleasant toilet powder?
STELLA.

To make a powder take:

Starch powder	¼ pound
Powdered orris root	½ ounce
Oil of geranium	15 drops

Crush free from lumps. Add the perfume drop by drop at a time.

To make a pink powder for the face, add carmine to above recipe. It is best to mix the carmine with alcohol first and then add to the toilet powder.

Remedy for Freckles and Tan

Dear Mrs. Symes:
As soon as convenient will you please tell me what I must do to remove freckles and tan from my face?
ELEANOR.

First of all cleanse the face with hot water and green soap. Rinse and dry it and then apply lemon juice. You should be most particular to protect your face from the sun, since your skin is so easily affected. Cold cream and powder should be used on it freely and a hat worn or a parasol carried.

ADVICE ON SOCIAL CUSTOMS

Mrs. Chesta Adams most cordially invites perplexed to bring to her their Social Problems and Perplexities by letter at any time

If a personal reply is desired, a self-addressed stamped envelope should be inclosed.

SOME HALLMARKS

YOU know that silver is stamped in the assay offices with a rating that is known as soon as an experienced eye sees it. These hallmarks have their counterparts in other walks of life. There are hallmarks of good breeding, as easily discerned by any one interested as those on silver. Here are some of them.

I think that the refined woman never dresses in a conspicuously extreme style. As soon as a woman dons an ultra style, placing herself outside the majority of well-dressed women, she is calling attention to herself; she is doing something against her refined better nature. The golden mean, plus individuality, of course, is a hallmark of far greater value.

The voice is a hallmark by which much can be judged. We may not be golden voiced contraltos or silvery sopranos, but whatever the quality there can be a well-modulated, musical quality which by determination can be acquired. Listen to a cultured, refined woman. Her voice will bespeak her good breeding. The loud, boisterous voice, the shrill, nasal tone, the harsh, rasping quality speak decidedly against the owners. If you have room to improve, do so.

I think the overcurious person is ill-bred. Just as soon as I see a woman straining to see who is passing, edging herself into a crowd at a wedding or, slyly to inspect foreigners, asking impolite questions concerning prices, personal business and affairs not her own, I feel as if she were showing me the hallmark of her training and her lack of refinement in manners.

A hallmark of the real refinement is shown when an accident happens to a stranger. If I see a young woman convulsed at an unfortunate being who has fallen on the pavement, torn her dress, been splashed with mud or has had any of the everyday accidents happen, I mark the laugher, no matter in what "social" circle she may belong, as lacking in kindness, which is the basis of all good manners.

Hallmarks are shown in your treatment of older persons. These may be your parents or the little old lady crossing the street. You do not have to be acquainted with them. Your actions speak for or against your personal rating. Correcting, disagreeing with an older person's views, discourteously denying another older man or woman the right to think or act, are stamps against you.

Gossiping is a hallmark of the illbred woman. I care not who she is. If she relishes a little scandal and passes on gossip even at its most harmless phase, the woman who gossips is stamped below good value. A hostess should not allow gossiping in her home and, by a polite turning of the conversation into other channels, should give a sign of her disapproval. If she joins in, she is classing herself with the gossips.

Yes, there are certainly hallmarks which show you at your true worth. Have you ever noticed them? Be careful, and if you are giving wrong impressions, correct them.

Solutions to Social Problems

After the Ceremony

Dear Mrs. Adams,
At a home wedding, what would be the correct thing for me to say to my brother and his wife after D. D. T.?

To the bride you may say, "Let me wish you every happiness in your married life." To the groom you may offer hearty congratulations on his supreme good fortune.

Sending Flowers

Dear Mrs. Adams,
I have called on a girl several times and have taken her to the theater a few times. She is now ill, and I would like to know if it would be proper for me to send flowers to her.
JIM.

Quite proper.

Answering an Informal Invitation

Dear Mrs. Adams,
Will you please tell me how to reply to an invitation in the form of a visiting card? The letters R. S. V. P. were on the card.
K. P.

The answer to such an invitation should be written on notepaper and worded in the third person.

First to Be Served

Dear Mrs. Adams,
Will you kindly tell me who should be served first at a luncheon, the hostess or the guest of honor?
INQUISITIVE.

The guest of honor is served first, the other guests next and the hostess last of all.

Bracelets Outside

Dear Mrs. Adams,
Is it proper to wear bracelets on the outside of the long gloves?
ELLEN.

It is not in good taste to do so.

An Incorrect Form

Dear Mrs. Adams,
Is it correct form to address a note to the wife of a minister in the following form: "Mrs. Rev. William Jones"?

This is not a correct form. The fact that the degree has been conferred upon Mr. Jones does not give the wife the right to use the title.

Signing Their Names

Dear Mrs. Adams,
When a husband and wife go to a hotel should each one sign his name on the register?
ANXIOUS.

The husband signs for both. The wife may remain in the reception room until such preliminaries are over and they are escorted to their rooms.

Calling on a Debutante

Dear Mrs. Adams,
When young men are asked to a debutante's reception, are they expected to call again if they have attended it?
JACK.

It is their privilege to do so. Their invitation to the reception places them upon the social list of the young woman in question.

Wedding Announcements

Dear Mrs. Adams,
Are wedding announcements ever sent out before the marriage takes place?
EDNA.

No. Announcements are not sent out until the marriage ceremony is over. It is customary to mail them the same day of the wedding.

Escorting Two Women

Dear Mrs. Adams,
When a man is escorting two women, should he walk between them and should he offer his arm?
WILLIAM.

The women should walk side by side and their escort should walk along the curb side of the pavement. A man should not offer his arm unless there is great need of his assistance, and in this case he should offer it to the elder of the two women.

Issuing Wedding Invitations

Dear Mrs. Adams,
When a woman is married the second time are the invitations issued in the name of the bride's parents or in her own name?
FLORENCE K.

In the name of the bride's parents.

The New Neighbor

Dear Mrs. Adams,
What does one say to a new neighbor when one goes to call on her? Of course the two persons in question have never been introduced and that is the sticking point.
PERPLEXED.

The caller introduces herself and informs the newcomer that she is a neighbor and wishes to prove a friendly and desirable one. This step taken, conversation will very readily start.

A Letter of Introduction

Dear Mrs. Adams,
What is the proper thing to do when I receive a letter of introduction to a girl?
RALPH C.

You should call promptly upon your friend's friend, and follow the visit by an invitation to some place of amusement.

Announcing the Engagement

Dear Mrs. Adams,
Who announces the engagement of a man and woman, his or her parents?
L. M. N.

The girl's parents usually announce the engagement.

On the Wedding Gown

Dear Mrs. Adams,
Is it necessary for a bride to have a train on a wedding gown?
BRIDE-ELECT.

If the bride wears a veil the gown should have a train, although it need not be a long one. If she wears a hat she may follow her own preference.

Acknowledging Gifts

Dear Mrs. Adams,
When should wedding gifts be acknowledged? Should the note be written in the singular or the plural?
RUTH.

Wedding gifts should be acknowledged as soon as they are received. The notes are written by the bride and in the singular.

On the Card

Dear Mrs. Adams,
To settle a dispute will you please inform me whether it is ever proper to have a visiting card printed?
L. P.

Visiting cards should always be engraved. A card used exclusively for business purposes may be printed.

Not Necessary to Reply

Dear Mrs. Adams,
A friend of mine has written me a note thanking me for the pleasant time she had at my home one evening. Is it necessary for me to reply to her note?
AGNES.

No. Her note was one of appreciation written to acknowledge an obligation.

The Receipt of an Announcement

Dear Mrs. Adams,
What is the proper thing to do after one receives the announcement of the birth of a child?
A READER.

A letter of congratulation may be sent to the mother, with flowers or some other gift for the baby. If the child's parents are mere acquaintances a card bearing a short message of congratulation is sufficient.

When Offered a Seat

Dear Mrs. Adams,
When a man offers me a seat in the trolley car would it be proper to offer it to him after he has entered and they are escorted to their rooms.
ANNA.

Certainly. However, I do not think it would be necessary for you to do so, for men are quick to resign their seats to an aged woman.

Visiting His Relatives

Dear Mrs. Adams,
I am engaged to a young man whose mother is dead, but his married sister has invited me to visit her home. Should I accept?
EDITH.

Certainly. It is the kind and proper courtesy for her to extend you. To not decline the invitation unless for very plausible reasons.

Inviting a Man to Call

Dear Mrs. Adams,
I know that it is the custom for a girl to invite a man to call on her, but should she do this after the first meeting? A friend of mine introduced a friend of his to me the other evening. I did not extend such an invitation to him. Should I have done so?
ALICE.

It is better to wait for a second meeting before inviting a man to call.

After a Death

Dear Mrs. Adams,
I was to have been married in the early part of next month, but my fiance's mother died suddenly last week. Do you think we should our wedding be postponed, and if it takes place within the year would it have to be a very quiet one?
MADGE.

Weddings are sometimes celebrated very soon after a family loss, but very quietly, of course. If you want to have a large wedding you must wait a year.

Asking Brother's Friend

Dear Mrs. Adams,
My brother has a friend who is constantly at our house. Would it be right for me to ask him to come when my brother is away?
HELEN.

If you live alone with your brother it would not be correct for you to ask his bachelor friends when he is away. If you live with your parents, it would be your mother's place to ask him, not yours. If she asks him, it is quite correct.

COMMON SENSE in the HOME
EDITED by MARION HARLAND

CHILDREN AND MOTHERS AT PLAY.

HOW do you amuse your children? Or don't you amuse them at all? This matter was suggested to me by a recent letter from a correspondent in which she asked for advice along this line. She has two small girls and they are evidently a greater puzzle to her in their hours of recreation than at any other time.

"A friend was visiting me a while ago," she writes, "and after a few days she gave the result of her study of me with my children. You are just as I was with my paper dolls," she told me. 'I was delighted to have them. I cut out and made beautiful frocks for them and dressed them up and then I stood them in a row and looked at them. I couldn't play with them! You work your fingers off doing things and making clothes for your children, but you don't know how to play with them!'

"I am inclined to think she is right. But how can I teach them how to play if I don't know how to play with them myself?"

* *

Happy in Making Own Play.

So far as my own experience and observations go I have concluded that the happiest children are those who make their own plays and amusements. This does not mean that they do not need a certain amount of guidance. We have come to the point where we take it for granted that when a public playground is provided for city children there shall be a director appointed to teach the youngsters how to play. One reason for this is that they generally come from a class which has had no instruction in playing and they have to be introduced to games as they would be to any other unfamiliar occupation.

Our children have usually had a different sort of a start in life. No matter how slender the purse, unless you belong to the abjectly poor—and sometimes even then—your child has toys by the time he is able to hold them. A rattle, a ring, a ball, a rubber doll are put into his hands and in a way you teach him what the trifles are for. He learns to play with them before he knows what he is doing and when other toys come his way he picks up the methods of amusing himself with them in a natural fashion.

The little girl seems to develop some kinds of pastimes naturally. The maternal instinct displays itself in her devotion to her doll; and the manner in which she dresses and undresses it, feeds it, and rocks it to sleep she copies from what she sees in other babies or what she recollects of her own experiences. But the most attentive of miniature mothers sometimes wearies of her parental duties and longs for fresh fields of activity. Haven't we all memories of small elbows leaning upon our knees, of small voices beseeching: "Tell me what to do now, mother. I don't know what to play with!"

* *

Aids to Childish Joys.

Evidently some such pleas as this stirred my friend to write to me. They found her unprepared with an answer and so she turned to another mother for counsel. This I give her as my own need not interfere with advice from other mothers and I shall hope to receive a full response from many of you.

I have said that the most satisfactory plays are those children make for themselves and it was interesting to me to watch how the suggestions I made in the nursery were worked out by the small boys and girls and led to fresh branches of entertainment. Give them a start and they will go of themselves.

Probably the best single implement for childish recreation is a pair of round pointed scissors when guarded by a firm prohibition against cutting anything not meant to be cut. With the scissors all sorts of wonderful things can be shaped of paper and cloth. In addition to the scissors provide a paste pot and you have the material for boundless joys!

When my children were small they had what they called "farm books." Why "farm" I have never been able to make out; "house books" would have been a much more appropriate title. Pasted on the different pages were pictures of the various objects which go to furnish a room. There were windows draped with curtains of colored tissue paper, fringed or pinked on the edges. The sleeping rooms contained beds, dressers, washstands, mirrors, the drawing rooms were splendid with ornamental sofas, chairs, card tables, ottomans; in the dining room were the table, sideboard, serving table, chairs, and the like. Pictures hung on the walls, figures were pasted in here and there where they would do most good in giving the human interest to the apartment.

Cut-Outs Furnish Fun.

The suggestion for these books came to my little daughters from some other children and the books were carried out along the lines which the fancy of each directed. One child discovered the picture of a billiard table in the pages of a magazine and forthwith established a billiard room in her book. Another one, not to be outdone, started a stable and farmyard and stocked it with a miscellaneous array of animals. What did it matter if the cows and pigs were only a size or two larger than the poultry and pigeons? The fun of cutting out and pasting them was the same, the victory of having something novel was as great.

If this meant enjoyment for children in days when the illustrated advertising pages did not exist and pictures must be cut from the story part of the periodical, what would it be now with the wealth of material in the back part—and the front part, too—of the magazines, when illustration is run mad everywhere? Try it and see, for the boys as well as for the girls.

Another delightful occupation for the children may be devised by the addition of sewing implements to the scissors and the paste pot. They can cut animals from cloth of different kinds, using a paper pattern to get the shape right, sew them up and fill them with cotton. A regular menagerie can be fashioned by little fingers and this completed there is a play already provided for conducting circus joys. If the animals are made of white cotton cloth or some similar fabric they may be painted in natural colors—a paint box should be part of the furniture of the nursery.

"How can I teach them how to play if I don't know how to play with them myself."

For older children the paste pot and scissors have likewise their uses. The preparation of a scrap book is always fascinating and the selection and preservation of good stories, poems, and articles should be encouraged. To the text may be added illustrations, not of necessity those that accompanied it on publication, but others which seem to suit the story better than those originally supplied for it.

* *

Soldiers for the Boys.

All boys take to soldiers as all girls take to dolls. [There are children, by the way, who reverse this order. The girls take to soldiers as if they were militants born and the boys show the paternal instinct to an extent that promises well for their future fatherhood.] Of course you can buy soldiers ready made, but does a boy enjoy these as much and as long as he does the fighting men he cuts out for himself—either the sort which come already colored or those in black and white which he tints to suit his fancy? Does the little girl adore the fashionably dressed doll as she does the one for whom she has herself made part of the clothing, at least? Her feelings for the two may be compared with the affection of a grown mother for her own and for an adopted child!

The kindergarten has given us much in the line of nursery plays. The weaving of colored papers, the modeling in clay are among them and both of these may be turned to account in mixing work with the children's play and instructing them at a very early age to make themselves of use in the home?

One of our Cornerites asked me not long ago if she should have her little boy and girl—aged respectively 8 and 6—help about the housework. The mother had two or three other children and kept no maid. I said to her as I say now that I thought by all means the children should have regular duties, not enough to burden them or tire them, but something which would give them a small sense of responsibility as duties to be discharged systematically.

My observation leads me, as it probably does other mothers, to believe that children do not feel themselves drudges when they are allowed to take a fair share in the housework. On the contrary, it gives them a sense of their own importance and adds to their happiness.

Teach your children from the outset to keep their nursery in order. By the time they are able to run about the room they should learn to gather up the toys they have scattered and to put them where they belong. Little more effort is required to show them how to lay their playthings in place in an orderly fashion and this tidiness will stand them in good stead in later years.

In the same way they should not be permitted to throw their clothes in a heap on the floor. The time has gone past when the good little boys and girls do as we read they did in books of a generation or two ago and fold each garment neatly in taking it off and lay all in a pile on a chair! Now we teach the youngsters to hang their raiment up to air, but it is as easy to do this neatly as carelessly, and if children are accustomed to it from the first they will take the duty for granted.

* *

A Boy That Set the Table.

More than this, the children may aid you in your work and will count it a pleasure if you go about it in the right way. My mind recalls a little boy whose mother used to say laughingly that he was capable of taking a place as waitress. By the time he was 8 years old he could set the table as well as a grown person could have done; he loved to help his mother put away the clean dishes and to help her dry the small pieces, and it was his joy to be trusted to take the toast, to bring in the food, and to help clear it away afterwards.

He was not of the "easy" variety, either. I can parallel him by various small girls of my acquaintance who assumed certain little duties about the house, not enough in any case to fatigue them, and were held responsible for them. At an early age a girl or boy can help put a bedroom to rights, and both can save the mother many steps without wearying themselves.

From such occupations as these they go to play with fresh enjoyment and it is far less difficult to provide them with recreation when part of their day is devoted to duties.

Don't you mothers agree with me and won't you tell us how you manage about your little children's work and play?

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING HAND.

IMPORTANT NOTICE

BECAUSE of the enormous number of letters sent to the department I must ask contributors to limit their communications to 100 words, except in cases of formulas or recipes which require greater space. I want all my correspondents to have a shouting in the Corner, and if my request in this respect is complied with it will be possible to print many more letters.

Attention is called to the fact that Marion Harland cannot receive money for patterns, as she has no connection with any department that sells them. Marion Harland.

"I AM sending you some ideas for the 'Helping Hand,' and in exchange won't you give us an idea how to conduct a cooking club which four or six of us wish to organize? We have a few plans, but would like your suggestions, and will name our body the Marion Harland club, in appreciation of the columns which we all enjoy.

"Mrs. W. B. W."

Thank you for the idea, which shall appear from time to time in the Corner, and thank you also for the compliment to the Corner itself, in giving the name you do to your club. I wish for it all success. There are several ways of conducting such an organization, and perhaps one of the best and pleasantest is to have it meet from house to house, to have each member prepare some portion of the menu. On these she may practice between the meetings. You might devote yourselves to certain branches of cookery, and take your turn at them. For instance, savories, including cookery of meats in their first state and as made-overs, breads of different sorts, raised and quick in their many kinds; salads and vegetables, sweets comprising cakes, pies, and other desserts. Each one may make a study of her special branch, and after she feels she has attained a fair degree of proficiency in it let her turn it over to some one else and attack the one her neighbor resigns. In this way you can swing all around the circle, and each section of the cuisine receive its full share of study. Should these suggestions not meet your views, let me know and I will give further advice.

Centennial Pie.

"Here is a recipe which I never have seen, except at my grandmother's:

"CENTENNIAL PIE.—First part: Four cups flour, one cup lard, one cup sugar; rub into crumbs. Second part: One cup molasses, one pint hot water, one teaspoon soda. Line a pie plate with crust and pour in the second part and crumb in the first part. This makes three pies. I often serve them with milk, and they are delicious. I want to thank you for the recipe for raisin puffs. I made them, using blackberry jam and the following sauce over them. I never tasted a better dessert. Four tablespoons sugar, three tablespoons butter; cream and add the white of one egg, beaten stiff; flavor with vanilla.

MRS. A. D. A."

I am pleased that you like the puffs as much as we do, and I am glad to have the recipe for the sauce you used, as well as for the "Centennial" pie and the butterscotch pie. The latter had already been sent in by another friend and printed in the Corner.

Orange Cake and Lemon Pie.

"Here is a recipe for a Spanish dish which I am sure some of the housekeepers will like: SPANISH BEANS.—One and a half pounds brown Mexican beans. Cook half an hour in enough water to cover them. Put into a frying pan a good cup meat drippings or lard and when hot slice into it two medium sized onions and five sprigs of garlic. Fry to a nice brown while your beans are cooking. When the latter have cooked half an hour salt them to taste, put in a quarter teaspoon chili powder, and add the onions, garlic, and fat. Let them simmer—not boil hard—for six hours, and as the water cooks away add bringing it just to the top of the beans but not above this.

"Will some one give a good orange loaf cake and a lemon pie?

A recipe for a lemon pie appeared a short time ago, and by this time you probably have seen it. The following is a good orange cake:

ORANGE CAKE.—Four eggs, three cups flour, half cup butter, two cups sugar, one cup cold water, two small oranges or one large one, two teaspoons baking powder. Beat the yolks well and put with the butter and sugar, creamed; stir in the juice of the oranges and half the grated peel, the water, flour, and baking powder, and last of all the whipped whites of the eggs. Bake in a loaf and ice with orange frosting.

Postcards to Contribute.

"I have some postcards I might contribute if I only had the address of the person who asked for them. May I say to 'Edna' that in order to renovate her plush she should take a hot iron, lay a damp cloth over it, then lay the back of the plush on the cloth. Steam for an instant and at the same time brush the pile up with a whisk broom. Be careful not to get the plush too damp.

L. M. N."

Thank you for the suggestion about the plush and for the offer of the postcards. I hope "Edna" may see your counsel. It would be an easy thing to put you in touch with the seeker for postcards if you had only given me the signature which appears under his or her application. As it is, with all the letters we use it is impossible to know to whom you refer unless you supply us with the initials or name he puts at the end of his letter.

"Medley Mush."

"For those who suffer from constipation I am sending directions for making my 'medley mush.' I was ordered to take raw or cooked bran, and not liking it in either form and believing that palatable food is more beneficial than that which is not appetizing, that flaxseed is healing as well as beneficial, that raisins have the same property—slightly—and are among the best nerve foods, I guessed at the proportions and find the mixture helpful and enjoyable. I measured what I made for breakfast this morning that I might give you a more definite recipe.

"MEDLEY MUSH.—Two cups bran, half cup flaxseed, seeded raisins, and salt to taste; about two cups cold water; cook slowly for twenty minutes.

"I send two other recipes you may find helpful:

"OATMEAL BREAD.—Two cups oatmeal, two cups boiling water, let stand two or three hours, add one tablespoon shortening, half cup molasses, level tablespoon salt, two cups white bread sponge. Add white flour enough to knead hard.

"OATMEAL WAFERS. — Two cups brown sugar, two-thirds cup hot water, half cup lard, four cups oatmeal or two cups oatmeal and two cups graham flour, one teaspoon each soda, vanilla, and salt. Mix stiff with flour; roll very thin.

"C. V. H."

The "medley mush" will doubtless appeal to readers suffering from the trouble to which you refer. I take it for granted that the flaxseed that the recipe calls for is the whole seed and not the flaxseed meal. But will you enlighten me a little about the oatmeal bread? Does it rise before baking after it is added to the bread sponge, and for how long? Is it kneaded more than once or made into loaves as soon as the one kneading you mention and then let rise before it is baked? At what stage should the bread sponge be when it is put with the oatmeal—that is, is it added after it has risen for awhile or as soon as mixed? I am sure your answer to these questions would simplify the bread making for our readers.

Inexpensive Vegetable Salads.

"Please tell me how to cook creamed chicken and mushrooms, also potatoes with cheese and a good salad of some kind—a vegetable salad, an inexpensive one.

"CHICAGO."

To take your last question first, as to the salad. There are so many good vegetable salads that the difficulty is to choose which one to give you. Now that the time of year is at hand when vegetables are at their best and cheapest you can have a large variety, and there are few better ways of using cold vegetables than in a salad.

Have them alone or in combination. For instance, if there are cold string beans or green peas, or beets, or asparagus, or carrots, or almost anything you can serve them cold on lettuce with a French or mayonnaise or a good boiled dressing, while if there is not enough of any one kind you can put them together into what the French call a macedoine.

Do not mix all your vegetables together in the dish, but line this with lettuce leaves and put your different vegetables in separate piles, the string beans cut short, the carrots or beets or potatoes in dice. Of course, you give each person a little of each in helping them and they are naturally mixed on the eater's plate. Carrots and green peas together make a delicious salad.

Then there are good cabbage salads, cold slaw, of the shredded cabbage, with a scalding hot dressing poured over it and then permitted to get cold; salad or sliced cucumbers alone or mixed with other vegetables, and tomatoes alone or mixed, and stuffed peppers—there is no end to them.

In the following the recipe you wish for potatoes and cheese?

POTATOES AU GRATIN.—Cut eight peeled potatoes into dice, boil tender in salted water, drain, put with a pint of milk which has been thickened with a tablespoon each of flour and butter, salt to taste, turn into a pudding dish, sprinkle thickly with cheese, dot with bits of butter, and brown in the oven.

CREAMED CHICKEN WITH MUSHROOMS.—In a double boiler make a sauce of two tablespoons of butter and one of flour cooked together until they blend and then thin with a half pint of milk and a gill of mushroom liquor; stir and cook until smooth. Add a pint of cold chicken, roast or boiled, cut into neat pieces; simmer until hot through; put in a half cup mushrooms, sliced thin; cook two minutes longer, stir in the yolks of two eggs, and when the sauce has a soft creamy color—about two minutes longer—season to taste with salt and pepper and serve.

Best Treatment of a Fern.

"I wish you would kindly advise me what is the best treatment I can give a fern. It was purchased some time ago. I have it in a very cool room with electric lights and water it every day, but it seems to be drying up very fast. Anything you may be able to recommend will be greatly appreciated.

"M. F. J."

Several things may be the matter with it. Perhaps the pot is too small and it needs to be transferred to a larger one. Perhaps the earth is not rich enough and the plant craves a little fertilizer added to the soil, or this may be too hard and need to be loosened a little. Does the plant have its fair share of daylight and sunshine? You say that you water it every day, but do you soak it well? Experienced florists tell me that constant superficial watering is bad for a plant and that the best way is to give it a good soaking once a week, when the plant roots get well moistened.

For my own part I give my house plants a weekly bath, when they are taken to the bathroom, stood in the tub, and this filled with water up to the top of the flower pots. After they have remained in this a few minutes I let the water off and leave the plants to drain for a while before restoring them to their regular places.

A man told me once that most ferneries suffered from what he called "too much middle of the table." Since then I have made it a point to keep the fernery which adorns the centre of my table at meals on the window seat near the light where the plant is not on duty. Try some of the treatment I have outlined and see if the fern does not improve.

Offer of Sunday School Papers.

"If you know of any shut-in who would enjoy reading Sunday school papers, kindly let me know, as I would be glad to send some.

MRS. W. H. D."

I foresee the demand for the papers. Always there are shut-ins longing for reading matter and we don't have Sunday school papers offered to us frequently. It will give me great pleasure to send your address to any one who asks for it.

Wants Flag for Her School.

"Can you or your readers suggest any means whereby a corset can be kept sweet smelling? It is not the odor of perspiration to which I refer but a close smell I have often noticed about people's clothing.

"E. W."

The trouble is probably due to perspiration, although you don't think so. It is entirely possible to keep a corset sweet smelling, but it requires care. Always hang your corset in a draft of fresh air when you take it off; never follow the custom of the persons who roll a corset up as soon as they remove it. I cannot think of a more unclean plan, especially in warm weather. Don't wear your corset too long without washing it. To do this lay it flat on a table and with a nail brush dipped in water and rubbed on a good white soap scour the corset until it is clean. Scrub it a second time with clear water in which you have added a good spoonful of bicarbonate of soda. This is one of the best means of sweetening and cleansing garments or flesh from old perspiration. Some of the odor—probably most of it—is caused by carelessness in airing the garments when they are taken off at night. If you will keep two sets in use, wearing them on alternate days, they will give better results than if you keep one set until it is soiled.

"Harter Kuchen."

"I am happy to be able to give E. K. the recipe for what she calls 'confinement cookies.' They are a German cake known as 'harter kuchen.' To make them cream three-quarters of a pound of butter with the same weight of granulated sugar and a pinch of salt. Add two raw eggs and the yolks of six hard boiled eggs; stir to a smooth dough with flour enough to make a soft ball. Flavor with vanilla, roll out the dough, and cut as you would other cookies.

"AIMEE D."

These cookies are novelties to me and I am glad to print the recipe for the benefit of E. K. and others. I hope they are what she wants.

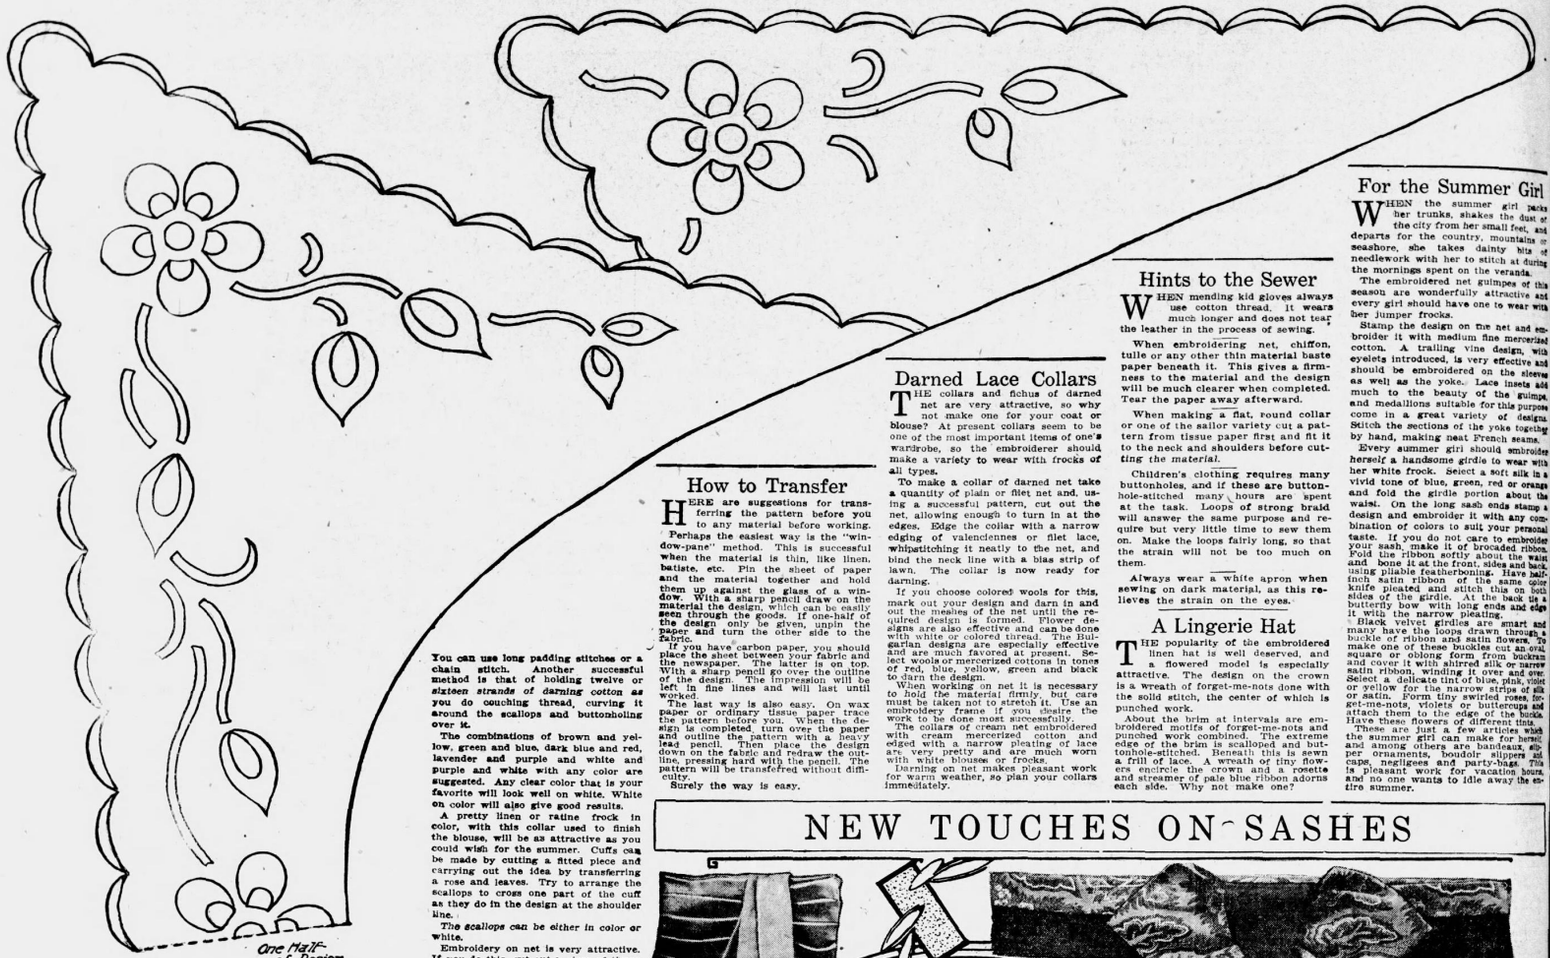
For the INDUSTRIOUS NEEDLEWOMAN

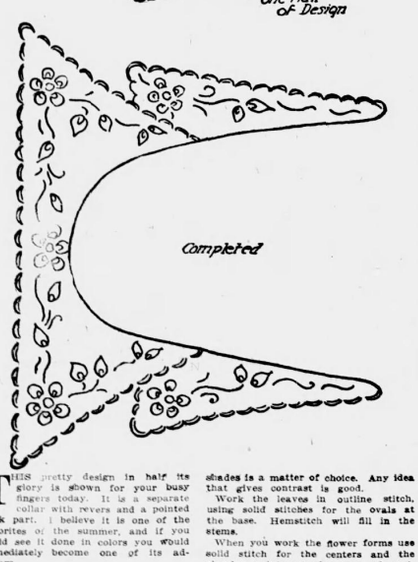
By ADELAIDE BYRD

A SEPARATE COLLAR

DESIGNED BY BETTY LYNNE



One Half of Design



THIS pretty design in half its glory is shown for your busy fingers today. It is a separate collar with revers and a pointed back part. I believe it is one of the favorites of the summer, and if you could see it done in colors you would immediately become one of its admirers.

There is no allowance for any band which is turned in and used for basting. This should be a straight piece of lawn or thin material, one-half inch wide when finished. Machine stitching should be used.

When tracing the design place the line that runs through the center of the back on the straight of the goods. Fold and see that the points of the fronts come in corresponding places. The tracing of the design is merely the matching of the lower part and the placing of the impression by any of the means suggested below. Another transferring idea was sent to me by one of our circle. She has used a hot iron over a damp cloth, with the design face down on the material to be worked. Try it.

This collar is beautiful in two shades of blue. The arrangement of the shades is a matter of choice. Any idea that gives contrast is good.

Work the leaves in outline stitch, using solid stitches for the ovals at the base. Hemstitch will fill in the stems.

When you work the flower forms use solid stitch for the centers and the circular points at the base of each petal. Outline the petals with a double thread or coarse cotton, and if you wish to give a solid effect at little expenditure of time fill in with French knots or seed stitches, which are really small back stitches.

Another method of applying stitches is the solid effect of stitches that radiate from the oval at the base of the leaf or the circle at the base of each flower petal. This makes a solid outer part, with plain centers of material. The effect is heavier than the first idea. It is very easily worked, however.

Darning stitches are very effective inside outline work. They should go in the same direction across the entire design. Use the weave of the goods as a guide.

Pad the scallops with darning cotton. You can use long padding stitches or a chain stitch. Another successful method is that of holding twelve or sixteen strands of darning cotton as you do couching thread, curving it around the scallops and buttonholing over it.

The combinations of brown and yellow, green and blue, dark blue and red, lavender and purple and white and purple and white with any color are suggested. Any clear color that is your favorite will look well on white. White on color will also give good results.

A pretty linen or ratine frock in color, with this collar used to finish the blouse, will be as attractive as you could wish for the summer. Cuffs can be made by cutting a fitted piece and carrying out the idea by transferring a rose and leaves. Try to arrange the scallops to cross one part of the cuff as they do in the design at the shoulder line.

Embroidery on net is very attractive. If you do this, cut out a piece of tissue paper and baste the net to it after transferring the design to the paper. Work through the net and the paper and when finished tear away the paper. On white or black net this design will work up very satisfactorily in bright colors.

Voile, marquisette and light-weight linen are just as good as a medium-weight linen. The separate collar, especially in this form and hand embroidered, is too good to ignore. It gives distinction to a plain frock, as handwork invariably does. Why not put it on one of your blouses or summer frocks?

For the Living Room

THERE are many dainty articles which the clever needlewoman can make for her living room which require a minimum amount of time, but add much to the beauty of the home.

For the living room in summer everything should be made of washable materials, so that they can be kept fresh and clean during the dusty months. This will not be a difficult problem, for many of the most artistic fabrics serving as a background for embroidery will launder successfully. The heavy linens usually forming the basis for the lovely craftsman tablecovers, draperies and cushions, the scrims, casement cloths and burlaps cannot suffer harm through washing.

Make the table runner, cushions, magazine covers and draperies of any one of these materials and stamp them with an artistic conventional design. Embroider this with colors to harmonize with those used in the room.

The Bulgarian work, done with colored wools or mercerized cotton, is very popular at present and appropriate for the living room.

Choose linen of a loose, coarse weave for the background, and for the table runner cut a strip long enough to extend ten or twelve inches over each end, not including the hem. If you prefer a table runner the exact dimensions of the table top, cut it accordingly.

Stamp the design at each end and embroider it with bright tones of blue, red, yellow and green, with touches of black or dark brown. Fill in the motifs with satin stitch, first padding with white darning cotton. For the cushions cut two rectangular pieces of linen, one for the top and the other for the back. Embroider a panel of the Bulgarian work at each end and finish the edge of the pillow with a cord.

The magazine cover should be cut to fit the size of the periodical. Decorate the top with a panel to correspond with that used on the cushion.

If you are extremely energetic, make window draperies of the same material and border them with the Bulgarian embroidery.

How to Transfer

Perhaps the easiest way is the "window-pane" method. This is successful when the material is thin, like linen, batiste, etc. Pin the sheet of paper and the material together and hold them up against the glass of a window. With a sharp pencil draw on the material the design, which can be easily seen through the goods. If one-half of the design only be given, unpin the paper and turn the other side to the fabric.

If you have carbon paper, you should place the sheet between your fabric and the newspaper. The latter is on top. With a sharp pencil go over the outline of the design. The impression will be left in fine lines and will last until worked.

The last way is also easy. On wax paper or ordinary tissue paper trace the pattern before you. When the design is completed, turn over the paper and outline the pattern with a heavy lead pencil. Then place the design down on the fabric and redraw the outline, pressing hard with the pencil. The pattern will be transfered without difficulty.

Surely the way is easy.

Darned Lace Collars

THE collars and fichus of darned net are very attractive, so why not make one for your coat or blouse? At present collars seem to be one of the most important items of one's wardrobe, so the embroiderer should make a variety to wear with frocks of all types.

To make a collar of darned net take a quantity of plain or filet net and, using a successful pattern, cut out the net, allowing enough to turn in at the edges. Edge the collar with a narrow edging of valenciennes or filet lace, whipstitching it neatly to the net, and bind the neck line with a bias strip of lawn. The collar is now ready for darning.

If you choose colored wools for this, mark out your design and darn in and out the meshes of the net until the required design is formed. Flower designs are also effective and can be done with white or colored thread. The Bulgarian designs are especially effective and are much favored at present. Select wools or mercerized cottons in tones of red, blue, yellow, green and black to darn the design.

When working on net it is necessary to hold the material firmly, but care must be taken not to stretch it. Use an embroidery frame if you desire the work to be done most successfully.

The collars of cream net embroidered with cream mercerized cotton and edged with a narrow pleating of lace are very pretty and are much worn with white blouses or frocks.

Darning on net makes pleasant work for warm weather, so plan your collars immediately.

Hints to the Sewer

WHEN mending kid gloves always use cotton thread. It wears much longer and does not tear the leather in the process of sewing.

When embroidering net, chiffon, tulle or any other thin material baste paper beneath it. This gives a firmness to the material and the design will be much clearer when completed. Tear the paper away afterward.

When making a flat, round collar or one of the sailor variety cut a pattern from tissue paper first and fit it to the neck and shoulders before cutting the material.

Children's clothing requires many buttonholes, and if these are buttonhole-stitched many hours are spent at the task. Loops of strong braid will answer the same purpose and require but very little time to sew them on. Make the loops fairly long, so that the strain will not be too much on them.

Always wear a white apron when sewing on dark material, as this relieves the strain on the eyes.

A Lingerie Hat

THE popularity of the embroidered linen hat is well deserved, and a flowered model is especially attractive. The design on the crown is a wreath of forget-me-nots done with the solid stitch, the center of which is punched work.

About the brim at intervals are embroidered motifs of forget-me-nots and punched work combined. The extreme edge of the brim is scalloped and buttonhole-stitched. Beneath this is sewn a frill of lace. A wreath of tiny flowers encircle the crown and a rosette and streamer of pale blue ribbon adorns each side. Why not make one?

For the Summer Girl

WHEN the summer girl packs her trunks, shakes the dust of the city from her small feet, and departs for the country, mountains or seashore, she takes dainty bits of needlework with her to stitch at during the mornings spent on the veranda.

The embroidered net guimpes of this season are wonderfully attractive and every girl should have one to wear with her jumper frocks.

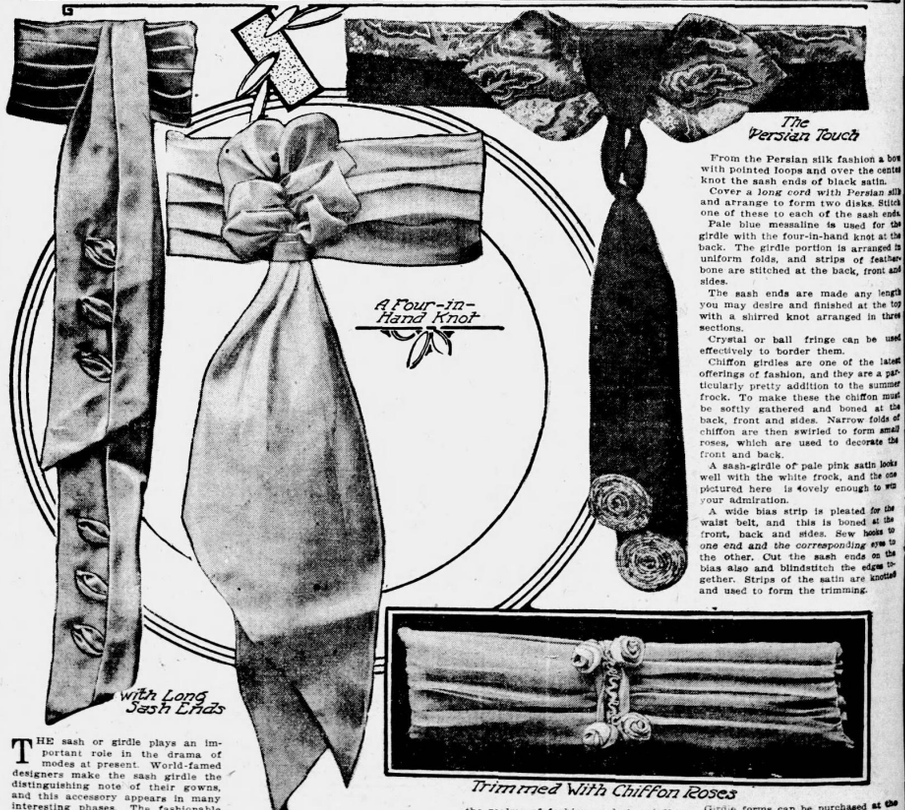
Stamp the design on the net and embroider it with medium fine mercerized cotton. A trailing vine design, with eyelets introduced, is very effective and should be embroidered on the sleeves as well as the yoke. Lace insets add much to the beauty of the guimpe, and medallions suitable for this purpose come in a great variety of designs. Stitch the sections of the yoke together by hand, making neat French seams.

Every summer girl should embroider herself a handsome girdle to wear with her white frock. Select a soft silk in a vivid tone of blue, green, red or orange and fold the girdle portion about the waist. On the long sash ends stamp a design and embroider it with any combination of colors to suit your personal taste. If you do not care to embroider your sash, make it of brocaded ribbon. Fold the ribbon softly about the waist and bone it at the front, sides and back, using pliable featherboning. Have half-inch satin ribbon of the same color knife pleated and stitch this on both sides of the girdle. At the back tie a butterfly bow with long ends and edge it with the narrow pleating.

Black velvet girdles are smart and many have the loops drawn through a buckle of ribbon and satin flowers. To make one of these buckles cut an oval, square or oblong form from buckram and cover it with shirred silk or narrow satin ribbon, winding it over and over. Select a delicate tint of blue, pink, violet or yellow for the narrow strips of silk or satin. Form tiny swirled roses, forget-me-nots, violets or buttercups and attach them to the edge of the buckle. Have these flowers of different tints.

These are just a few articles which the summer girl can make for herself and among others are bandeaux, slipper ornaments, boudoir slippers and caps, negligees and party-bags. This is pleasant work for vacation hours, and no one wants to idle away the entire summer.

NEW TOUCHES ON SASHES



THE sash or girdle plays an important role in the drama of modes at present. World-famed designers make the sash girdle the distinguishing note of their gowns, and this accessory appears in many interesting phases. The fashionable wardrobe must be supplied with an assortment of sashes, for the summer frock lacks a leading feature if the sash is missing.

Materials of every variety are employed to make the sash, from the webbiest of laces and nets to the richest brocades and velvets. The sash of black satin or velvet appears on many gowns of sheer materials, and the note of vivid color, so modish this season, is frequently supplied by the girdle.

It is not a difficult task to fashion the sash girdle, so if you are at all clever at sewing prepare your girdles for summer wear.

The Persian influence has invaded the realms of fashion, and the girdle pictured here is an excellent example of the combination of Persian silk and black satin.

A band of black satin long enough to encircle the waist is stitched to a fold or Persian silk. Turn the ends in and stitch neatly in place, sewing hooks to one side and corresponding eyes to the other.

Cover a long cord with Persian silk and arrange to form two disks. Stitch one of these to each of the sash ends.

Pale blue messaline is used for the girdle with the four-in-hand knot at the back. The girdle portion is arranged in uniform folds, and strips of featherbone are stitched at the back, front and sides.

The sash ends are made any length you may desire and finished at the top with a shirred knot arranged in three sections.

Crystal or ball fringe can be used effectively to border them.

Chiffon girdles are one of the latest offerings of fashion, and they are a particularly pretty addition to the summer frock. To make these the chiffon must be softly gathered and boned at the back, front and sides. Narrow folds of chiffon are then swirled to form small roses, which are used to decorate the front and back.

A sash-girdle of pale pink satin looks well with the white frock, and the one pictured here is lovely enough to win your admiration.

A wide bias strip is pleated for the waist belt, and this is boned at the front, back and sides. Sew hooks to one end and the corresponding eye to the other. Cut the sash ends on the bias also and blindstitch the edges together. Strips of the satin are knotted and used to form the trimming.

Girdle forms can be purchased at the notion counter, making it an easy matter to fashion those of satin. The chiffon and tulle girdles, however, should be boned with featherbone, which is sold by the yard.

Select the straight girdle form and not the variety fitted to the figure, for the curved waist line continues under the ban of La Mode's displeasure.

WHAT ATLANTA WANTS FROM THE LEGISLATURE

By John Y. Smith,

A Representative of Fulton County in the Legislature.

WHAT does Atlanta want from the hands of the approaching session of the legislature?

In answering this question, I shall endeavor to point out those things which I think most important to the material welfare of Atlanta and to the happiness and contentment of her people.

When we shall have enacted into law the measure to be introduced providing for the establishment of the municipal court, to take the place of the present hopelessly inefficient system of justice courts, we will, in my opinion, have rendered a service to the people of all classes which I fear they do not now fully comprehend or appreciate.

The justice court is one of the most ancient systems of administering the law of which we have any record. In times past, when the country was sparsely populated, it was deemed a great honor to fill this office. The one appointed was a respected and leading man of the community, and due dignity and proper respect was paid to the office. In the country districts of the state the justice court continues to be an honorable institution for the adjustment and settlement of neighborhood disputes.

With the increase of population, however, the justice court in cities has admittedly fallen into almost thorough disrepute.

WHERE THE FAULT LIES.

The justice is not, as many seem to think, a man lacking in high ideals or in a worthy ambition to make out of his court a place of real and substantial justice. It is true that in a few instances these places have been filled by men who descended below the dignity of the office and prostituted justice. But, in the main the justices presiding over the several courts of Atlanta have been men of high character, and I should be unfaithful to the spirit of this article if I did not state this fact.

The trouble lies in the fact that the whole system is antiquated and wrong, and was never intended to meet the needs of a great city. The vicious practice that necessarily accompanies the administration of the office, can only be cured by the establishment of a court to take over their duties, and let the judges be placed on a salary basis. By this method, greater respect and dignity will attach to the office. The election of the judges, as now contemplated, upon the recommendation or endorsement of the three able and distinguished gentlemen presiding over the three divisions of the superior court of Fulton county, will bring to the municipal court the confidence of the people which is so necessary if the courts are to endure.

PLAZA PLAN.

I have been greatly disappointed to observe the apparent decline of all enthusiasm in the plan much discussed some time ago, of erecting over the unsightly railroad tracks in the very heart of the city, beginning at Central avenue and extending over the old Union Station on a line with the railroad tracks to the Forsyth street viaduct, a grand plaza or promenade, with stores or amusements on either side, and the whole brilliantly lighted.

It is probably the most stupendous project ever proposed in the way of a civic improvement for Atlanta.

It is, however, inconceivable to my mind that the public-spirited and patriotic men and women of Atlanta should allow their interest in this most wonderful municipal improvement to lag at this critical time in our city's history.

The people of Atlanta are a most peculiar people in some respects. We are not blessed with many parks or suburban places of amusement. The people, however, do not seem to mind, but rather appear happier when strolling along their own dear Peachtree and Whitehall. It is a love akin to that the Parisians have for their own beautiful boulevards.

The advantage of such a magnificent improvement cannot be estimated in dollars and cents. Costly, yes. Impossible or impractical, no. The feasibility of the plan has been vouched for by architects of admitted reputation.

Such a plan as this must necessarily remain in contemplation for some years, but real, active, enthusiastic support should be given to it now.

As a pre-requisite, the consent of the state is necessary. I have no authority to speak for my colleagues, but I have no doubt but that they would lend their assistance to the end of getting the consent of the state. I hope to see the citizens of Atlanta get together on this proposition without delay. It would be a genuine pleasure to me to take a part in securing the consent of the state for this great public improvement during my term in the legislature.

There are many things Atlanta and Fulton county look to the approaching session to be enacted into law.

THE LEGISLATOR'S DUTY.

But I prefer not to touch upon anything else, but rather to write in a general way and of what I conceive to be the duty of a member of the legislature representing the county of Fulton.

It would seem that if appropriations are to be continued or increased that some way must be found to increase the income of the state. The rate of taxation is fixed by the constitution, and it would require the calling of a constitutional convention and the submission of changes in the constitution to the people for ratification in order to increase the present rate. This being impractical at this time, it is certain that sooner or later new ways must be found to increase the state's revenue. This is a big question, and must be handled with the greatest possible care.

I do not think that a member of the legislature should become sponsor for any legislation of a revolutionary or disturbing character, unless it affirmatively appears that it is something needed and wanted by the people.

Of course there will be several measures presented, the merit of which will appeal to my sense of fairness, and which, no doubt, will receive my support.

But the point I wish to make is this: Our legislature meets annually, which I think is entirely too often. So far as I have been able to learn, the legislatures of a majority of the states only meet every two years. It is true that I may not be sufficiently informed concerning the necessity for the meeting of our legislature yearly. But I am impressed with the fact that all classes of our people would be benefited if our law-making bodies did not meet but every two years.

STUDY OF CONDITIONS.

The course to be adopted by a member of the legislature should a studious one, emphasized by a close study of all proposed legislation, to the end that no hasty or ill-advised measures should be enacted into law. At the same time, he should be fully cognizant of conditions, and progressive enough to meet them.

Such legislation as is wise and necessary should be passed to encourage both capital and labor. One is necessary to the other. If our state is to continue to make progress along industrial lines, the outside world must have confidence in the stability and integrity of our laws.

Fulton county is probably without doubt the one county in the state that will be most affected by such legislation of general character as may be passed by the legislature. Our interests are large and constantly multiplying. We have much home capital and much foreign capital invested in Fulton county. It will be necessary to have a great deal of foreign capital from time to time to meet increasing demands of those of our citizens engaged in building and developing the great possibilities of our city and county.

The legislature should, therefore, at all times, keep fully awake to the agricultural and business needs of the state. Georgia is rapidly recovering from the period of stagnation ensuing as a result of the ravages committed during the lamentable and unfortunate conflict of the sixties. Her resources are boundless and as yet practically untouched. Capital is needed to develop these resources and make of Georgia a rich and powerful state.

SENSIBLE LEGISLATION.

To my mind sensible legislation will do more to bring this about than anything else. A legislator has entrusted to his keeping the prosperity of the state as well as his own political personality. And he should never permit his own fortunes to come into conflict with the interests of the state at large.

The legislature should not forget the duty it owes to the state's institutions. The states that have appropriated well for their public institutions are the states that have prospered most. The state university, the Young Woman's Normal college, the Georgia School of Technology, are doing a wonderful work and educating the young men and women of the state along practical and advanced lines. Sufficient appropriations should be made for these institutions so that their work may go on and not be retarded for the lack of funds. In considering appropriations for these institutions we are again brought face to face with the known revenue of the state, but, if increased appropriations can be paid to them, it should be done. The Georgia state sanitarium at Milledegville, for the insane, has long been in a cramped condition, and every effort should be made to relieve this condition and place it in a better position to take care of the unfortunate and afflicted of our people.

And there are other institutions of a like deserving char...ter.

PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM.

The public school system of the state should be improved and extended, and a way should be found to forever end the disgraceful treatment accorded the teachers of the state's public schools.

There are many local questions not of interest to the state at large, but which only refer to certain towns or counties.

There will be a great many questions of state-wide interest. It is with these questions that the legislature must deal with keen insight and intelligence.

In a word, the legislature should meet these great questions evenly and sanely, not forgetting that the end to be achieved is the prosperity and the happiness of the people of all Georgia.

MAKING THE DESERT BLOOM

cial force of one of the most forceful city building machines in the south, and which now soon will show itself equally powerful as a county and rural developer.

PLANS UNIQUE BUT PRACTICAL.

The plans of the E. B. Clark company which will have charge of the land development of the county for the chamber of commerce are unique, and yet are not experimental. They trend away from the "settlement" idea entirely, in fact, Mr. Clark in discussing the matter, said he abominated the word "settlement." All the development work will be along what he terms "neighborhoods," and their development into miniature farm cities.

The first "neighborhood" will soon be under way and from it will be gradually pushed the matter of dotting the county with a series of "neighborhoods" which will make of the county a paradise of wealth, health and happiness. The cultivation of home ideals both in family life and in exterior beautification, will be fostered as well as the matter of successful farming from a money standpoint.

It is planned to have from ten to twenty-five farms in each of these "neighborhoods," and the plan as outlined by Mr. Clark is as follows:

The E. B. Clark company will have the line agreed upon and charge the owners of the farms actual cost for the work done.

If, at the end of three years, the farmer is dissatisfied those from whom he has purchased the farm will take it off his hands at a reasonable profit price. The reason for this plan is that for several years approved methods of farming have been under experiment in the county, and it is now no longer an experiment as to what can be done and to what extent development of the farms will go, if certain given methods of farming are strictly followed. Failure is impossible and financial success assured.

LABOR PROBLEM SOLVED.

The E. B. Clark company, who will have charge of the land development end of the work, will keep on hand at work at all times modern farm machinery and competent men in charge of same. If a farmer gets behind with his work, or his laborers fall him, his farm will be worked for him at cost prices. Thus he will be independent of labor conditions arising from sickness or labor mutiny.

The views shown in connection with this article all represent the results of intelligent aggressive management of our chamber of commerce the demand for farms in Troup county has been increasing every month, and we are forced to take steps to meet the pressure which is being brought to bear upon us and which will mean a most remarkable development of Troup county.

"Our plans are simple, yet very comprehensive, and when carried to their full fruition will place Troup county in the front rank of the progress of the nation.

WILL BUY LAND.

"The first step in the general plan of systematic development for the entire county is the sale of stock and placing at the disposal of the E. B. Clark company of around $50,000, which will be used for the purpose of buying large tracts of land, cutting same up in 100-acre tracts, and the settling up of what we have decided to term a series of 'neighborhoods.' It is planned to carry the work forward on such an extended scale as that in time the company doing the developing shall have at least one half million dollars in cash, in which to carry forward its development operations.

"Every move that has been made by our plans and ideas.

BIG NEIGHBORHOODS.

"Those who enter as land owners in our 'neighborhoods' will have to agree to farm along certain given lines, which are not experimental, but which have been tested and tried and found absolutely correct.

"For instance: Land cultivated in cotton and corn this year will be sown to grain in the fall, followed with peas and turned in deep. Each year the land will be turned two inches deeper until at the end of the third or fourth year it will hold all the water needed for the crops of the following year. This method has been tried and in not a single instance has it failed to raise the value of the land to treble the value that it had previous to this systematic plan.

"In addition to this, a department of the chamber of commerce will take hold and begin immediately an effort to direct along a systematic line of the farming of Troup county.

"During the next five years the land

"For instance: He must turn his land and subsoil it in the fall, and sow it to oats not later than November. Corn must be bedded in the spring and planted in water furrows.

"Two hundred pounds of guano per acre must be used at the time of planting, an additional 200 pounds of guano per acre to be used when corn is waist high, and 100 pounds of nitrate of soda per acre just before corn bunches to tassel. All corn land must be plowed with six furrows.

"The first furrow is to be worked with a harrow on top of bed, the second and third furrow to run around corn when about eight inches high, with a scooter and left-hand mole board run far enough away from the corn so as to throw but little dirt to the corn. Then corn is to stand until about waist high, at which time 200 pounds more of fertilizer per acre is to be put around the roots of the corn, which is to be covered with a scooter and eighteen-inch scrape, with the scrape put next to the scooter, putting in as much dirt to the corn as possible. Following this, peas are sown in a furrow with scooter and scrape. As the corn bunches to tassel 100 pounds of nitrate of soda is put on

The LaGrange chamber of commerce is now organized as follows: A general secretary in charge of all the work of the organization under the direction of the board of directors. A promotion department with a secretary in charge, a real estate department with a secretary in charge, a county fair department with a secretary in charge, a farm department with a secretary in charge, and in addition to these department secretaries, the chamber has an office secretary and a correspondence secretary.

During the next six months there will be started an advertising campaign which will cover the nation and which it is intended shall continue for a period of eighteen months.

Those interested in the development of their particular communities who care to write to the general secretary of the LaGrange chamber of commerce will be given every assistance in his power, as the people of LaGrange and Troup county are anxious to see the state at large develop as rapidly as possible, and are willing to assist in every way in their power to this much to be desired end.

"MAN-MADE CREEDS"

BY BISHOP W. A. CANDLER

THE demagogue is like the poor in one respect, he is always with us. He talks in his oily way in the commercial world, the political world, and even in the theological and religious world.

The demagogue is fond of "catch-phrases" which mean nothing, but which wear a pleasing appearance to untrained eyes and sound well to the ears of the thoughtless. One of the phrases to which some are particularly devoted is the declaration that "I do not believe in man-made creeds."

But can there be any creed at all which is not a man-made creed? A creed is nothing more nor less than what a man believes, and if a man thinks for himself, he believes something and makes up his own creed. It may be in contradiction to what any or all other men believe; but if he is a man, and has reached his own conclusion, his creed is man-made. If he is less than a man, it might be a fool-made creed; but it would still be a creed.

A creed is not less a creed because only a few people believe it; it is the belief of a few as opposed to the belief of more numerous bodies, but is a creed just the same. A man does not get rid of accepting a creed because he denies what everybody else believes and believes what everybody else doubts; in such a case the chances are that he is eccentric and his creed is a freakish folly, but a creed he has nevertheless. The only way to avoid having a creed would be to believe nothing, and such a universal denial of all accepted truth would be a one-legged creed standing on one article, viz: "I steadfastly believe that a man can believe nothing." That would be the creed of creedlessness; but it would be a creed just as really and truly as the "Apostles Creed" is a creed. What is really meant by the denunciation of man-made creeds" is that the great body of orthodox believers, who agree upon the essentials of theology, shall be discredited for what they believe, and they only, who holu erratic and strange notions, with which very few can agree, shall be honoured as sincere and independent men. is not this the narrowest sort of egotism and the vainest sort of conceit? Shall a man assume that all the good and great men who have studied the Holy Scriptures in the past and lived godly and lofty lives on the creeds which they have believed, were fools or knaves, wanting in either sense or sincerity, while he claims for himself alone the possession of the truth? Is that very modest? Is such a position justified by either reason or revelation? is that the proper spirit in which to approach any serious subject? Is that the method which sensible men follow in pursuit of truth in any other branch of knowledge?

Newton discovered the law of gravitation; will a man advance in scientific knowledge by beginning his studies in science with the repudiation of Newton's discovery? Edison and others have greatly extended our knowledge of electricity and its uses; but could they have made even a beginning in their studies if they had started with the assumption that the electricians who preceded them knew absolutely nothing about electricity? Hardly.

All the current theories of science are man-made creeds of science; but no one is foolish enough to object to them on that ground. Why is it that some minds become rabid and prone to rant only when theological questions are under discussion?

The theory of free-trade is a man-made creed of political economy; in modern times Adam Smith gave to it clear formulation; but he was just a man—a Scotch-man. Why should a man rail at the followers of John Knox for making a theological creed, and applaud Adam Smith for making an economic creed?

Religious creeds are neither more nor less than the conclusions of good men who derived their beliefs from the facts and truths revealed in the Scriptures. If one choose honestly to agree with them, is he on that account less wise than he who bellows against them?

Some allure us to lay down our denominational tenets and proceed to get together in one huge ecclesiasticism. But how shall we do it, and what profit shall we get by doing? If we all believe the same thing, have we not already all the unity desired? If on the other hand, we are not agreed, what is the use of getting into common body to fight out our battles of belief? Do we imagine that the loss of individuality will increase the sum of human goodness in the world? Or, do we dream that differences inside a huge, obese, apoplectic organization will be less differences of belief because we have housed ourselves together?

It can hardly be doubted that the sum of human peace has been promoted by the habit of mankind to separate into families; and in like manner the great denominational families have promoted religious purity and peace, as no complicated scheme of ecclesiastical communism could have done it.

BISHOP W. A. CANDLER.

What is needed is not union in one great organization, but brotherly toleration towards denominations other than our own. It is very easy to say, "Let us respect the christians of other churches than our own"; but it is not always so easy to say, "Let us respect the churches of other christians than ourselves." But the latter is a far loftier manifestations of the spirit of catholicity.

It is useless to attempt to disguise the fact that many who are most insistent on having just one church in the world are resolved on nothing less than that their church shall swallow all the other churches. They are the men who are most stiff and unyielding in their demands. And what is more remarkable, they are agreed upon the great essential points. All the churches are agred upon the great essential doctrines of repentance, faith, justification, regeneration, and the like; but none of them are agreed on ritualistic forms and the various methods of church organization and government, which are not of the essence of christian life. Nevertheless the men and churches which urge most vociferously their demands for "christian unity" and the renunciation of "man-made creeds" are the very men and churches which require as a condition of christian unity the universal acceptance of some one or more of their non-essential tenets.

A good many years ago in Missouri the late Bishop Marvin took a very striking way of exposing a pretence of this sort. In the town where the Bishop was residing another preacher lived, who was accustomed to ring the changes perpetually upon the demand to "renounce your man-made creeds and let us all come together upon the Bible alone as the only rule of faith and practice." So at the close of a service in which the brother had vociferated this demand for an hour or more, Marvin went forward and offered himself for membership in his church upon that platform. The apostle of creedlessness was highly elated by winning such a man as the Bishop seemed to think, "Will you be baptized?" to this question Marvin modestly replied, "I was baptized in infancy." Whereupon the apostle of unity rejoined. "But, Brother Marvin, we do not believe in infant baptism." The Bishop said, "But I do believe in infant baptism, I think the doctrine of infant baptism is clearly taught in the Scriptures, and you invited me to join you on the Bible as our only creed. Now do you propose to insist on your man-made creed which denies what I believe in Bible teaches?" The brother was put to confusion, and could make no adequate answer to the Bishop's position.

Some such method will expose all these proposals to renounce all "man-made creeds." The creeds of the churches are just the statement of what the several churches believe the Bible teaches. It is egotism in any man or any church to assume that his or its creed is the only true interpretation of the scripture. It is worse than egotism for one to assume that he only is sincere in the assertion of what he believes, and that all others are holding to their forms of faith for some other reason than sincere conviction that their beliefs are true.

Unless it is possible for all christian men to think exactly alike, or for all to quit thinking at all, we must let men group themselves according to their various beliefs According to their various beliefs It does not seem to be very apparent that any great gain would come to us than diverting ourselves of all but the essentials, and upon them coming together in one great organization. Such a process would lead to a result most monotonous and insipid. It is conceivable that it would lead to both insincerity and persecution. Some timid minds would be afraid to utter their real sentiments and would be tempted to disguise them, lest their views might be construed as violating the "essentials" agreed upon. Other men, of a fiercer and aggressive spirit, would be quick to fall upon their fellows, who expressed opinions different from their own, and punish them for infracting "the essentials."

"Let every man be fully persuaded in his own mind," and let him then join with those of like mind in doing all the good he can. Let all of us guard scrupulously against holding non-essentials as essentials, and forbidding others to cast out devils unless they follow our organization. Let no man consider all creeds but his own "man-made creeds;" that is in effect to claim inspiration for his own beliefs and charge infidelity to God's word upon all who do not agree with him. And that is neither reasonable nor religious.

The sin of schism is committed when any man insists upon imposing on the whole body of the faithful what God has not made essential to salvation. Separation from an organization may or may not be schism according to the facts in the case; but intolerant zeal for non-essentials is always schism in every case.

It is a wretched and un-Christly thing to seek sectarian ends under specious arguments and accusative pleas for what is called "christian unity." Joab was an adept in methods of that sort. "And Joab said unto Amasa, Art thou in health, my brother? And Joab took Amasa by the beard with the right hand to kiss him. But Amasa took no heed to the sword that was in Joab's hand; so he smote him therewith in the fifth rib, and shed out his bowels to the ground, and struck him not again; and he died." (II Samuel xx.9-10.) The kiss which is preliminary and instrumental to a disembowseling is not a "holy kiss." It is wholly unworthy of quite tenderly utter the healt of thy "brother" while holding in hand the sword with which you propose to take his life. It is difficult for a good man to frame and utter a speech strong enough to condemn justly a fratricidal purpose which conceals itself under fraternal professions while moving to its deadly end.

CAUSES WHICH LED TO FRENCH REVOLUTION

BY SMITH CLAYTON

After reciting somewhat in detail the causes which led to the French revolution in order that a plain understanding may be arrived at as to what the same causes will certainly result in any nation, I shall, in next Sunday's article, essay to show that Napoleon I was unquestionably the greatest Democrat of his time.

THE GREAT QUESTION—TAXES.

Under the old regime the people of France were divided sharply into two classes—those who paid the taille a direct tax and those who did not.

Now, among the latter were the noblemen. They numbered about 140,000 souls. They owned about one-fifth of the land. They had exclusive possession of the high offices at court. They were exempt from the corvee, or forced work on the roads, and from service in the militia. Observe this: the nobility were originally exempted from payment of the taille, direct tax, for the reason that it was looked upon as a commutation paid by the lower classes in lieu of military service; but the nobles retained and enjoyed the exemption laws after they had ceased to perform military service.

In the payment of indirect taxes, something like the high tariff of this country, these nobles succeeded also in evading a very large part of their share.

ADDITION OR SUBTRACTION.

In addition to all this there were the old privileges and immunities for the nobles, such as the ancient rights of fines and dues and tithes; of hunting and fishing and warren of toll on mill and winepress.

But, mark you, the old-time service of protection and of guidance to the vassals, or producers, were gone.

Let us, however, be absolutely fair.

A distinction must be made between the court nobility who lived in magnificence and luxurious ease at Versailles or Paris and helped in piling up the gigantic deficit with the superb and superlative extravagance of the court was weighing down and wrecking the country, and the country nobility who composed the great body of that class and lived in retirement on their estates. Many of them were poor and inactive since absolutism would make no use of them as its agents.

But they were a privileged class just the same, and a heavy burden just the same to their impoverished tenants.

THE PRELATES.

The church comprised about 60,000 monks and nuns, and some 70,000 of the secular clergy. But between the prelate of the church and the great body of the poor priests the same chasm yawned which separated the court nobility from the country nobility.

JUSTICE TO THE PRIESTS.

It must, in justice, be said that the mass of the French priesthood was devoted, unselfish, most zealous in its duties. But among the higher clergy, the archbishops and bishops, there were many who were just as selfish and ambitious as the nobility.

They demonstrated this in their eagerness to escape their fair share of taxation and hungered after dues and tithes.

RICH CHURCH.

The church owned about one-fifth of the land in France, and with their crown and nobility shifted burdens upon the remaining two-fifths. It nas been stated that the nobles owned about one-fifth of the land.

PRIVILEGED TRADING.

Privilege ruled also in the middle classes. In the towns there was a wide gap between the bourgeoise, or well-to-do tradespeople, and the artisan and mechanic population. Both trade and industry were regulated by the guilds after the selfish spirit of mediaeval times. Municipal offices were put up for sale by the government. As they usually carried with them certain privileges and immunities, chiefly relief from taxation, they were much sought after.

Great corporations were as glib and diligent in swearing taxes as their modern successors. The rich bourgeoisie, or middle class, vied with the court nobility and the higher clergy in evading the burdens of state.

THE GROUND-DOWN PEOPLE PRODUCERS.

What, now, was the effect of all this?

Why, it was upon the peasantry, the farmers, the producers, the most valuable and important class in all France, that the full brunt of taxation fell.

Serfdom was almost extinct in France. True, more than one-fifth, of the land was held by peasant proprietors. And singularly enough throughout the eighteenth century still more and more land poured into the hands of the peasants in spite of the almost intolerable exactions and extortions imposed upon them. Taine has figured that more than four-fifths of the fruits of the labors of the peasants were taken away by the government, that is the royalty. FIRST and SECOND ESTATES in the form of taille, direct tax, corvee, poll tax, vingtcimes, and the gabelle, or salt tax. The lands of the church and the nobles were cultivated by the peasants under the Metayes system. The owner supplied the stock and implements, the peasant the labor, both sharing equally. Still, the general state of agriculture was very wretched.

AWFUL EFFECTS.

Want was the chronic condition of the working population. Famine was a frequent horror. Beggary increased to an alarming extent.

Why?

Existing conditions were wrong. Revolution, alone, could change them. And France in the latter part of the eighteenth century was very ripe for revolution. As I showed last Sunday that was the only way to the rights of man.

Think of it—in 1777, just 12 years before the storming of old Bastille, there were one million and a quarter beggars in France. Rioting was common, and the lawless class drew plenty of recruits from the proletariat of the city, town and country.

COULD NOT STAND IT!

To say the least the unrair, the unreasoning,the absurdity antiquated, in government and society, could not hope to maintain itself. In his "Spirit of the Law," Montesquieu attacked absolution. He held up the ideal of constitutional liberty as realized in Great Britain. Voltaire, whom many consider the greatest and bravest of all Frenchmen and to whom France and free men everywhere will owe a debt of gratitude for all time.

GRAND VOLTAIRE.

Voltaire, who dared to express what he thought and what the people felt and needed, waged a ceaseless warfare of the keenest ridicule and biting wit and the very sharpest, most merciless satire against the absurd, the anamoly in church, state and society.

Voltaire won!

Swiftly the conviction grew of the utter worthlessness of existing conditions.

The revolt against the actual reached its climax in the superb work of Rousseau.

Brave Rousseau.

In the very teeth of privilege, injustice and oppression.

He invoked the law of nature to establish the equality of man.

To the peasantry and the artisan clan equality meant the just redistribution of public burdens.

To the cultured, ambitious bour*geoise, an equal opportunity with the* nobles for sharing in the national life

GOOD DEMOCRATS.

Rousseau won!

No better Democrats ever lived than Voltaire and Rousseau, except, perhaps, Napoleon I, about whose part in making France a republic I'll write next Sunday.

Developing Georgia's Agriculture

BY DR ANDREW M. SOULE

GEORGIA has made great strides agriculturally in the past decade. Many influences have contributed to this result, but no one factor deserves more credit than that of education as applied to the solution of the problems of the farmer. Within the period mentioned the whole scheme of instruction in agriculture has been reorganized and directed along modern scientific lines to the end that some of the more important principles which research has brought to light might be made available to a considerable proportion of those who till the soil. The growing appreciation of education as applied to agriculture has been amply demonstrated by the growth of the State college of Agriculture which now has nearly 140 men studying for degrees as compared with 25 five years ago. The increase in attendance on the long courses has been approximately 33 and 33 per cent for the past two years. The enrollment in all courses up to the present time is 200, and promises to be 300 before the end of the present college year. It is doubtful if a larger body of young men has gathered together in any southern state for the purpose of specializing along the lines of scientific agriculture.

While the state has not made large appropriations as compared with many others in the south, enough money has been provided to erect a splendid building and gather some very excellent equipment for the instruction of students. It has been a difficult, and at times discouraging task to overcome the opposition and prejudice which has existed towards agricultural education, but it is gratifying to record that progress is being made in the right direction and one of the problems which the state now faces is the immediate provision of additional buildings and facilities in order that the young men in Georgia may not be deprived of the advantages which education with reference to modern agricultural practice insures.

The awakening of intellectual faculties as applied to agricultural development is the most gratifying occurrence within the past ten years. Forty years men went hungry, though there was an abundance of land throughout the world to produce all the bread needed. For reasons hard to understand, however, no attention was given to the utilization of this land and the evolution through inventive genius of types of implements by which it might be worked with economy. During this period men dreamed about the moon and endeavored to establish false standards of philosophy and living. There were a few extremely rich and millions in abject poverty and distress. Civilization was stagnated and industrial progress at the lowest ebb. With the advent of the mowing machine and the reaper a change came over the face of affairs which few men of this day and generation are able to appreciate, for it made bread available to every one at a reasonable price. In 1830, for instance, it took three hours of a man's time to produce a bushel of wheat. By machinery in 1912 this was accomplished in less than a minute, with the result abundant supply of bread for every one the standards of living have been raised, intellectual advancement has been witnessed on every hand, and our modern industrial development and civilization owes its existence largely to the fact that man through the application of his intellect to the problem of utilizing the natural gifts of the soil has been able to provide for himself an abundance of cheap food and raw materials.

This illustrates,the power of the trained intellect as applied to the advancement of the nation through the utilization of its latent potentialities. One example must suffice for this instance, but as great progress has been witnessed in the evolution of cotton, the development of corn and the promotion of our live stock industries as the result of the application of the foregoing we may justly conclude that while the state of Georgia is making great advancement, the future will be determined by the degree to which she promotes education in agriculture so that the young men and the youth of the state who are to be her leaders may be perfected along this line, and those living in the country and cultivating the soil so directed that they will be able to use the natural gifts of their special environment to the best advantage in the development of a type of agriculture which may be regarded as permanent, economic, and therefore constructive in its purpose and scope.

The power of the application of a few principles in redirecting the energy of a people is best illustrated by what has been accomplished through the boys' and girls' clubs, which were organized through the agency of the University of Georgia in 1906. Chancellor Barrow is due great credit for the keen and foresight he exercised with reference to the promotion of these organizations. Today Georgia has 15,000 boys and girls in *her industrial clubs, and they are teach*ing a lesson to young and old alike which will surely borne fruit of the greatest importance and which is destined to revolutionize our point of view with reference to farm practice and industrial advancement in the near future. In 1906 when the clubs were started, Georgia was producing about ten bushels of corn per acre, and the crop for that year approximated 45,000,000 bushels. In 1911, the average yield was 18.5 bushels and the state produced about 75,000,000 bushels of corn. The increase in a period of six years was 30,000,000 bushels, equal to a money value of $30,000,000. The additional corn produced has enabled the purchase and maintenance of more horses and mules of a larger standard. By this means it has been possible to use more modern agricultural implements and cultivate the soil to better advantage. The $30,000,000 annually sent out of the state for foodstuffs has been kept at home, and in fact, commission merchants in Chicago and St. Louis have complained about the falling off in the shipments of corn to this state. Surely, the capitalization of a few elementary principles of modern agriculture through the receptive minds of the boys and girls of Georgia has brought an economic profit of startling proportions. What may be anticipated when 300,000 boys enter these clubs with the ambition and purpose in life is brought into the heart of every community, no matter how isolated?

The girls have done magnificent work along the lines of canning and domestic science, yet this work has only begun. The writer visited a school fair in Oconee county recently to see the product from one girl's tenth-acre plat, which had been cultivated under the direction of the collaborative co-operation with Professor McWhorter, superintendent of public instruction for that county. This little girl had made a net profit of $8, which is probably as much as was obtained from any acre of land in the county last year. This profit was on the basis of $20 per acre, yet this little girl displayed a record showing every phase of the work she had performed in the growth of the crop and just how she had earned so much money.

There are some who decry the type of education portrayed in this article because it smacks too much of commercialism and the economic side of life; they fear it lacks cultural value. The writer does not believe it is possible to erect a ten-story building without a good foundation. No one has yet accomplished such a wonderful engineering feat. Neither is it possible to develop a love for the aesthetic and the artistic until people have been given an opportunity to earn a sufficient amount of money through the development of their intellects along certain lines to make them appreciate the value of high standards of living and an advanced civilization. It is not possible to build beautiful roads, in the country, erect fine consolidated rural schools, reconstruct the country churches, and build palatial homes with modern improvements until the man living on the land has learned how to so utilize it so as to double, treble and even quadruple its earning power.

It will be admitted by many that success in any line of life is bound to bring a measure of culture and to give a force to character which may otherwise be lacking. The little girl who works out in nature's garden under the canopy of heaven with the birds singing in the tree tops and the flowers of the field in riot about her is certainly not so situated that her labor should be at all degrading or lack opportunity for culture and an appreciation of the finer sentiments which make life most worth while. The little girl who is learning how to take some of God's best gifts and mold them through her will and through the application of certain well known scientific principles into a vitalized energy which they did not possess before is certainly drinking deeply at the fountain of knowledge, and is going to be a bigger, better and broader woman because of this experience. The fact that she has learned to do her work from an economic standpoint will not limit her vision, but will fit her better in the crisis of life to meet each new obstacle successfully and to grasp opportunity when it presents itself at her doorway.

Only one phase of the extension work being carried on by the State College of Agriculture has been touched on in the foregoing paragraphs. Work of equal importance with reference to soils, live stock, poultry, plant production, chemistry, horticulture, farm mechanics, veterinary medicine and forestry is being prosecuted. More than 100,000 white farmers in the state of Georgia were reached last year through the extension services of the college. Petitions and requests are daily being received by the institution asking for aid and advice in solving some local problem which has been baffling the community for many years. Responses have been made to these as generously as possible. Georgia is a big state, and when her population becomes aroused along agricultural lines, it is impossible for the College of Agriculture to handle these requests satisfactorily unless more liberally endowed by the state in the immediate future than has been the case in the past. The time has evidenly arrived when new buildings and equipment must be provided for the sons of the young men who are coming to Athens to receive the training which will in deed and in fact constitute them leaders in agricultural development throughout the length and breadth of Georgia. Certainly the people non-resident at the college are entitled to as much of the vital facts of agriculture as they are now known and appreciated. The state can not afford to ignore the fact that with the power which knowledge brings to them for increasing their earning capacity, the improvement of their social and financial status and the enlargement of their vision as it pertains to all that makes for the welfare and advancement of humanity is problematic.

It will be necessary, therefore, for the board of trustees of the State College of Agriculture to ask for a considerable increase in appropriations for the enlargement of the teaching faculty and for the maintenance of the extension work organized so auspiciously a few years ago, and which has now grown to the proportions indicated in this article. Intelligent economy demands that the investment of every business man. In the same way they constitute the most important and essential investment of the state. Georgia stands at the threashold of a development along agricultural lines which is destined to revolutionize her industries. The future depends on the liberality with which the state endows those agencies capable of taking the plastic mind of youth and increasing its power ten, twenty, yea, even one hundred fold, through educational processes.

PLANTING COWPEAS ON STUBBLE LAND.

E. W. B., Madison, Ga., writes: I have some ground that was in cotton that was in good condition and want to plant it to sorghum and peas. What would be the cheapest and quickest way to do this? Heretofore I have been sowing the seed, turning them under and then harrowing level and smooth, but thought probably there was a quicker way. How would it do to sow the seed and then run a cutaway harrow twice across the field at right angles? Would this put the seed in the ground? Two mules could by this means do the work of six.

A cutaway harrow may be used to advantage in preparing stubble land for seeding to cowpeas. Seasonal conditions will have much to do with the success attending this practice. It is also important to take into consideration to prepare the land fairly well for the pea crop. We have had excellent success from the use of the cutaway harrow and the method of planting suggested in your letter as well, but our greatest and most permanent success has come from the use of gang plows which turn the land fairly shallow but rapidly and enable the farmer through the use of the harrow and grain drill to prepare and plant his peas under the most favorable conditions. Of course, your long experience in the cultivation of this crop has impressed you with the importance of so preparing the land as to secure a uniform stand as quickly as possible after seeding, and, therefore, plowing the land as in your former practice or with a sing plow, as has been suggested. will in our judgment be more likely to insure securing the best results.

MAKING MANURE FROM LITTER.

H. H. B., Hartwell, Ga., writes. Our land is cut up by what we call "slushes." bottom places enriched with the washings of the hillsides, and rank with vegetable, such as maple, berry bushes, swamp grass, etc. It has occurred to me that this would make good litter for our horse and cow stalls because I have understood that more nitrogen is to be gotten leaf than in dry vegetation. What do you think of this plan for enriching our land?

There is no reason why the litter and trash growing in the rich bottom places to which you refer should not be used to advantage as a substitute for other forms of bedding in the stalls or stables where various classes are maintained. On the eastern shore of Virginia where they grow sweet and Irish potatoes almost exclusively the pine areas on practically every farm are used as sources of vegetable matter, the pine needles and other trash being raked up carefully each year and placed in the bottom of the furrows before the planting is done. This has been found very beneficial to these crops and is now an almost universal practice with the farmers in that section.

In Georgia thousands of pounds of nitrogen and other desirable forms of fertilizing material might be utilized to excellent advantage, as you have suggested, and we are doing all in our power to encourage this practice. It is shown beyond question of doubt that yard manure or the nearest substitutes therefor can be used to the greatest advantage on our Georgia land, one of the main defects of which is its deficiency in vegetable matter. It is true that nitrogen is likely to be found in larger quantities in living plants before they reach a state of maturity and before the grain or seed has ripened. Nitrates in a living plant are fixed and those in a dead plant or leaf are not fixed and are therefore liable to be washed away by rains.

SUPPLEMENTED FERTILIZERS FOR COTTON.

L. E. S., Wetumpa, Ala., writes: I have nine acres in cotton that was in truck early in the spring which were well fertilized. I put 500 pounds of 10-2-2½-5 on the rotton. The cotton has been chopped out. What fertilizer shall I use now? I also have three acres planted in melons in rows 8 feet apart, with beets between the rows. Used 1,000 pounds of 8-5-0 fertilizer. Will the fertilizer put on the beets help the melons? I put 800 pounds under the melons when planted and 800 pounds as side application when bunching. Would nitrate of soda be helpful now?

The cotton on the lands described in your letter will be benefited to a considerable extent by the fertilizer used under the truck crops, and the use of 500 pounds of a 10-2-2½-5 as an initial application at the time of planting the cotton was certainly a good formula to use in view of the previous fertilization of the land. We would suggest that you use about 200 pounds of a 10-4-5. This side application may be put on any time in the next two or three weeks and may be safely broadcast or put alongside the drill rows which ever you consider most convenient. Personally, we would prefer to have it drilled in the ground so the feeding roots of the plants will traverse a larger area of land and thus have an opportunity to gather a larger proportion of plant food. Nitrate of soda may be needed on this crop as a final application. That can only be determined by the character of growth the crop makes and seasonal conditions. The melons have been well fertilized and we doubt whether it is advisable to, use any more plant food at this particular time. If so, nitrate of soda would be the only thing to use and it should be applied at the rate of 200 pounds per acre, putting it in a circle around the hills but not in contact with the vines. If the land is low in vegetable matter and the plants do not vine as freely as desirable to insure the largest yield, we would use the nitrate.

Tourists and Fake Curios

(New York Sun.)

London—Dr. Wakeling, the Egyptologist, says it is useless to warn tourists against the fake curio. He buys and is sold with unfailing regularity and hardly any imitation is too gross to deceive him.

Dr. Wakeling tells the story of a woman who brought a scrarab from a boy who assured her that he had himself stolen it from the excavations in the Temple of Akhaten, displayed her treasure triumphantly and always with the words, "And I am sure it must be true, for he had such an honest little face."

"NO," says the Duchess of Sutherland; "and if I were a man I would not marry a girl who hasn't studied domestic science and who does not look upon housework as her natural aim in life without stipulated compensation."

Should Wives Be Paid Wages?

"YES," says Cicely Hamilton, popular authoress, in her new book. "Housekeeping is her trade. A woman should draw her wages regularly or quit. It is her right to be paid for her labor."

Duchess of Sutherland.

The Woman to Marry

By the Duchess of Sutherland

If I were a man I would only marry a woman who had been taught domestic science. This means in all its branches, including cooking, making beds, sweeping, marketing, etc. Woe betide him if he doesn't, especially if he is an old fashioned type of man. And perhaps we ought to add, woe betide the woman. The men and women of bygone days understood the importance of these words. Women in all classes, from the richest to the poorest, could weave, spin and embroider, and cook. Their potions and household remedies gave them and their children health and beauty, which women acquire with difficulty these days. They did not bother their heads about Latin and Greek, and never felt ignorant because they were unschooled in the higher learning so much appreciated by women today.

"IF I were a man," said an old fashioned woman, addressing a class in domestic science, "I would only marry a woman who had been taught domestic science. This means in all its branches, including cooking, making beds, sweeping, marketing, etc. Woe betide him if he doesn't, especially if he is an old fashioned type of man. And perhaps we ought to add, woe betide the woman."

Their potions and household remedies gave them and their children health and beauty, which women acquire with difficulty these days. They did not bother their heads about Latin and Greek, and never felt ignorant because they were unschooled in the higher learning so much appreciated by women today."

These are the words of the Duchess of Sutherland, one of the great leaders of English society. She is one of the popular women in London today and is admired at court for her beauty and unaffected manner. Her husband is one of the richest men in England, being a great landowner, having a great mansion in London and estates in the country.

* *

Result of Foolish Education.

"The reason for the lamentable decay of interest in the late Victorian period in domestic science would take too long to dissect," she says. "Suffice it to say that for a time they had passed through some foolish decades in the education. Many wretched, ill fed, ill developed families, many faded and disappointed spinsters, were left to tell the tale of incompetence and ignorance. It would be a good thing if some of the subjects at present taught in schools made way for longer hours at cooking, hygiene, laundry, and needlework. Practically developed, domestic science, taken seriously, might be a valuable cure for the restlessness of the age."

The duchess believes that the situation is far from hopeless—in fact, it is encouraging. By the right kind of education men and women both are to learn the value of good work and how it counts for the home and the children. When women learn their work in the home as a science there will be healthy children and happy men and women.

These old fashioned views might sound strange for most duchesses, but the Duchess of Sutherland comes from a democratic family. She is a daughter of Blanche, Lady Rosslyn, and is one of that group of beautiful, liberal minded sisters, the Countess of Warwick, Lady Algernon Gordon-Lenox, the Countess of Westmoreland, and Lady Angela Forbes. Her brother is Rosslyn, who went on the stage. Before her marriage to the Marquis of Stafford she was Lady Millicent St. Clare Erskine, and her marriage to the marquis had quite a romance attached to it.

Romance of Her Marriage.

She was only 16 and was allowed to be present at her mother's dinner party because one of the guests had disappointed his hostess at the twelfth hour. She was placed next to the marquis so there should not be thirteen at the table. He saw that she was beautiful, charming, and clever, though he had no knowledge of the fact that she had been trained in all the branches of housekeeping and was as capable as she was attractive. In spite of her mother's protests on account of her youth, the wooing was short and successful. Their marriage took place on the bride's seventeenth birthday.

The duchess spent her days until she was 20 traveling and writing books of short fiction stories and of travels.

Then she commenced to show her husband, her friends, and the people living on her estates what a real duchess should do. She persuaded her husband to convert Trentham hall, a famous country seat in Staffordshire, into a trade school for crippled children. The "hall" was noted for its size and magnificence, for it had been built from the designs of Barry at a cost of $750,000. The rooms in which titled favorites were once entertained were changed into classrooms and workrooms superintended by excellent instructors. Here the children were taught many trades and handicrafts.

Guild Now Includes 400 Children.

The guild has now grown until it is self-supporting and is capable of accommodating 400 children. The workrooms are equipped with the best class of tools and machinery. At the various benches sit the crippled children of all ages. They work the regulation hours of their trade, except for such time as is devoted to lectures and instruction. All the materials are supplied, and while some work from patterns, the more gifted among the cripples make original designs. Their recreation includes games, reading aloud, and music.

Another of the duchess' important works has been the revival of cottage industries. When she was first married, in going over her husband's estates, she noticed that some of the women were neglecting their homes and their families because they were employed away from home. The duchess determined to get them work which could be done at home so that they could earn a living and at the same time look after their families. She worked hard to encourage the revival of the hand loom weaving of homespuns, serges, and tweeds. The sale of these goods she fostered by wearing the stuffs herself and encouraging her friends to wear them.

* *

Works as Nurse in Hospital.

The duchess also gives up a certain portion of her time every week working as a nurse for the sick and the poor. She wears the regular nurse's uniform and does all the hard work required of the professional nurse. The institution in which she nurses is a small hospital founded by herself for the purpose of giving the sea water treatment introduced by Dr. Quinton of Paris. The treatment is especially designed to cure diseases arising from overcrowding.

For all this charitable work the duchess does not neglect her own home, for she practices what she preaches. Her husband owns more than half a dozen magnificent estates in different parts of the kingdom. They have one beautiful residence at Dunrobin, in the far north of Scotland, another at Trentham, the duke's ancestral home in England, the "Brentham" of Disraeli's "Lothair," and Stafford House in London, one of the handsomest and best kept residences in the British capital.

Though she has plenty of servants, the duchess superintends all the different apartments herself. She never lets anything interfere with her work. She is a devoted mother, having one little daughter and two boys.

The Duchess of Sutherland is fair and distinguished looking, not perhaps with the bewildering beauty of her half sister, Lady Warwick, but with a cultured charm of her own. Her husband is a great deal prouder of his attractive, sensible wife than of being the head of the house of Sutherland, a man of great wealth, and one of the richest land owners in England.

The Old Fashioned Girl Made the Best Wife.

Miss Cicely Hamilton.

Miss Cicely Hamilton is a young Englishwoman who has come into the limelight within the last four years by reason of her plays, "Jack and Jill," given at the Little theater, London, early in 1911, and "Just to Get Married," which New York saw early this spring with Miss Grace George in the leading role. Her disquisitions on the modern woman, especially in the marriage relation, which have appeared both in book and monograph form, have attracted much attention.

MARRIAGE is essentially a trade on the part of woman. It is legitimate, therefore, to inquire into the manner in which that trade is carried on and to compare the position of the worker in the matrimonial with the position of the worker in any other market.

Marriage, with its accompaniments and consequences—the ordering of a man's house, the bearing and rearing of his children—has, by the long consent of ages, been established as practically the only means whereby woman, with honesty and honor, shall earn her daily bread. Her every attempt to enter any other profession has been greeted at first with scorn and opposition; her sole outlook was to be dependence upon man. Yet the one trade to which she is destined, the one means of earning her bread, she may not openly profess. No other worker stands on the same footing.

The man who has his bread to earn with hands or brains goes out to seek for the work to which he is trained; his livelihood depending on it, he offers his skill and services without shame or thought of reproach. But with woman it is not so; she is expected to express unwillingness for the work for which she has been taught and trained.

* *

Spirit of Combination Suppressed.

I need scarcely point out that man, like every other wage payer, has done his level best and utmost to suppress the spirit of combination and to encourage distrust and division amongst the wage earners in the matrimonial market, and that the trade of marriage, owing to the isolation of the workers, has offered unexampled opportunities for such suppression of unity and encouragement of distrust and division.

But in spite of this women in general recognize the economic necessity of marriage for each other and in a spirit of instinctive comradeship seek to forward it by every means in their power. There must be something extraordinarily and unnaturally contemptible about a woman who, her own bargain made and means of livelihood secured, will not help another to secure hers; and it is that motive, and not a rapturous content with their own unclouded destiny, not an unhesitating conviction that their lot has fallen in a fair ground, which makes of so many married women industrious and confirmed matchmakers.

What has been termed the "huge conspiracy of married women" is nothing but a huge trade union whose members recognize the right of others to their bread.

* *

Standard Set for Women.

Marriage being not only a trade but a necessity, it must follow as the night the day that the acquirement of certain characteristics, the characteristics required by an average man in an average wife, has been rendered inevitable for women in general. There have, of course, always been certain exceptional men who have admired and desired certain exceptional and eccentric qualities in their wives; but in estimating a girl's chances of pleasing—on which depended her chances of success or a comfortable livelihood—these exceptions, naturally, were taken into but small account, and no specialization in their tastes and desires was allowed for in her training.

The aim and object of that training was to make her approximate to the standard of womanhood set up by the largest number of men, since the more widely she was admired the better were her chances of striking a satisfactory matrimonial bargain. The taste and requirements of the average man of her class having been definitely ascertained, her training and education were carried on on the principle of cultivating those qualities which he was likely to admire and repressing with an iron hand those qualities to which he was likely to make objection—in short, she was fitted for her trade by the discouragement of individuality and eccentricity and the persistent molding of her whole nature into the form which the ordinary husband would desire it to take.

* *

Pattern Set for All Wives.

It is ridiculous to suppose that nature, which never makes two blades of grass alike, desired to turn out indefinite millions of women all cut to the regulation pattern of wifehood—that is to say, all home loving, charming, submissive, industrious, unintelligent, tidy, possessed of a desire to please, well dressed, jealous of their own sex, self-sacrificing, cowardly, filled with a desire for maternity, endowed with a talent for cooking, narrowly uninterested in the world outside their own gates, and capable of sinking their own identity and interests in the interests and identity of a husband.

I imagine that few women naturally unite in their single persons these characteristics of the class wife; but, having been relegated from birth upwards to the class wife, they had to set to work, with or against the grain, to acquire some semblance of those that they knew they were lacking.

One peculiarity of the trade at which so many women earn their livelihood is that, however arduous and exacting the work it entails—and the rough manual work of most households is done by women—it is not paid except by a wage of subsistence. She is fed and lodged on the same principle as a horse is fed and lodged—so that she may do her work, her cooking, cleaning, sewing, and the tending and rearing of her children. She may do it well or badly; but beyond food, lodging, and a certain amount of clothing, she can claim no wage for it.

* *

Cheap Labor Most Inefficient.

Given a sufficiently large number of persons destined and educated from birth for one particular calling, with no choice at all in the matter and with every other calling sternly barred to them, and you have all the conditions necessary for the forcing down of wages to the lowest possible point to which they will go. In that calling labor will be as cheap as the heart of the employer could desire; and, incidentally, it will tend to become what ill paid labor always tends to become—inefficient. Exactly the same condition of affairs would prevail in another trade.

That the wage of subsistence, board, lodging, and clothing, dealt out to a married woman is often on a liberal and comfortable scale does not alter the fact that it is essentially a wage of subsistence, regulated by the idea of what is necessary for subsistence in the particular class to which she may happen to belong.

* *

Attention to Duty of No Avail.

The monetary reward of wifehood and motherhood depends entirely on the life, good luck, and good nature of another person; the strictest attention to duty on the part of a wife and mother is of no avail without that. The really hard labor of housework is done in those households where the wage of subsistence is lowest; and the women who receive the most money from their husbands are precisely those who pass on the typical duties of a wife and mother to other persons—housekeepers, cooks, nurses, and governesses.

That marriage has another side than the economic I should be the last to deny. In many households there is a sharing of material as well as intellectual interests.

* *

Why Should It Be "Natural."

One wonders why it should be "natural" in women to do so many disagreeable things. Does the average man really believe that she has an instinctive and unquenchable craving for all the unpleasant and unremunerative jobs? Or is that only a polite way of expressing his deeply rooted conviction that when once she has got a husband she ought to be so thoroughly happy that a little uncongenial work more or less really cannot matter to her?

It may be argued that in the greater number of cases marriage, for the husband, means the additional labor and expense of supporting a wife and children, and that this added labor and expense is expected from him as a matter of course, and that neither does he receive any thanks for it. Quite so. But marriage is a voluntary matter on the part of a man.

The position of the woman is different. She often enters the married state because she has to—because more lucrative trades are barred to her; because to remain unmarried will be to confess failure.

* *

Wife Gets Worst of Bargain.

These being the conditions under which, consciously or unconsciously, the average wife strikes her bargain, it follows that in the ensuing division of labor she generally gets the worst of the transaction, the duties assigned to her being those which her husband would prefer not to perform. They are handed over to her as a matter of course and on the assumption that they enter into what is commonly known as her "sphere."

It seems to me that the work of a woman who brings up children decently, creditably, and honorably is of such immense importance that it ought to be suitably rewarded. But I am certain that it never will be suitably rewarded until it is undertaken freely and without pressure and until the wife and mother herself summons up courage to insist on adequate payment for her services.

It may not be necessary that payment should be made in actual money; but in whatever form it is made it must be of a more satisfactory and substantial nature than the present so-called privileges of the married woman, involving an all around improvement in her status. And that all around improvement she will demand—and get—only when it is borne in upon her that her unmarried sisters have placed themselves in a position to get out of life a great deal more than she is permitted to get out of it. When she realizes that fact to the full she will go on strike—and good luck to her!

A FLURRY IN PILLS

The Fifth "John Ames-Rover," Story By John Randolph Chester

THE porter being in sight, John Ames wisely refrained from opening the window for the attractive young lady, moreover, he had an impression that her thanks would be disconcerting if he did. She had a sarcastic gray eye.

"May I open the window for you, Miss Janie?" offered the porter.

Uncomfortable porter, too! Ames liked them with a dialect and a chuckle; gray hair preferred.

"How are you coming on with your law studies, Lewis?" asked the gray-eyed one in the cold, even voice of intellectuality.

Ames glanced again at the clean-cut profile of the girl, slender, confidently poised, neatly tailored. She had long, curling eyelashes. He became conscious, in some indefinable way, that she was aware of his watching her, and there was a tiny sarcastic curl at the corner of her lips. Ames bent himself studiously to his paper. Mechanically he read again the headlines about the horse show, and the regatta, and the scandal at Newport, and turned from them to the advertisements of Ocean Foam baking powder, and Brainful breakfast cereal, and "Kleno, the Good Old-fashioned Stuff!"

That last advertisement annoyed him very much. Those six words were set in the midst of a great blank space, with a heavy black border around it, and a question mark underneath. He was supposing to waste his time in wondering what "Kleno" was, and in working up a mad desire to go out and buy it, and he refused to do this.

The cold, even voice of the girl flowed on and on. Lewis was a hard-working student, it seemed, and "Miss Janie" knew everything. Not that she made any tremendous assumption of knowledge—but that she was actually an astounding storehouse of well-digested education. Regular girl, too, for, all at once, the black-haired Ames noticed that sarcastic little curl again at the corner of her lips, and he stopped looking. He returned to the baking powder and the cereal, and "Kleno; the Good Old-fashioned Stuff!"

Ames grew tremendously fascinated. He found himself waiting for her to slip, lest she was right there with the correct answer, and the logical reason for it, about Cicero, and the binomial theorem, and the cosmos, and Arnold Bennet, a new kind of fudge. If she tripped any place, it was past where John Ames had been in the book, and he had leafed through quite a distance himself. Again he caught that sarcastic little curl, and looked carelessly out of the window, with a splendid restraint from abruptness. His eye lit on a big sign board, devoted entirely to "Kleno, the Good-Old-Fashioned Stuff!" Not caring a continental execration what Kleno might, or might not be, he slammed down his paper, and frankly listened. By that method he could better keep from looking.

It seemed that "Miss Janie" had a grand father, and a father and mother, and a normal number of uncles and aunts and cousins, and a pet niece, most of whom bore the family name of Stanbury. She had been vibrating on this road from branch to branch of the family tree, since she was a child, and would be a treat to talk with a girl like that.

A loose-faced brakeman popped his head in at the door, and yelled something which was probably the name of a town. He smiled at Miss "Janie" Stanbury, and she nodded brightly.

A savage-looking conductor came through. He was as surly in appearance as if he ate nothing but raw meat, and he bowed over, as he passed "Janie's" seat and made a remark which brought forth a giggle.

The train slowed down. The intellectual porter brushed Miss Stanbury, and accepted a quarter, and gathered up her luggage.

Mechanically, as if obeying some power outside his volition, tall John Ames picked up his own luggage, and followed!

"Oh, well, never mind," answered Ames, as one in a dream, and handed the porter a coin.

The amazingly informed girl, quite smart looking seen now in movement, stepped into a waiting family carriage, and the porter stepped on the step, leaving John Ames alone, in the middle of the platform with his trunks in the baggage car ahead, and his reason on a big his impulse, which had so often made a fool of him.

The train and the carriage moved away at the same moment. The porter, looking back, smiled broadly, then opened a wide mouth, and laughed. The girl, driving, did not smile. She grinned!

CHAPTER II.

ABOUT the only thing of interest John Ames saw in the town was a three-acre frame building with the sides blown out and without a whole pane of glass in it. Its only worthy thing about it, however, was a big, new, gilt sign above the cornice, which said:

"Kleno.

"The Good old-Fashioned Stuff."

The building itself was blackened and ground, and water-soaked, and its weather-boarding hung out in it, as if the structure had been carelessly rattled.

"Cleaning compound," explained the cigar store man across the street, "guaranteed to take the spots off anything, from a rotten reputation to a calico horse."

"The company has apparently moved," guessed Ames, trying still another brand of wit without much hope.

"The day of the explosion," returned the official joker, who had cultivated the trick of never smiling.

"Any one hurt?" said Ames wondered if he might not have done better by lighting the other end of his "perfecto."

"Nope, at least Henry never said so."

Ames frowned slightly with displeasure.

"Killed, he surmised. "One of the workmen?"

"The busiest one of the lot, but he was the proprietor," stated the cigar store man, who was frog-eyed. "Henry Phelps was well enough off to satisfy most anybody, until he thought about "Kleno"; but his heirs have no pride in the business. The way Henry popped across the street kind of discouraged them."

Ames had no flippancy for the topic of death.

All that advertising gone to waste," he worried. "It must have cost a fortune."

The cigar dealer was explaining, in his best humorous vein, just how much money Henry Phelps had spent, and how foolish he had been to spend it, and how regretful his heirs were about it, when an old-fashioned buggy drove up. Behind the plodding white horse sat Janet Stanbury and a straight little gray-haired man of the ancient school, whose firm lips sat above a chin which missed a beard.

"Doc Dill," grinned the cigar dealer. "He's quit practice so he can read more. This is a high-brow town. The girl with him lives next door to the professor. They're writing a book. Wouldn't that kill you? How do you like that cigar?"

"It's most uncomfortable," stated Ames, and resolved to buy no more in that place.

I M not feeling very well, Doctor," lied John Ames, glancing out of the window, in the direction of the house next door.

"Stick out your tongue," ordered Doctor Dill, taking Ames by the wrist, and consulting a silver watch the size of a saucer.

Ames produced a tongue which was red all the way back. The doctor popped his watch in his pocket, and looked at him reproachfully.

"What do you think's the matter with you?" he objected.

"Nothing much," confessed Ames; "a trifle of discomfort," and he placed his hand just over his top waistcoat button.

"It'll go away, the physician carelessly stated. "You don't need a doctor; but I'll give you something which will fix you up," and from the bottom shelf of a tall bookcase, he procured, out of a jumble of like articles, a small square box. "You better take one right now," he advised, pouring a glass of water from a big white pitcher.

Ames glanced at the box in dismay. It was labeled "Dill's Bilious Pills," and it contained twelve green marbles! For a moment, Ames chilled, and then he made an accurate pretense of popping the pill in his mouth, and choking it down with a great gulp of water.

"I haven't seen anything like that since I was a boy," he smiled, slipping the bolus in his pocket, and seeming in no hurry to go.

"I don't think you will," returned the doctor, frowning at some inward thought. "I've kept up with all the new methods, but, in some things, the old-fashioned way is the best."

"You put these up yourself," surmised Ames, looking eagerly about the room, for a live topic of conversation.

"I don't do much else," responded the doctor, stroking the bare chin which missed a beard. "I claim this to be the healthiest community in the country, and there's no house without a box of this standard old correctant."

"Who's your jobber?" inquired Ames, glancing again at the house next door, and wondering how long he could make the topic of pills hold out.

"That's good!" laughed the doctor. "Why, they won't even sell these things in our local drug stores. I've had a fight with these murdering druggists for years. The pills will be 25 cents. There'll be no charge for consultation because there's nothing the matter with you."

The end of the topic had arrived. Ames took his little box and paid his money and rose reluctantly.

"That's a fine bird's-eye photograph of Pompeii," he observed, clutching desperately at even this conversational straw. "Since this was taken, however ,that statute has been removed to the museum at Naples."

Doctor Dill turned to him with an entirely new consideration.

"Have you been there?"

"Yes, I've kept fairly good track of the excavations," responded Ames hopefully.

"Wait just a minute," begged Dr. Dill excitedly, jarring to the door. "Mother! Here's a gentleman who has been to Pompeii!"

CHAPTER IV.

YOU wouldn't like all of Italy," smiled Ames reminiscently, "I wonder why it is that the older the civilization the worse the sanitation."

"Probably for the same reason you find it that way in an old house," answered Jane Stanbury, with a little curl at the corners of her lips. "I believe sanitation is a recent whim, isn't it, doctor?"

Was it mockery which was always in her gray eyes, or was it just the live intelligence which ran blithely on before? In any event, it was disconcerting to the deliberate masculine mind. It was fascinating, however; very! She had beautiful eyelashes.

The doctor's reply to that was a chuckle of appreciation.

"There is always sunshine at Pompeii," mused "Mother" Dill, who wore her gray hair rippling coquettishly down the sides of her waxen cheeks, which had still the flush of pink in them. Above all things, she hated cloudy days. "You must visit Pompeii," urged Ames. "Neither words nor pictures will ever bring it to you," and he waved his hand over the litter of books, maps, and engravings strewn on the old doctor's library table.

"I wish we could afford it," regretted the doctor, with a fond glance at his wife.

"This past week of foreign travel, with Mr. Ames, has been most unsettling," complained Miss Stanbury, with a not unfriendly glance at the handsome and polished newcomer. "Frankly, I want to really go; every place!"

"Join the Dill party," laughingly advised Ames. "Doctor, you can go, if you want to."

"I know how poor I am," the doctor remonstrated.

"Any man is rich who has the means of producing wealth," stated Ames, becoming serious. "Why don't you market your pills?"

"Huh!" grunted the doctor. "I couldn't sell enough in a hundred years to send us to Europe."

"I believe you could," pondered Ames, and, for the first time, he found the eyes of Janet Stanbury fixed on him without the expression which he had fancied to be mockery. The reason for this suddenly dawned on him. In this particular instance, her mind had not outrun his. He had her mental processes waiting.

"Oh, do you suppose he could?" prayerfully wondered "Mother" Dill.

"I thoroughly do." John told her, acquiring a certain determination, as he looked at that waxen face, its delicate color deepened by eagerness.

"You're not bothered much about professional ethics are you, doctor?"

"I do anything I please, as long as it's honest," declared the doctor. "What connection is there between ethics and pills?"

"None," chuckled John; "except that I think the market is ready for some of the good, old-fashioned remedies."

He stopped and pondered a moment, as he uttered that familiar phrase, then he suddenly grinned.

"You'll have to remember I have no capital," the doctor reminded him.

Ames felt the gray eyes of Miss Stanbury fixed on him, still without mockery. She was wondering and wondering, and vexed with herself. She had seen that grin, and knew that he was evolving.

"You don't need capital," Ames thoughtfully assured him. "I think I'll take your case," and he made his adieus for the afternoon. He wanted to be alone.

CHAPTER V.

I BELIEVE you are the administrator and the principal heir of the Henry Phelps estate," began John Ames, as he confronted a man whose brows were so low over his eyes that there seemed to be no upper lide.

"Well?" retorted F. W. Phelps, who disliked his caller for three things; because he was well-dressed, well-bred, and published.

"I came to see you about the Kleno company," went on Ames taking a chair with pleasant assurance.

He might as well have offered to bite the grain and feed man; for that gentleman raised an indignantly quivering finger.

"Every Kleno bill is paid and receipted," he declared.

"I'm glad of that," observed Ames suavely; "because I thought somewhat of negotiating for the Kleno name."

F. W. Phelps displayed the fact that he could smile.

Ames smiled right back at him.

"Then there's no use to open negotiations," he stated in return. "The Kleno name is not worth a fancy price."

The administrator and principal heir lowering his brows until they almost obscured his eyes, squinted up at Ames quite studiously.

"Well, there's different opinions about that," he argued. "Why, man, Uncle Henry spent a hundred and fifty thousand dollars in making that name! There ought to be a profit on it."

Ames leaned over to smile at him more directly.

"If I find that I can use it, I'll pay you five thousand dollars for it," he coldly suggested.

T. W. Phelps conveyed, by expressive pantomime, the fact that he was dropping dead.

"I couldn't think of it for a minute!" he expostulated.

"Now, look here, Mr. Phelps," Ames kindly explained; "five minutes ago, you didn't think you would ever get a penny out o fthis unfortunate Kleno. The compound proved dangerous; nobody would have the formula as a gift, and the advertising is totally wasted. If you'll talk sensibly with me, I'll bargain with you: if you're going to bluff, I won't."

Twice the nephew of the departed inventor of "Kleno" started to bluster, and twice he checked his mind.

"Would the five thousand be in cash?" he avariciously inquired.

"One dollar down," Ames genially informed him, and considered books, maps and engravings on whether he should open a window.

"You are taking up valuable time," was the quite expected answer, and Mr. Phelps grew red in the eyes.

Ames pressed a wallet, thumbed over a leaf of large bills, and replaced the wallet in his pocket. The sight somewhat soothed Mr. Phelps.

"The doctor is to legalize a thirty-day option," Ames told him. "If I don't have time to find out whether I can use the Kleno name, it has no value to me at all. I wouldn't gamble a dollar and fifteen cents on it; but I will gamble a dollar."

Phelps still remembered the sight of all that money.

"What do you want to do with this?" he suspiciously demanded.

"If I told you, you'd try to do it yourself," was the calm retort. "If you think that you can squeeze more than five thousand dollars out of Kleno, keep it; but you must decide immediately."

T. W. Phelps struggled severely with himself.

"What kind of an option to do you want?" he finally asked.

"I'll write it for you," offered Ames, and did so.

As he passed over the paper, he again produced the wallet, and fingered through the sheaf of bills. Phelps made a rough estimate. He saw a one thousand dollar bill, and at least ten five hundreds, to say nothing of some small change, like hundreds and fifties. That was an extremely comfortable sight, and he read the option.

"Where's the dollar?" he wanted to know, as he reached for his pen.

CHAPTER VI.

GIVE me a dollar," demanded Ames.

Dr. Dill reached hesitantly in his pocket. He had perfect confidence in Ames, but he was an inquisitive-minded man. "What's it for?" he puzzled.

The foreign travel fund," smiled Ames.

"Mother" Dill, watching his face with the keen insight of mediumship, fumbled nervously in her work basket.

"If you haven't the change, I have, papa," she fluttering stated.

Forthwith a dollar of mine," begged Janet Stanbury, laughingly, but studying him curiously. "I'm going to Europe, too."

The doctor produced a much worn silver dollar, and Ames noticed that his look lingered on it when it was passed over.

"Now read me your riddle," the professor laughed.

"I warn you it's a long shot," Ames confessed, "but here's the dollar's worth I bought for you," and he handed over the thirty-day option, made out to John Ames, agent. "You see, I've endorse dit to you."

"Kleno!" figured the doctor, as he glanced at the paper.

"The good old-fashioned stuff," supplemented John. "You have the benefit of a hundred and fifty thousand dollars, advertising, if you'll only change the name of bill's Bilious Pills."

"To Kleno!" choked Janet. "Isn't that the cleverest thought?" and, now that she understood, that curl came once more to the corners of her lips.

"But what's it all about?" quavered the perplexed "Mother" Dill.

"It's the first step in your attempt to sell enough pills to go to Europe," Ames smiled at her. "The name 'Kleno' has been advertised all over the country. The doctor will put up some of *his pills under that name, and I'll pre-*sent them to some big drug jobbers. If they undertake the manufacture and sale of the pills, and the doctor's formula, it won't be very long until you can buy your steamer tickets."

"Oh, do you suppose they will?" trembled "Mother" Dill.

"Kleno!" exclaimed the doctor, and all at once, broke into a hearty laughter.

"The good old-fashioned stuff," added Ames.

"How very clever," breathed Janet, and at last John Ames understood her. He had thought her intelligent, but she was only intellectual.

KLENO!" exclaimed Clarence Beaker, of the immense drug jobbing house of Beaker, Troy & Postle. "I've been waiting for Kleno. You're rather far behind your advertising, though. Some of our biggest customers have been asking what it is."

"It's a pill," exclaimed Ames, producing one of the boxes, and displaying the awe-inspiring globules it contained.

Clarence Beaker, who was elliptical when he stood up, and could slip his collar on over his head, took but one glance at the bill, and did not ask what it was made of.

"Well, handle it with pleasure," he announced. "That was a good line of advertising. The good, old-fashioned stuff," and he shook his periphery with a display of appreciation. "Make the price right, and I'll give you an order for a thousand gross."

Ames shook his head.

"I prefer a proposition for you to take over the manufacture, sale and advertising from this point on."

The countenance of Clarence underwent an immediate change. He developed the trace of a neck.

"There hasn't been a penny's worth of Kleno sold, and $750,000 has been spent in advertising. I won't say that Dr. Dill is broke; but he does not feel equal to pushing the sale of this pill as it should be pushed."

Clarence Beaker, in whose face there were few features by which to judge of his thoughts, shoved back the box of pills.

"Sorry," he announced; "but, while we'd handle your pill with pleasure if you'd keep up the advertising, we couldn't go into the game ourselves. We have three cathartics of our own, and it would be foolish to pay for more competition."

Ames, though with sinking enthusiasm, studied the matter quietly.

"I think you are making a mistake," he urged. "The cathartics you have are all of some type, and there's no new appeal in them. The very size and color of this pill would inspire confidence."

"Maybe so," grunted Clarence indifferently; "but I've told you where we stand, unless you can finance the thing."

"I'll place it elsewhere," decided Ames, rising. "The name alone, familiar as it is to the public, makes it worth a serious marketing campaign. The name's a peach!" readily admitted the leading drug jobber. "I wish we owned it."

Ames, who never let any commercial hint escape him, breathed a sigh of relief.

"What will you give us for the name?" he immediately asked.

Again Mr. Beaker's expression underwent a change. It grew tighter towards the apex, as he reflected that the Kleno firm was probably flat broke.

"Of course we couldn't begin to pay you what you've actually lost in advertising," he indifferently stated; "but I'll give you a chance to save a little out of the wreck," and he drew the bills towards him again and looked into the box. "How much will you take?"

Ames studied his man in perplexity, and felt that he was unfairly handicapped. He had never before tried to read a man who offered so little in the way of factal guidance.

"Fifty thousand dollars," he "bluffed."

Mr. Beaker's countenance widened towards the base.

"Give you twenty-five thousand," he offered; "not a cent more!"

"Cash, I suppose," observed the agent as if in sarcasm.

Ames made no secret of his pleasure.

"Write me the check, less five thousand!" he exulted. "Here are the papers and my credentials."

Mr. Beaker examined those papers with interest and a smile. At last his face had expression.

"Option, eh?" he chuckled. "That's where the five thousand goes. Why, Kleno was originally to have been a cleaning compound! You know, I don't think it was a good name for a pill!"

"That's what worried me," acknowledged Ames. "I hope you have a better use for it!"

"Tooth wash," explained Beaker, reaching for his checkbook. "I've been hunting for a name for a month, but I never expected a snap like this. 'Kleno, the good, old-fashioned stuff!'"

"Yes, you bought a bargain," agreed Ames thoughtfully. "I still believe, however, you would have found the pill a good proposition. It has been tried for twenty years. It was formerly known as 'Dill's Bilious Pills.'"

Clarence Beaker jerked the box towards him.

"'Dill's Bilious Pill?'" he repeated. "Now that's what I call a name for a pill; especially a pill that looks like this! We might negotiate with Dr. Dill for his name and formula. We can unload it on our druggists without advertising."

John Ames, agent, waited until he had signed all papers, and had received a check.

"Speaking as Dr. Bill's representative, I may say that neither the formula nor the name is for sale," he firmly announced. "The doctor will manufacture them for you himself, but cannot begin until his return from Europe, next spring."

AMES disliked to be cruel, but he had a feat to make.

"Sorry, companions," he reported; "but they won't have the Kleno pill at any price."

Dr. Bill laughed, with no trace of disappointment.

"I'm sure I'm not done," he said, in attempted comfort.

"Mother" Dill's waxen fingers locked themselves together, and then see smiled very sweetly.

"Oh, I'm so sorry!" murmured Janet Stanbury, with softened gray eyes. "I don't care, Mr. Ames, it was a clever idea anyhow; a brilliant idea!"

Ames felt a trifle ashamed of himself.

"I didn't come back empty-handed, however," he went on, and passed over the check. "I sold the Kleno name for a check for $5,000."

"Twenty thousand dollars!" gasped the doctor, clutching at the coin which missed a beard.

"We!" muttered "Mother" Dill, and, adjusting her glasses carefully as she went, she hurried over to the bird's eye view of Pompeii.

Ames stole a glance at Janet. Again her gray eyes rested mockingly on him, and the curl came at the corners of her lips. She had penetrated him, and why had he done all this, from the time he had followed her off the train until now, when he had tried to test her. The curl came once more.

The doctor having feasted his eyes on the check for a long minute, slowly passed it back.

"This don't belong to me," he decided.

"Why not?" disputed Ames. "You paid for the option, and besides, the check is a direct outgrowth of your pill. I am sure I won't have the check.

The doctor, who was a just man, pondered slowly.

"I'll divide it equally with you," he offered. "That is positively the only basis on which I'll do business."

"All right," accepted Ames cheerfully. "I have less compunctions of conscience about it, because I've made a bargain for you to manufacture five hundred gross of your pill a month as soon as you get back from your trip to Europe. Beaker Troy and Postle think 'Dill's Bilious Pills' a great name for the article!"

Janet Stanbury's eyes glowed with admiration again.

"What a triumph of cleverness!" she exclaimed, and there was no mockery about her. However, Ames reflected, her sense of humor was liable to assert itself at any time. Suddenly he realized that she mocked only that which she understood. The thing which had *fascinated him had been but an imita*tion. He sighed; for her poise was perfect and her lashes were long.

The doctor shook him by the hand and "Mother" Dill, half smiling and half crying, drew him down by the lapels of his coat and kissed him.

"You've made the world so real" she told him. "How soon can you go to Europe, Jeanie?"

"As soon as you can get ready."

"Better go along, John," urged the doctor heartily.

John felt the eyes of Janet fixed on him, and that there was wistfulness in them.

"Sorry," he regretted; "but it is impossible."

Japanese Farmers Eat No Rice

("Our Neighbors: the Japanese," by Joseph King Goodrich.)

We are accustomed to think of the Japanese as "living upon rice," and my readers probably will be much astonished when I say that about one-half of the population of that country rarely eat rice. That one-half represents the very farmers who grow the cereal. Japanese rice is so good, is esteemed so highly by the wealthier natives who can afford to buy it, and commands such a high price in the east, that the farmer has to sell all his crop.

Rice is a luxury which is reveled only on on high days and holidays, or it is looked upon as a delicacy to be reserved exclusively for invalids. Prof. Chamberlain tells us that he once heard an old woman in a country village exclaim to another, with an ominous shake of the head: "What! do you mean to say it has come to giving her rice?" Meaning that the patient's condition must be well nigh hopeless if she had to be nourished on such expensive food.

Half Smiling and Half Crying, She Drew Him Down by the Lapels of His Coat, and Kissed Him.

He Accepted the Quarter and Gathered Up Her Luggage.

NEWS OF ATLANTA THEATERS

Tiger's Claws Covered For France's Sake

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

PARIS.—Considerable amazement has been caused in French political circles by a reconciliation which has just taken place between President Poincare and M. Clemenceau, ex-premier and "Wrecker of Cabinets." The president has ended a most grievous antagonism by burying the hatchet at, it would seem, a very grave moment f or France. It will be remembered that at the time of the president's election M. Clemenceau did all in his power to prevent the success of M. Poincare, and event went so far as to make a personal appeal to the latter to withdraw his candidature. M. Poincare indignantly refused, and since then "the Tiger," as M. Clemenceau is known in the chamber of deputies, has waged bitter war against the president and his supporters. There was, however, one point of contact between the two—their common support of the now famous three years' military service bill. Taking advantage of this circumstance, the president, throwing etiquette to the wind, sent for M. Clemenceau. When he arrived at the Elysee M. Poincare, advancing with outstretched hands, said simply: "I have sent for you, my dear friend, to consult frankly and patriotically with you about the present situation."

M. Clemenceau, taken aback, replied smilingly: "I am not the president of the council. But "the Tiger" was disarmed by the president's demeanor, and in a moment the two statesmen were friends. M. Poincare then placed before M. Clemenceau a number of confidential reports proving that the recent serious anti-military incidents and the mutinous demonstrations at Toul, Belfort, Macon, and elsewhere, where soldiers revolted, broke out of barracks and insulted their officers, were the outcome of a vast and mysterious plot, conceived and carried out by professional agitators. "Far graver happenings," said the president, "were to be feared, including violent manifestations in the capital itself, and the situation was so serious that only the closest relations between the leaders of all parties could avert civil war."

At the close of the interview M. Clemenceau promised M. Poincare that, while he would retain his liberty of opinion, he would consider it his duty to give the president and those associated with him in the government of the country his absolute support in aiding the republic to emerge from the present grave crisis. His last words as he left the Elysee were, "M. Poincare, you can count on me." In political circles the unexpected reconciliation of M. Poincare and M. Clemenceau is expected to be followed by the leaders' active collaboration in a patriotic cabinet.

Alfonso's Louis XIV. Frieze

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

MADRID.—A feature of the recent festivities at Fontainebleau was the grandstand decorated with red and gold in honor of King Alfonso. Conspicuous in the scheme of decoration was a magnificent frieze of the same colors, with the fleur de lys embroidered on it. The motif for this design lay in the fact that King Alfonso is a direct descendant of Louis XIV, and those one remembers that the use of this royal emblem has been vigorously banned in France for nearly a hundred years, the efficacy of the compliment will be appreciated. But the most interesting fact about this particular frieze is that it actually belonged to Louis XIV himself, for it used to adorn the marquee inhabited by "Le Roi Soleil" when staying in the country in the summer, and it has ever since been carefully preserved. The frieze is the same that one sees portrayed in the famous pictures by Van der Meulen.

Gertrude Vanderbilt, Favorite Singing and Dancing Comedienne of Atlanta, Heads Forsyth Bill – Second Week of "Quo Vadis" at Grand, More Musical Tabloid at the Bijou

Gertrude Vanderbilt, the dainty and pretty singing comedienne who scored such an immense hit at the Forsyth a season ago, and who has since been identified with some of the real successes along Broadway during the theatrical season that has just ended, and who has come back into vaudeville for a summer season of a few weeks, will headline the bill of Keith vaudeville at the Forsyth this week, assisted by George Moore, one of the cleverest dancing comedians in the theatrical profession.

Miss Vanderbilt and Mr. Moore will be decidedly welcome. They have never failed to score the sort of hit that keeps an artist in headline honors. They are originators of a peculiar style of singing and dancing and further they do not attempt anything that has been done by any one else, though the specialities of both Mr. Moore and Miss Vanderbilt have been used by other people in vaudeville.

SIX MUSICIANS.

The Six Musical Cuttys will be one of the features of the bill. Here is a family of brothers and sisters who are superior to any musicians in vaudeville. They are all skilled both as vocal and instrumental artists, and in the big theaters of the Keith circuit are held as features for weeks in succession.

Dorothy Richmond and her company will appear in a new comedy playlet that has won attention in all of the cities of the circuit. Miss Richmond presents Edgar Allan Woolf's "A Midnight Marriage." It is one of the best efforts of the vaudeville playwriter. It is full of human interest happenings and nothing is overdrawn. Minnie Allen, as pretty as a picture and as cunning as any real comedienne in the profession, will be one of the favorites of the week. Miss Allen has been identified successfully with some of the big things of the musical comedy and vaudeville world. She is an attractive miss. She is qualified in every way to fill headline honors, and it is predicted that Minnie Allen is going to be added to the long list of Atlanta favorites.

JAP NOVELTY.

Doc O'Neil, a comedian of unusual talents, will make his first appearance here. This fun maker has been in the Keith circuit for years, but his services have been in such great demand that he has not been able to visit Atlanta until this time.

The Four Hayama Japs in a novelty that is in a class all by itself, will be another of the features on this bill.

There will be other features on the bill and each of them just the sort best liked in Atlanta.

"QUO VADIS" AGAIN.

Because of the tremendous success of the George Klein production of "Quo Vadis" that kept the Grand packed to its capacity all of the past week, it has been arranged to hold the picture over for another week, positively the last chance local people have to witness the wonders of the photoplay.

"Quo Vadis" certainly made good all the promises that were made in advance of the opening on last Monday afternoon. There were people here in Atlanta who were a bit hard to convince that there was real merit in a motion picture show, but when the wonders of the Cines productions commenced to appear on the screen at the Grand, these people were at first startled, then interested, and finally became fixed in a perfect study as scene after scene of the most intense and vivid detail appeared.

It was Tuesday night when the Grand management was assured that but one week of the pictures in Atlanta would never do. Being engaged for the Wells circuit made the proposition easy, the date at Birmingham this week was set back another week and the announcements made that there would be twelve more chances to see "Quo Vadis," starting with the matinee on Monday afternoon.

A THRILLING PICTURE.

From every viewpoint this is the most marvelous achievement in the photo drama realm and richly deserves its success. It is dramatic, spectacular and thrilling at the same time. The multitude of incidents contained in Henry Sienkiewicz's world-famed story from which the pictures were made have been more than faithfully reproduced and all the romantic and historic values retained.

For lovers of romance the beautiful story of the Roman youth Vinitius' *great love for the sweet young Chris*tian girl, Lygia, is graphically visualized as well as the companion story of Petronius' affection for his slave, Eunice.

To admirers of history and searchers for thrills nothing can be more satisfactory than these vivid pictures of the infamous Nero and his court, with its horrible though spectacularly gorgeous feasts and orgies. They can find even more sensation in the reproduction of the tyrant's pleasures in the arena, the chariot races, gladiator combats and the rending of the faithful band of Christian martys by the ferocious lions, and in that crowning spectacle the burning of Rome and Imbecilite vanity, the burning of Rome.

CHRISTIANITY SHOWN.

Those who profit by and enjoy the lessons taught in the story take pleasure in the illustrated history of the birth of Christianity in Rome, the trials and experiences of the Christians, the teachings of Peter and Paul and the visitation of the Saviour to them on the Appian Way as they are about to desert Rome. In its entirety it is the most satisfying entertainment yet conceived in the broad field of motion photography.

The photo drama is divided into three acts with an intermission of eight minutes between each and consumes two hours and fifteen minutes at each performance. Special music has been composed for the production which will be rendered on the organ, by the organist of the Metropolitan opera house orchestra. The matinee performances will begin at 2:30 and the evening performances at 8:30. All seats are reserved and may be obtained in advance.

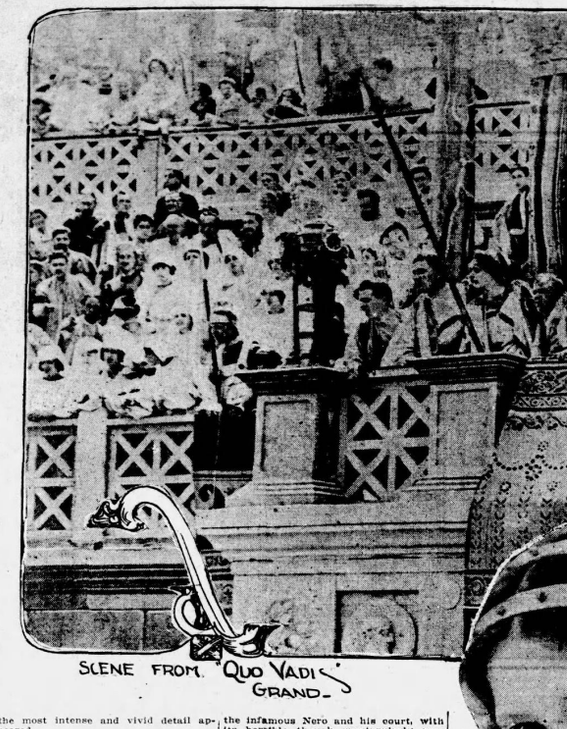
TABLOID AT BIJOU.

Another jolly and entertaining musical comedy vaudeville tabloid will be the attraction at the Bijou for the week that starts on Monday. There will be the regular schedule of performances,—two matinees on Monday and Saturday, daily matinee the rest of the week, and two performances each night, prices 10 cents admission and 10 cents extra for reserved seats.

There is no longer any question about the value and the success of the tabloid policy. The Bijou has never enjoyed such a wonderful season of prosperity. Since the introduction of the tabs at the Bijou the theater has been crowded at every performance and the most representative people are flocking there in droves.

The miniature musical comedy shows have not failed to please. They have proven to be delightful entertainments and the vaudeville features have won attention all through. The musical numbers have been right up to a high standard of excellence and the productions from a scenic and costume view point have proven to be all that any one could wish.

The bill for the week at the Bijou will be "The Marry Whirl," a combination of farce, musical comedy and vaudeville. There are some really distinguished entertainers in the company and there is to be a musical program that will be of most interesting and entertaining worth.



Arabs' Victory Over Italians

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

ROME.—Bit by bit, in defiance of official efforts to suppress the truth, the story of the disastrous defeat of the Italian army before Derna on May 16 has been finding its way to Italy, and has led to stirring protests in parliament, while creating a sense of deep humiliation throughout the country.

The first official announcement which reached the government only on May 18 was laconic enough, and recounted the affair as an Italian victory.

Now the Rome Journal "L'Avanti," sums up the situation in a leading article of protest against "the lying official communications relative to the dead, wounded and prisoners," complaining of the renewal of the methods of deliberate deceit resorted to from the very outset of the Italo-Turkish war. Fortified with documentary testimony, on which it challenges denial, "L'Avanti" states that in fact 400 were killed and over 700 were wounded. More than 100 others, including a number of officers, were taken prisoners by the Arabs.

Very many of the wounded were abandoned on the field.

The government has altogether concealed the fact that besides these losses, over 300 Ascari colonials perished or fell wounded. The Eleventh infantry regiment alone had 250 casualties.

The massacre of artillerymen was such that only twelve officers and men survived, and their guns fell into the enemy's hands. At the moment of the disastrous retreat practically all the officers and men of the Maxim corps were piled in heaps of dead and dying around the guns.

fewer headings of this sort, the better. Yet at times they are necessary to explain the story.

But whoever is attempting to write moving picture plays should remember that any explanation interrupts the story of the play.

This is just as true in scenarios as in written fiction. The ideal moving picture play is one so constructed that the incidents are sufficient explanation in themselves.

But a yet more important fact may be learned from seeing a moving picture play produced. Then, for the first time, you really understand what actually constitutes a scene.

A moving picture camera can take in a space of only about 12 feet in width. Anything which happens to the right or left of lines marking off this distance in width is hidden from the camera.

So, you see whatever occupies one scene must take place within that space. A motion picture camera isn't Argus-eyed; its vision is limited, and you must bear this in mind.

When the company set about finishing its play at the log cabin, lines were marked off in front of the house to show the range of the camera. The love-making, the villainy, and the happiness, were limited to this space. When an actor stepped beyond one of the lines he was out of the scene.

When the scene was changed the camera was moved to another location and another distance of 12 feet was marked off.

A fact at once evident and rather surprising was this limitation of the camera. The moving picture photographer, when you see his handiwork in the theaters, seems a rather omnipotent sort of person. But he really is trammeled by a rather narrow vision. He can't see far either to right or to left, and the motion picture playwright must bear this in mind.

Another lesson to be learned from this "back stage" view of the "movies" is the need of the writer having a clear picture in his mind of each scene. Simply a plan of each incident, as in written fiction, is not enough.

Unless he can see with his mind's eye the camera and the characters living their lives within the narrow limits of 12 feet per scene, the moving picture playwright will probably produce a scenario to which no films will be equal.

A glimpse of the actual production of a play also is valuable instruction in the cost of such production, and the need of bearing in mind economy as well as art and human interest when writing for the "movies." Although the last play rendered here was simple in plot and required only a small company, it was produced at a cost which would surprise the casual theatergoer.

For instance, though the company staged the important scenes in Atlanta, it also went to various parts of north Georgia to perfect details of scenery and to add local color, and right here it showed a painstaking care in details that would have been worthy of Mr. Belasco.

As a result of the progress of the mountain family with whom the story deals, their surroundings improved, the cabin gradually was remodeled, the yard was made trim and neat.

The company rented the old log cabin and built it over completely. In the beginning the ramshackle building was but a hut. It looked as though a puff of wind would blow it over. The roof sagged, the porch never had known a coat of paint, the yard was a variegated arrangement of gullies.

Bit by bit the house was improved, a new porch was built, a coat of paint was added and last of all, the yard was sodded and planted with flowers.

But even though houses are built over or burned down, companies sometimes object to chartering ocean liners, or arranging a railway wreck to suit the incidents of a scenario.

The moral is that the moving picture play which has human interest and is easiest to produce is most likely to sell.

Over the production itself seldom more than a week is spent. The actors have no lines to learn and are ready by their parts once the stage is set.

Little time is lost in deciding how the scenes shall be enacted. The director expresses his opinion in a rather vivid way. The actors go through their parts for his approval; the play is made.

Charley Seay, director of the company, is eager to see the Edison company establish a studio in Atlanta. He believes that the variety of scenery in this state offers a better setting even than that much-used field in southern California.

In his opinion, the moving picture playwright who uses Georgia people for his characters and Georgia mannerisms for his local color has unusual opportunity for success.

"Why, there's no more interesting part of the world than Georgia," he said. "No place you could picture that would be more absorbing. This is a new field, too. People have been writing about New York and the west. But they have forgotten Georgia. Make your scenarios about home folks, and you are on the high road to success."

Mabel Trunelle, Herbert Pryor, Bliss Milford, Harry Beaumont, William L. West, Arthur Housman, and Charley Gibson, photographer.

Millionaire's Pathetic Play

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON.—A rare and curious advertisement "Croesus" is being produced at the Garrick. Its reception was friendly, but not wildly enthusiastic. The function was without any interruption.

It is clear that Baron Henri de Rothschild has the spirit of one of his immediate ancestors, though the story I am able to tell him is probably new. The millionaire lay dying in his West End mansion. He sent for a well known dramatist and charming Bohemian of the day, who had enjoyed a kind of intimacy with him. "Charlie," said he, "I want to shake hands with you especially, before I go. You are the only man who never asked me for anything."

Baron Henri de Rothschild's hero, Claude Sorbier, was a millionaire times over. His friends asked him for much, and he gave with a free hand. But he sought someone who would ask for nothing, preferring that it should be a pretty girl who loved him "for himself alone." Sorbier had been married, and he found marriage a failure. Divorce got him out of that galere. He cultivated the friendship, somewhat sedately, of Marcelle de Ligneray, a gifted and charming widow, but she wanted something more vivid, and fled with a lover.

Claude was deeply distressed. Still, he carried on his vast business with almost miraculous insight. He maintained his role of patronizing art and the artists. He listened to the persuasions of parasites rather in cynicism than in sweet charity. And then, with a smile of pleasurable anticipation, he opened a secret door, disguised himself as a poor clerk, and went into the world to seek the happiness that he concluded was the special endowment of the middle classes.

He met a sweet girl, Yvonne by name, and felt that the world would so very well. But Yvonne, poor child, had soon to tell him with faltering accent, a tragical tale. She loved him very dearly, but another had taught her that life on a small income was sordid, unsatisfying, and doomed to misery and failure. She really did not care for her rich admirer, but he could give her so much that she wanted. Why should she not take it, and still cultivate, with Claude, a secret orchard?

Unhappy millionaire! His cup was filled to the brim when he learned that Yvonne's suitor was a pensioner of his own—an elegant, plausible scamp who drew a liberal allowance from Croesus for the support of an incurably sick mother. Claude denounced the rascal to Yvonne, and promptly placed the girl beyond the reach of such temptation. But his dream was ended. Miserable millionaire. Mr. Boucher made quite an impressive figure of Croesus. Melle. Gabrielle Dorziat is the charming Marcelle. Less effective is the Yvonne of Miss Mayonne Waterton.

The Wilde Monument

PARIS.—The Riddle of the Sphinx. It hasn't been solved yet—the problem of the sphinx at Pere Lachaise. I dare say you know that a monument from the chisel of a Mr. Spoteh was erected over Wilde's grave in that cemetery a good many months ago. This monument was a bas-relief representing a winged sphinx. Wasn't there some doubt about the sex of the original sphinx? It seems to me there was. Anyhow, the curator of Pere Lachaise only wished that there had been any doubt as to the sex of this one. Then the aesthetic department of the prefecture of the Seine took a hand—you wouldn't think the prefecture has an aesthetic department, to look at some of the public statues in Paris—and gave orders that the statue should be mended or ended, or, rather, that it should be mutilated or taken away. There the matter remains so far.

Speaking of Wilde reminds me that in one of his letters read at a recent trial he speaks of a fabulous bill for a week's dinners and suppers at Paillard's. Well, Paillard's still stands where it did, perhaps the last of the famous old-fashioned boulevard restaurants, now that the Cafe Anglais has disappeared. Paillard's has the modesty of all true greatness. You might pass it a hundred times without noticing it if somebody didn't point it out. It never advertises, and I fancy its clientele hardly varies from year's end to year's end. Chez Paillard's the food's the thing. To its habitues dining is an art. Inside it is simplicity itself, for, as a famous gourmet said, "We eat beefsteaks, not Louis Quatorze tables." To those who dine Chez Paillard, an orchestra at meals would be a solecism worthy only of savages and Americans.

Sights Seen By English Eyes In America

BY W. B. THOMPSON.

(Special Cable to The Journal.)

LONDON, June 14.—Stories of many things—sermons, hobble skirts, Quakers, restaurants, etc.—were told by Father Bernard Vaughan to an enthusiastic audience at Queen's Hall, where he attended in order to deliver a lecture on the subject of "What I saw and Said in America." The great welcome extended to Father Vaughan was an once a testimony of the preacher's personal popularity, and an expression of the pleasure with which the Roman Catholic community of the Metropolis see him again in their midst.

Father Vaughan began his lecture by remarking that he had been away from home for eighteen months, during which he had travelled 20,000 miles. He had preached, lectured, and talked in cathedrals and chapels, in theatres and opera houses, in auditoriums and armories. He had spoken in the "dry holes" of great liners, and on deck; in gold, copper, and coal mines. He had been among avalanches and glaciers; he had been in a sandstorm, had seen a tornado, had experienced earthquakes twice, and had been nearly shipwrecked. When on the last occasion the ladies rushed to him and asked, "Shall we be saved?" he replied, "That depends upon yourselves. But I have the best authority for assuring you it is as short to heaven by water as by land." Some of them seemed to doubt it; but after a couple of days they got off the rocks without loss of life.

Adverting to his personal experiences, Father Vaughan said that before he was out of his cabin he was surrounded by reporters and interviewers, all wanting his impressions of New York and the United States generally before he had seen them. He rather resented giving himself away, but a man said, "I've come from my editor. He wants to know what you think of the hobble habit." He (Father Vaughan) replied, "I don't think it is any good my giving you my idea of the hobble habit, because before I have expressed any view it will be out of fashion. The habits I am speaking against are the habits the ladies will not give up, bad habits." The reporter said, "That's right; that'll go right in." Next day he saw the headline, "Vaughan on Hobble Skirts."

New York was a wonderful power house, where everything that was enterprising and energizing and adventurous was propagated. It was a place where you could not get old—you had to keep young. When somebody's words to him, "If you work as you are doing in New York we will have to meet you with a hearse," he replied, "If I stay in New York much longer you will have to meet me with a perambulator."

As for hotels and restaurants in New York, they were perfectly wonderful—especially in the price. When the maitre d'hotel presented the bill at one place and asked if everything all right, his (the speaker's) friend said, "Sir, you haven't charged for saying 'Good morning.'"

After describing Niagara falls, Father Vaughan told an anecdote of an Italian, who, on being asked by a Yankee what he thought of the falls, was not very appreciative, and inquired, "Where's your Vesuvius?" The Yankee replied, "We haven't got any Vesuvius, but if we had I guess we'd make that river run out in a spit." A visitor from South Africa, on being asked for his opinion of the falls, said, "Why don't you boil it?" In his turn, "What do you think of Victoria falls, compared with Niagara?" The Yankee's reply was, "Victoria falls compared with Niagara?—a mere frontal perspiration."

Philadelphia, continued the lecturer, was a city of homes and whilst there he was told a story of a boy who was asked for an essay upon Quakers. He wrote Quakers were very kind, good people, who never quarrelled, never hit one another, and never jawed back again, and at the end he aded, "Pa's a Quaker. I guess that's why."

Philadelphia was supposed to be a very slow place compared with New York or Chicago—so slow that it was related that a man was taken up for sowing scarlet runners there. Another man was asked, "Are you still in Philadelphia?" He replied, "I guess everything is still in Philadelphia." "Oh, said the questioner, "I don't mean that. I mean, have you lived all your life in Philadelphia? The man looked up, and said, "Not yet."

In Chicago, sermons were preached in the churches in twenty-two different languages, and some of the factories printed their rules in ten languages. In that city all the various nationalities had their own quarters. There were a great many Jews who were excellent citizens. Catholics had numerous lessons to learn from the Jesuit fathers. Leaving his visit to St. Louis, on the Mississippi, the lecturer said that one day an American was talking about that river and the great Hudson, and observed, "Why, compared with our rivers, your Mersey, and your Severn, and your Thames are mere sleepy, sickly streams." He replied," Father Vaughan went on, "I thing yours are just as sickly as ours. Look at the Father of Waters—the Mississippi—it is confined to its bed." One had to keep one's wits about in America, or else England got standing in the background.

During his stay in Florida and the southern states he had the great pleasure of being among the darkies and attending some of their revival meetings, and of seeing the life they lived. They really were the happiest, most cheery people he had ever come across. He wanted to preach in a little chapel there, and a man came up and said very gravely, "Perhaps you would like to preaching from the altar steps, because I have got a duck laying in the pulpit."

Murder of Russian Boy

ST. PETERSBURG.—Counsel on behalf of the widow of a police agent at Kieff, Mishtshuk, who, with other agents, has been sentenced to one year's hard labor on a charge of concocting evidence in the case of the murder of the Christian boy, Yushinski, has appealed against the sentence on technical grounds connected with the composition of the court.

The boy, Yushinski, was foully murdered, and suspicion at first fell on a number of Jews. Mishtshuk and his subordinates, however, rejected this line of investigation, and later they were dismissed from the service on suspicion of having fabricated false and manufactured other false evidence against the Cheberiak gang who, says Reuter, were widely suspected of murdering the boy. The ex-officers were tried some months ago on this charge and were acquitted, but the prosecution appealed to the senate, which ordered a new trial. This resulted in the conviction of the accused. During the trial Mishtshuk affirmed that he was the victim of a conspiracy.

Jealous of American Lady

PARIS, June 14.—All Paris is sympathizing with the ambassador of one of the powers who wishes his king to relieve him of his post. The innocent cause of his trouble is a beautiful and charming American lady, now living in Paris but not unknown in London, for whom the ambassador's wife has conceived extraordinary and quite groundless jealousy.

PICTORIAL REVIEW

IN ALL the costumes that an undergraduate's ingenuity could suggest, Tech Students paraded the streets on Tuesday. Parisian beauties, ghosts, clowns and personages of various other types and fancies were in the line of march. A funnier parade has never been seen here. It should become as much a part of the closing of the college year as the baccalaureate and the bundles of diplomas, and undoubtedly it will. The Georgia School of Technology is not growing merely in numbers of students and completeness in the courses of instruction. It is adding every year to those customs that make a college distinctive

THE rifle shoot, which was concluded by the militia on Saturday, June 14, at the rifle range near Fort McPherson, served to show that in event of emergency, the state troops could furnish their share of marksmen. Constantly the state troops are increasing in efficiency. Year by year they are becoming more nearly the well trained reserve upon which the army must depend

THE group of three men are experts from the department of surveys and exhibits of the Russell Sage Foundation, who came to Atlanta at the request of the chamber of commerce, to investigate every phase and condition of life in this city. They are Shelby M. Harrison, director of the work; and his two assistants, Franz Schneider, Jr., on the left and Zenas L. Potter on the right. The deer is one of the beautiful little gazelles at Grant park. The group of children are prize winners in the contest to encourage the beautifying of public yards. These little folks did most to make the yards of their schools beautiful, and were rewarded for their efforts.

Cornell Loses To Syracuse In Boat Race

Ithaca Boys Came Near Being Humiliated by Losing to the Western Crews – Syracuse in Wonderful Spurt

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., June 21.—The national character and caliber of college rowing in the United States were demonstrated here late this afternoon in the four-mile feature race of the annual intercollegiate regatta. After winning the two preliminary events of the program, Cornell, usually conceded to be the leading university of the country in rowing, was forced to lower her colors to Syracuse and just escaped the added ignominy of being defeated by two western crews, the University of Wisconsin and Washington.

In a driving and spectacular finish, such as has not been seen on the Hudson river course, the Orange varsity oarsmen rowed across the line a scant length ahead of Cornell, while pressing the varsity eight came Washington, less than a length behind and Wisconsin low lapping the stern of the Seattle entrants for national varsity rowing honors. Columbia, the favorites for the first two miles, were seventh, while far in the rear Pennsylvania trailed in the wash of the five preceding crews.

It was a race and finish that drove the sixty thousand spectators on observation trains, yachts and river banks almost frantic with enthusiasm and the small organized cheering and singing fell off, almost and became a mere series of shouts and yells under the strain of the pressure of college loyalty.

A BIG SURPRISE

Coaches of the Syracuse crew was the feature and topic of conversation among the veteran oarsmen of the ranks.

The official times of the varsity eights race is perhaps the best indication of the closeness of the struggle down the four-mile course and the pace and stamina with which the six eights fought until the finish. Syracuse finished in 19 minutes, 2 seconds; Cornell, 19 minutes, 27 seconds; Washington, two lengths behind Syracuse; three seconds behind Washington, Wisconsin crossed the line in 19 minutes, 36 seconds; Pennsylvania rowed in last, 20 minutes, 11 1-5 seconds.

The time of the winning crew was the fastest since 1909, and but 35 1-5 seconds behind the record made by Yale in 1901.

The victory of the Orange oarsmen was a big surprise to the rowing sharps for they had not been considered as particularly dangerous. While little interest there was favored Cornell at 4 to 5 against the field. Syracuse was rated as 2 to 1 chance, while Washington went to even money to finish among the first three. Columbia backers found plenty of takers at even money but her crew would not finish one, two, three, and the forecasts proved correct.

Although shorn of the greater honors of the regatta Cornell cleaned up in both the four-oared varsity and freshman eight-oared varsity Cornell, rowing a splendid race, easily took first place from Pennsylvania by two and a half lengths, while Columbia third, Wisconsin fourth and Washington fifth. Syracuse rowed out of the course and finished last, with their time not being taken.

GOT FALSE START.

The freshman race marked by a false start due to a jumping of the slide in the Pennsylvania eight, was a far busier task for the Cornellians, for the Wisconsin freshmen proved that Coach Vail has some splendid material for his 1914 varsity by giving the Ithacans a terrific fight. Syracuse, too, was an early factor in the race and stood the fast pace after both Pennsylvania and Columbia had dropped back. The Quakers were first away but at the half mile, Cornell had gained the fore with Syracuse second and Wisconsin third. At the mile the order was the same, Syracuse rowing thirty-six to the thirty-two of the other two contenders.

At the mile and a half all three hit up the stroke to thirty-six and, rowing like veterans, fought hard for final honors.

The Wisconsin youngsters outgamed the Orange eight but could not quite overtake Cornell. They passed English line Cornell had a three-quarters length lead over Wisconsin, who in turn was about one and a half length ahead of Syracuse. Pannsylvania was fourth, three lengths behind and Columbia trailed in last, the distance of a shell separating them from the Quakers.

Jockey Suspended

LONDON, June 19.—The American jockey, E. Huxley, was suspended Wednesday for the remainder of the Ascot meeting and severely reprimanded. He rode Clapfast, which finished first in the Fernhill stakes, but was disqualified.

Huxley on June 4 was suspended for the remainder of the Epsom meeting, having been held responsible for the accident to the race following the derby when the horse Feltardo was killed.

PITCHING FIND OF THE SOUTHERN LEAGUE

Conzelman Is Again Winner

Young Collegian Had Barons' Number–Starred in the Tight Places

When Joe Conzelman turned loose some first class pitching the Cracker players took on renewed energy in Saturday's game with the Birmingham club and the result was a win 4 to 1. Conzelman kept a steady nerve all the way and has no trouble in getting the verdict.

The best feature of the game from an Atlanta standpoint was the timely hitting of the local crew coupled with some mighty good fielding. Conzelman was never bothered, seeming to get better when runners got on the bags and threatened to get anywhere near the pan. It was this work which proved his salvation.

Carl Thompson, formerly with the University of Georgia, was doing firing line duty against Conzelman but the Atlanta collegian had all the better of the argument. He allowed fewer hits and seemed to possess more ability. Time and again he pulled out of bad holes through the use of his puzzling slants.

Harry Welchonce featured the hitting end of the game with a long drive back of the score board which was good for an easy home run. The ball was hit at a mile a minute clip and there was never any danger of it being headed. Bailey and Aker also contributed to the hit column with two each. Just five hits were made off Conzelman and no two of these came in the same round.

Wallace Smith, Harry Welchonce and Aker did excellent work in the field while Ray Elliam, Knisely and Meyer did the best all round work for the visitors. Elliam robbed more than one Cracker of a safety by his flashy work at the short field while Knisely did his usual theft stunt in center garden.

The game went but seven and a half innings, being called to allow both teams to catch trains. With Conzelman going as he was there wasn't a chance for the Barons to forge ahead and the sudden stop did not hurt the visitors in the least.

MOTOR EVENTS ON WEDNESDAY

Rain again blocked Jack Prince in his plan to run his third motordrome meet on Saturday night and it was decided to postpone the meeting until Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock. This is the third time the rain has interfered with the motordrome events and shows just what a rain maker Prince really is.

Already the management of the big speedway has imported several new and faster machines and expects to break all records that have to date been made on the track. The famous machine with which Lee Humiston set so many world's records is here and will be used. Jack McNeil has completed overhauling his famous J. A. P. car and expects it to go at its usual fast clip when next he mounts it.

The program arranged for Saturday night, with a few additions, will be carried out on Wednesday. This program includes the Woodward Sweepstakes and the heats have been so arranged as to bring together the best riders in more than one of the events.

West Point Wins

WEST POINT, Ga., June 19.—The locals defeated the Atlanta Allstars in a slow game at the home park Monday. Score 7 to 1.

Batteries: Holiday and Snell; Sparks and Mullen and Melton. Struck out, by Holiday 11; Sparks and Mullen 7; hits, off Holiday 5, off Sparks and Mullen 10.

Duffy Goes to Pittsburg

MISSOULA, Mont., June 21.—Frank T. Jones, of this city, acting as "scout" for the Pittsburg National League Baseball team, bought Pitcher Duffy of the Great Falls club of the Union association, today for $3,000. Duffy is to be delivered at once.

Jackson and Cobb Strong

Ty Hit .500 on Saturday, While Joe Jackson Batted in Perfect Form

The official averages for the big leaguers were given out Saturday afternoon, showing that Jackson has a 24-point lead on Cobb for hitting honors. The two players' official average, exclusive of today's game, was as follows.

Players.	Games.	AB.	R.	H.	SB.	Pct
Jackson	60	215	49	89	7	.414
Cobb	44	154	28	60	20	.390

In today's game Jackson is given credit with only one "at bat," hitting safely that time. Cobb got only two out of four; Jackson, therefore, increased hi slead 1 point.

Including today's game, the averages are as follows:

Players.	Games.	AB.	R.	H.	Pct.
Jackson	61	216	51	89	.417
Cobb	46	158	29	62	.392

Intercollegiate Shoot

WASHINGTON, June 21.—Massachusetts Agricultural college, with a record score of 825 out of the possible 900, won the ninth annual inter-collegiate rifle shooting championship of the United States on outdoor ranges. Harvard, the present holder of the championship trophy, finished second with 791. Other teams finished:

George Washington university, 747. University of Minnesota, 743. Norwich university, 735. University of Pennsylvania, 712. A. and M. college, of Texas, 694. Cornell university, 688. Princeton university, 685. Massachusetts Institute of Technology, 641.

TROUBLE AMONG CUBS.

STRUCK OUT 21 HITTERS IN NINE INNING BATTLE

Atlanta's Pitching Find Was Star While in College–Has Won Hard Battles From Yale, Harvard, Cornell and the Other Star College Nines of the East–Expects to Star in Southern and Go Back to Majors

A youngster of refinement, with plenty of stamina, a desire to make good and an abundance of pitching sense is the best description possible of Joseph Conzelman, the Bristol, Conn., youngster who is now working on the Cracker hurling staff. At the game of baseball he is a mere boy, being only twenty-three years of age and having been at the national game just one year.

Conzelman is a collegian, receiving his baseball training as a pitcher on the Brown university nine from where he jumped to the Pittsburg National and in turn was shipped to Atlanta. He joined the Pirates last June and stuck with them until he was sent to Atlanta three weeks ago, his major league experience consisting in the hurling of one inning of one major league game.

The greatest point in favor of the young collegian is his willingness to learn. He is always ready and anxious to take dots from the veterans and any time you go out to Ponce de Leon you can see him getting around picking up pointers from those who have been at the hurling game many years longer. He has a lot of natural ability and right now is in the Southern league for the expressed purpose of learning to use it to the greatest advantage and when he does this he will certainly jump back to the majors.

The greatest title to fame possessed by Conzelman is his marvelous performance in fanning twenty-one batters of the Columbia university nine in a regular nine inning game. This was while he was hurling for Brown, his club winning the game 2 to 1 and Conzelman giving up only 3 hits. When you understad that just twenty-seven outs are required in a nine-inning game this performance was nothing short of marvelous and is a record few can boast of, especially when the game was so close.

Conzelman made the hurling staff on the Brown team his first year in college and was the mainstay of the mound his three years in college. He is a youngster with a future and when the young stars deriver the goods the old-timers must pass on.

While Cozelman likes the game of baseball and is playing it for the love he finds in shooting them past the batters he is not idle but is learning the civil engineering trade. Each winter he attends Columbia University and within another year will get his degree from this institution of learning. Owing to his love for the national game he will hurl just as long as he is successful and then he will have a profession to rely upon.

Harvard Won Over Old Eli

Rally Near Close of Game Gave Harvard Three Runs and Game, 6-5

BROOKLYN, N. Y., June 21.—Harvard defeated Yale in the deciding game of their championship baseball series at Ebbets field by 6 to 5 today and thus reigns supreme in both land and water competitions between the two universities. Bad pitching and loose fielding swung the pendulum first one way and then the other. Five pitchers were sent into the fray, Harvard using two and Yale three. The steadiness of Hitchcock was perhaps the most important single factor in the Crimson victory.

Felton and Gile began the box work, the former being taken out in the fifth when, with one out, three Yale batsmen singled in a row. Hitchcock relieved him with a man on second and one out, but retired the side. He hit the first batter up in the sixth and the runner eventually scored on a sacrifice and a single by Hunter. After that Yale was held safe.

Gile weathered the storm until the seventh when a single by Ayres and two passes filled the bases with one out. Brown then passed the next batter, forcing Ayres home, and Young's single to right brought in the other two. Brown opened the eighth with a pass and was relieved by Scott, who retired the next six men in order.

Harvard's trio of runs in the second were scored on Tomes' scratch hit. Reily's wild throw on Young's hard drive, a pass to Alsop and Ayre's timely double.

Felton in the third passed the first two batters. Blossom forced Hunter at third, but Philips' fumble of Schofield's grounder scored Middlebrook. Riddell's double sent Blossom home. Middlebrook, Blossom and Schofield singled in succession in the fifth, two runs scoring.

FALL HURT L. M'CARTY

CALGARY, Alberta, June 21.—With only a few witnesses examined this afternoon and several more to be examined Chief Justice Harvey, of the Alberta supreme court, late today adjourned until Monday the trial of Arthur Pelkey, who is charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of Luther McCarty in the ring near here May 24 last.

Dr. Spanaio, of Calgary, one of the principal witnesses for the defense and who was at the ringside on May 24, declared he had been present at twenty-five pugilistic encounters, had delivered one knockout blow himself to McCarty, he said, fell heavily, and it was possible that the hemorrhage was caused by the fall.

Travers Wins Match

NEW ...RK, June 21.—Jerome D. Travers, of Upper Montclair, N. J., National Metropolitan and New Jersey state golf champion, won the final match of the invitation tournament over the links of the Apawamis Cold club, Rye, N. Y., by 2 up and 1 from T. V. Bermingham, of Wykagyl, today. The bye-hole was played out, giving 70 to Travers against 73 for the runner-up.

In the qualifying round last Thursday in which there were over 100 competitors, Travers won the medal with a total of 148 for thirty-six holes.

Ritchie and Rivers At Last Sign to Meet

SAN FRANCISCO, June 21.—After several days' argument over the weight question, the managers of Willie Ritchie, the lightweight champion, and Joe Rivers, the Mexican lightweight, finally got together in San Francisco and signed articles of agreement for the bout. According to the articles, the lads will battle for twenty rounds at an open-air arena in San Francisco on the afternoon of July 4, at 134 opunds, weigh in at the ringside. Both Billy Nolan and Joe Levy, the fighters' managers, posted a forfeit of $2,500 as a guarantee that their men will make the weight.

Hits Wasted By Crackers; Average Good

Visiting Teams Got Fewer Hits, Yet Scored as Many Runs as Atlanta–Won Three Games and Dropped Two

The Atlanta club continues to hit hard and often yet the hits do not send any great number of runners over the pan all of which caused the home stay of the past week to be somewhat of a disappointment. In the six games three were victories, two defeats and one a tie, the lowly Birmingham Barons taking the best two in three, while the Crackers twice walloped the Nashville club.

In the six games at home the past week the Crackers made 62 hits and scored 24 runs, while the two opposing teams made but 53 hits and yet scored 23 runs. And right here is shown just why the Atlanta bunch is losing games by close scores. The team does not make all the hits count and at the same time are not fielding in the shape they are capable of.

When one team gets ten more hits than another and yet gets but one more run it looks rather unusual. Neither the Nashville or Birmingham clubs are regarded as any hitless wonders, but at that they manage to make their hits count for more than the Crackers. In the Birmingham series the Barons made 28 hits good for 11 runs while Atlanta made 31 hits good for but seven runs. This makes it take four hits for every run scored by the Crackers, while the Barons put over a count on every second hit. In other words, the Barons did about twice as well.

With Nashville it was different. The Vols made 25 hits and scored 12 runs while Atlanta got away with 32 hits and 17 tallies. This gives the Crackers an advantage yet the poor scoring against Birmingham offset this good work and left the Crackers in the rear.

FIELDING IS RAGGED.

The fielding of the Cracker bunch is not near up to the standard it should attain. And one of the biggest defects in the work in this department is the failure of the outfield to do the best of work. The trio in the outfield have been making error after error and when an outfielder makes an error it is usually costly.

The players on the Cracker club are good fielders. There is no denying that yet sometimes they appear to get careless and make a pile of errors. Some days they field like a house afire and then again they could not play with a club in the worst of the bushes. They seem to take it by spells but this spell stuff won't go if a pennant is to fly in into the fray. Harvard using two and Yale three. The steadiness of Hitchcock was perhaps the most important single factor in the Crimson victory.

During the two series at home the Crackers hit for an average of 304 against 258 for the visiting sluggers. At fielding the difference is just as large and in favor of the visiting teams, the Crackers fielding 948 and the visitors 973.

Against the Nashville team the Crackers hit for an average of 296 and fielded 957, their batting average consisting of 17 runs and 32 hits. Nashville batted for an average of 227 and fielded for 976. The batting figures consisted of 12 runs on 25 hits.

Against Birmingham the Crackers batted even better than in the previous series. The team average was 313, while at fielding the average was but 936. Birmingham batted 294 and fielded 966, yet the Barons took two of the three games.

Here are the hitting figures for the two series:

	AB.	R.	H.	BA.
Atlanta	297	24	63	.304
Opposition	295	23	53	.258

The fielding figures:

Atlanta	171	86	15	.948
Opposition	165	72	7	.971

Another Fighter Dead

DAYTON, O., June 21.—Patrick Grant, aged twenty, of this city, who was carried out of the ring unconscious in the seventh roundof his tenth round bout with "Kid" Batty last night, died late today without having regained consciousness. There is some dispute as to whether Grant died from the result of a knockout blow or from over exertion and the excessive heat. The fight was Grant's second pugilistic encounter.

Canada the Challenger

LONDON, June 21.—Canada today won the deciding match from South Africa in the eliminations round for the selection of a challenger for the Dwight F. Davis lawn tennis trophy when H. F. Schwengers, of British Columbia, beat R. F. Le Sueur, of South Africa, in the singles in three straight sets.

Crackers Off On the Road; Back July 3

Play in New Orleans, Memphis, Montgomery and Mobile and Get Back for Games on July 4

The Atlanta club left for a prolonged road trip Saturday, opening in New Orleans Sunday. The team will be gone for fourteen days, returning here July 3, which is an off day. On the fourth the Crackers will again tie up with the tail-enders in a double bill, one game in the morning and one in the afternoon.

The road trip includes the following games:

New Orleans, four.
Memphis, three.
Montgomery, three.
Mobile, three.

This is a hard schedule, and, after the series with New Orleans, the Crackers meet their closest contenders for first division honors, and these series will be hard fights for the local club.

SENATORS WIN

WASHINGTON, June 21.—By bunching his Washington took both games of today's double-header from New York 4 to 1 and 6 to 0. It took but the first inning of each game for the locals to win.

Both Mullin and Johnson pitched great ball, two doubles off the former scoring the visitors only run in the first game, while in the last game but two New Yorkers reached second.

Gulls Played Sandlot Ball And Lost Out

Wilson Pitched Jam-Up Ball for Pels and Deserved Shut-Out—It Looks Like C. Frank Has Come to Life

MOBILE, Ala., June 21.—Mobile played town-lot ball this afternoon and made eight errors, which mixed with twelve hits by New Orleans, gave the visitors the last game of the series by a score of 11 to 1. Errors helped New Orleans to four runs in the fourth, after which the entire Mobile team "blew up."

Wilson pitched brilliant ball for New Orleans and would have scored a shut-out but for an error by Kyle, who allowed a single to get through him with a man on base.

Albany Played Jam-Up Ball in One Battle and Managed to Win

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., June 21.—Jacksonville and Albany split even in a double-header. Grover, who was in the box for the home team in the first game, was not in his usual form.

In the second contest Walton Cruise, the fast left fielder of the local club, put the ball over the fence in the first inning for a home run, driving Carroll home ahead of him. Cruise's hit was the longest that has ever been made on Harr's field.

PHILADELPHIA, June 19.—A "great pitcher, a wise captain and a good student," is part of the inscription on a bronze tablet which was unveiled on Franklin field Wednesday in memory of Clarence S. Bayne, a member of the class of 1895 of the University of Pennsylvania and one of the greatest college pitchers of his time. The tablet, erected by his class, was unveiled in connection with "alumni day" exercises.

CALLED OFF

ST. LOUIS, June 21.—After St. Louis and Chicago had played three innings to a nothing to nothing tie, the game was called because of darkness. St. Louis hit iPerce for two hits, singles, in the first and third innings, and the Chicago team secured three off Griner. Schulte got two of these, both doubles.

Third Baseman "Heine" Zimmerman, having patched up his troubles with Manager Evers, was back in the game this afternoon without being fined or in danger of h suspension.

Amateur Shoot

DAYTON, Ohio, June 19.—Alden B. Richardson, of Dover, Del., amateur champion of that state, won the grand preliminary handicap shoot here Wednesday afternoon, defeating a field of 371 of the best trap shooters in the country. His most formidable contender was Andy Meadors, the seventy-three-year-old expert from Nashville, Tenn., with whom he was tied upon finishing the 100 targets.

In the shoot-off, Richardson won with two targets to spare, the score being 18 to 16.

The Grand American handicap will be shot today.

The entries for the handicap total 501, making it the largest field that has ever participated in America's blue ribbon event.

Star Golfers Will Compete With English

There Is Not Much Chance That America's Golfers In England Will Win Any of the Biggest Honors

NEW YORK, June 14.—If America is to make a showing in golf in an international way it will probably be through the efforts of the professionals in this country later in the season. Few there are who expect to see the "pros" who recently sailed for the other side win much glory or many English sovereigns at Hoylake, but there may be a different story to tell after the Britons come here; then all eyes will be focused on the links of the Shawnee Country club, which organization holds an open tournament August 22 and 23. Both Harry Vardon and Edward Ray have sent word that they will be on hand.

That will probably be their first American appearance, and as the famous foreign pair will a little later move on to Brooklins for the national open, their Shawnee effort will furnish something of a line on what may be expected at the national. It goes without saying that the American members of the salaried brigade will muster in force to try and keep the Britons from carrying off the money, but no matter what the outcome of the combinations on the links along the Delaware river may be, losers and winners will be certain to have nothing but praise for the course, which probably compares favorably with the best in this section of the country.

Conditions for the Shawnee tournament will consist of the usual severe test, 72 holes of medal play. Should Vardon, Ray, Smith, Nicholls, Jack McDermott, Tom McNamara, M. J. Brady, McLeod, "Nipper" Campbell, George Sargent and a few of other favorites gather, this tournament will rank second only to the championship.

There is a possibility of Vardon and Ray also having an opportunity of competing in the metropolitan open championship. While no course has been definitely selected as the scene of this meeting, it is not unlikely that Dunwoodie will be chosen, and if this is the case the tournament will not be held until all of the American players now abroad have returned, which undoubtedly means that the metropolitan will be held in August or early in the fall.

McDermott, McNamara and Alec Smith, the former champion, are all abroad, and as they will not be back in America until late in July, because of the France-American team match at La Boulie early that month, the metropolitan open probably will be held at a time when these players will have an opportunity of competing. In fact there is a possibility of the American professionals returning with the famous Britons.

AMERICA'S BEST BET

MAURICE M'LAUGHLIN.

To the surprise of self-appointed critics, American tennis players defeated the Australian team, and will go to Europe to play Germany for the honor of meeting England in the finals for the international championship cup. Maurice McLaughlin, the California whirlwind, is the star of the American team and by many he is considered the greatest player ever developed in this country—a fit opponent for Doherty, the wonderful Englishman, when he was in his prime.

Hudson River Regatta To Be Held July 26

NEW YORK, June 21.—The annual regatta of the Hudson River Rowing association will be held over the mile-and-a-quarter Woodcliff course on Saturday, July 26.

At a meeting held last week the list of events and the officials for the regatta were decided up as follows:

Events—Association single sculls, junior single gig, intermediate single gig, junior double gig, junior four-oared barge, intermediate four-oared barge, senior four-oared barge, junior four-oared gig, junior quadruple sculls, senior quadruple sculls, junior eight-oared shell.

The referee will be J. A. Miller, Jr., and the starter S. Wiesbador.

Shugrue and Baldwin To Box 15-Round Bout

NEW YORK, June 21.—Joe (Young) Shugrue, the fast and clever fighter of Jersey City, who is now regarded one of the topnotch lightweights in this country, is matched for another battle. He was signed today to meet Matty Baldwin, the rugged lightweight of Boston, for fifteen rounds at 133 pounds, weigh in at the ringside, at a boxing show to be brought off at a baseball park in New Haven on the night of July 4. While Baldwin is not the same great fighter he was a few years ago, he nevertheless is capable of putting up a hard battle and, coupled with his crafty ring generalship, he ought to make Shugrue extend himself in order to have anything on him at the final bell.

Star Tennis In New York

NEW YORK, June 17.—Matches in the Metropolitan Lawn tennis championship were resumed at the West Side club here. In the first round W. W. Hall, former middle states champion, defeated F. C. Baggs, 6-3, 6-3. W. W. Washburn, Harvard, first defeated L. G. Morris, 6-3, 6-2 and then went into the third round by winning from C. A. Sparkes, Jr., 6-0, 6-1.

F. C. Inman won tfirst from Nerle Johnson 6-1, 6-2, and then defeated W. D. Cunningham, Yale, 6-4, 6-2. Cunningham previously had defeattd A. M. Kidder, Princeton, 6-2, 6-2.

Dean Mathey, former champion, in the second round won from R. B. McClave, of Scranton, Pa., 6-4, 6-3. T. R. Pell in the same round defeated R. W. Stair 6-1, 6-2; S. Howard Voshell defeated F. B. Roundey, 6-2, 6-2; G. A. L. Dionne deefated Allan Tobey 6-2, 6-0, and T. A. Lightner, Yale, defeated R. W. Robinson 3-7, 7-9, 6-2.

RECALL FOR THE UMPIRE

HAMILTON, Mass., June 17.—When a judge of the United States circuit court ruled the umpire off the field in a ball game here yesterday, he almost precipitated a riot. Spectators rushed upon the field and threatened that they would vote for the recall of judges unless the decision were reversed, but the judge was firm and the umpire, Dean Ezra R. Thayer, of Harvard Law school, had to retire.

The ruling was made by Judge George A. Carpenter, of Chicago, who was captain of the Mud Turtles, playing the Rabbits, for the championship of the twenty-fifth anniversary outing of Harvard '88. Benjamin Carpenter, a brother of the judge, continued as umpire and the Mud Turtles finally won by a score estimated at 26 to 23. Lars Anderson, former ambassador to Japan, captained the Rabbits.

Pigeons Fly 600 Miles

Twelve pigeons were released on the corner of Cameron and Pickert streets on Friday morning at 4:40 o'clock. The home of these birds is Dallastown, Texas, 600 miles from the start.

The race is held under the auspices of the National Association of American Homing Pigeon Fanciers. They expect the birds to arrive in Dallastown on Saturday morning. The usual rate of flight of these birds is 400 miles per day.

Best Hurler To Get Watch

R. S. Matthews, of Birmingham, has notified President Kavanaugh that he will present a handsome gold watch to the twirler who leads the league, all pitchers who take part in twenty-five or more games being eligible.

This will develop into a pretty battle between the left handers Covaleskie and Price, who are now running neck and neck. Conzelman, of Atlanta, looks now as if he is going to get in this race. He has gotten away with a good start anyway, winning two straights.

Elmer Q. Oliphant, Perdue university athlete, has accomplished the unusual feat of winning varsity letters in four different branches of athletic sport. He won his "P" in football, basketball baseball and track.

No-Rim-Cut Tires 10% Oversize

Don't Pay a Higher Price

Since our 11 per cent reduction, numerous tires cost users more than Goodyears.

That's a unique condition.

No-Rim-Cut tires used to cost one-fifth more than others. Yet they never were made better than today.

The Utmost

Bear in mind that, for years and years, No-Rim-Cut tires have been the high-price tires.

Nobody claimed to make tires that were better. But other standard tires cost less.

Yet No-Rim-Cut tires came to outsell all others, because of their proved economies. They saved their extra cost to users, two or three times over.

The demand for these tires doubled over and over, until last year's sales by far exceeded our previous 12 years put together.

With this multiplied output the cost came down, and the saving was deducted from our price.

Now no standard tire of any type costs less than No-Rim-Cut tires. And lesser tires, with a limited output, cost more than these famous tires.

You get tires that can't rim-cut. You get 10 per cent overcapacity compared with clincher tires.

You get the tires which, by sheer merit, have won the topmost place in Tiredom.

It is folly to pay more.

Long at Top After Battle of Two Months

Dave Robertson Displaced, Long Also Leads in Number of Hits–Seven Crackers Are Over the .250 Mark

Though he has slumped many points during the past four days Tommy Long, of Atlanta, is the premier hitter of the Southern League, his mark of .259 being ahead of that held by Dave Robertson, the young hollegian with the Mobile club who has held the lead most of the season. Tommy continues to hold his lead in the number of hits, having rapped out 85 safeties this year which have gone for 112 bags.

Atlanta has seven players who are hitting the ball better than three hundred and of this number three are over the three hundred mark. This speaks well for the hitting ability of the club and yet the bunch appears unable to get going right.

With the decline of Dave Robertson Kid Elberfeld, of Chattanooga has been climbing fast and is now hitting .348. At total base hitting, Sloan, of Montgomery is at the top with 115 bags. Dave Robertson leads at stolen bases, with 25. At two base slouting Hendryx, of New Orleans is first with 21 while at hitting three sackers the honor goes to Sloan, of Montgomery, with 8. Spencer of New Orleans, has hit 7 home runs and leads the league.

Here are the figures through the games of June 17, this being for all players over the .250 mark:

Norcross Club Wins Over Battle Hill

NORCROSS, Ga., June 15.—The locals crossed bats with the fast Battle Hill team Sunday and won out by the score of 12 to 4.

Dame and Dame were pitted. All the boys seemed to have their eye on the ball.

SCOUTS AFTER TWO HURLERS

WINNIPEG, Man., June 21.—Pitching a no-hit-no-run game is the ambition of every pitcher in baseball.

Few have achieved the honor, and that two youngsters on one team should break into the exclusive class within four days is but one of the remarkable things that make baseball.

Bob Steele and Russell Northrup, of the Moose Jaw Robinhoods, Western Canada league, are the pitchers who have thus far achieved fame.

The "Twilight league" isn't Class A organization, but a pretty good article of ball is played by the teams.

At Medicine Hat, May 16, Northrup held the Hatters to a hitless, runless game for nine full innings, and at Calgary, May 20, Steele duplicated the performance.

Northrup hails from Des Moines, Iowa, and this is his first year in organized baseball. He was tried out and released by Des Moines this spring.

Vancouver, of the Northwestern league, took him and let him go to Moose Jaw, where he rounded into form and is one of the league sensations.

Steele is a Canadian, his home being in Victoria, B. C. That team tried out Steele, but had a good pitcher and decided that Steele, who is but nineteen, wouldn't do, so he was sent to the Moose Jaw team and hasn't lost a game since the season started.

Teams Banqueted

LAGRANGE, Ga., June 19.—A banquet was given the LaGrange and Gadsden teams here last night amidst music and speech, making the boys have a great time. Secretary Clarke, of the LaGrange team, made a speech and was followed by Secretary Paton, of the Gadsden team. He was followed by Manager Randall and Manager Brannen, clubs.

"WHAT WOULD THEY DO IF THEY COULDN'T PLAY BALL?"—JAKE DAUBERT. —BY RIPLEY

"Sometimes I am afraid it's all a dream," said Daubert—Jake Daubert, the brilliant first baseman of the decreasing Dodgers—and the best in the game today.

"Sometimes as I stand out there on the old bag, I am afraid to speak for fear that all my success is a dream, and that I will wake up in the darkness of the mines again."

And it is like a phantasy to Jake. Baseball has been as good to him as he has been to baseball.

Daubert used to be a miner—he has worked in the mines most of his life.

"It is in the family," spoke Jake again.

"My old father worked in the same mines for fifty-three years, and I have two brothers in them now."

Dust, darkness and danger. Surely anything but encouraging. Herein the dampness and murky silence, where hidden dangers lurk in every crevice of the rocky walls, wire the whole sickly atmosphere is one of despondency and gloom, the lot of the miner would seem to offer the poorest of opportunities for success in any profession. Toiling for long hours on short and uncertain pay, living in unwholesome air that reeks with unhealthy influences, brought often face to face with sudden death, the life of the underground worker in the great American coal mines is a bitter and a cheerless one—a Shut out from even the warm sunlight with all its life and health, there seems to be nothing in such surroundings that would foster an athletic or ambitious career.

Yet, strange as it may seem, four of the greatest ball players rose from the depths o' darkness to the field o' fame. They were Hughey Jennings, manager of the Detroit team and himself a player of fame and of unsurpassed ability; Mordecai Brown, four years the mainstay of the Chicago Cubs; Ed. Walsh, one of the greatest pitchers in baseball, and lastly that glittering star, Jake Daubert.

Jake was born at Shamokin, Pa., about 28 years ago. Shamokin, a town of about 12,000 people, is located in the heart of the great anthracite coal belt, and here it was that little Jake started on his arduous life.

At the age of 11 years the little fellow joined the great army of breakers boys down deep in a mine at Lewellyn.

Watching the slowly moving stream of jagged coal, picking out with deft fingers the pieces of slate that came drifting along with the mass, and breathing for long hours the atmosphere laden with coal dust is not the ideal beginning for an athletic career, but it was to just such a life as this that young Daubert was doomed through the death of his mother. This tragic event, which occurred when he was 12 years old, broke up the family and necessitated a closer application to his labors and limited his schooling.

The little fellow worked away at the breakers, sorting out coal and picking out clinkers, breathing coal dust, and whistling at his work, until he reached the age of 14, when he decided in his own mind that he was capable of doing a man's work, so he forsook the long wooden shoot for a regular job in the mines.

The "regular job" proved to be that of mule driver, the man who drives the coal cars from the mine. The duties consisted of coaxing an old cross-grained mule into action.

A hard job.

For the following eight years Jake toiled on unremittingly. He labored hard himself and belabored the mule harder, but the life was harder still. Maybe he wasn't glad when the offer came for a chance to play ball—a chance to see and a chance to breathe the sun and air of the great outdoors!

"——And if you couldn't play——"

"Ball—I would still be down there trying to drive that old cross-grained mule," said Jake.

Boston Stars Holding Lead At Swatting

McDonald and Titus Command Highest Positions—Hans Wagner Has Been Coming Fast, Now Third

Third baseman McDonald the youngster with the Boston Nationals, is hitting the ball harder and oftener than any layer in the National league, his average of .370 topping the bunch. John Titus, the veteran with the same club is next in line with .358, and then comes Hans Wagner with .346.

The three hundred hitters in the old circuit are decidedly numerous this season, there being twenty- two over the mark, and all of the bunch are regulars, all of them being in as many as twenty games.

At base stealing the National outfit is considerably off or rather the catchers are throwing unusually well. Archer, Kling, Bresnahan and a few other steel-armed receivers are keeping the runners glud to the bags, Lobert's mark of twenty stolen bags geing first. None of the others the anywhere near the mark of the Philly.

At hitting two sackers Sherwood Magee, of Philadelphia leads with 17; Konetchy, of St. Louis, leads in three baggers with 12, and D. Magee leads the circuit hitters with 6.

Player Gets Money

ALBANY, N. Y., June 19.—In decisions of the national board of baseball arbitration handed down today the claim of E. H. Wood against the Columbus, Ga., team was allowed and the following claims were not allowed: James Wall against Wyndham. Joe Manley against Durant, Okla., George Townsend against Middlesboro, Ky., C. R. Foster against Dallas and J. Pfeister against Omaha.

Player Bowdern was awarded to Bristol, Va., and Moseley to Dallas. The application of F. Williams to be released from Dallas was granted.

Coveleskie Is Leading Bunch At Box Game

Gilbert Price Has Been Going Good and Will Wage Warm Fight With the Lookout Hurler–Conzelman a Stroke

Pole Coveleskie, of Chattanooga, has at last struck his stride, and he is now playing jamb-up ball, topping the Southern league flingers by a slight margin. Joe Conzelman, of Atlanta, has the best average, but has worked in but two games and cannot be given credit for being the real leader.

Gilbert Price, of Atlanta, is running Coveleskie a close race, and if he can but keep up his good work, which is likely, he will be right around the top with the end of the season. Prough, of Birmingham; Summers, of Chattanooga, and Robertson, of Mobile, are also running well.

Coveleskie, with 101 strike-outs, tops the league in this department of hurling. More hits have been made off Beck, of Nashville, than any of the pitchers who are over the .500 mark.

Here are the records of the hitters over the .500 mark, the games of June 17 being included:

	G.	W.	L.	Pct.

WATER LEAGUE OF BASEBALL

NEW YORK, June 21.—The latest innovation into sporting circles is a water baseball league, with eight teams in competition for the championship of the American Life Saving society.

Teams have been organized in Sea Gate, Staten Island, Hoboken, Palisades Amusement park, Allen Point Boat club, Hackensack, College Point and Bath Beat.

Water baseball is a new game originated by E. C. Brennan, president of the American Life Saving society, and has been played all during last season at several Long Island resorts among bathers. This is the first season, however, that clubs have considered the game as a regularly organized team of players.

The rules are very similar to those governing the regular baseball. The battery and batsman are perched on floating islands, while the basemen and fielders support themselves by clinging to cork floats. The fielders are permitted to either throw or swim with the ball while attempting to catch a "runner."

Water baseball promises to furnish all the thrills of the national game, with a few extra ones thrown in, as a "runner" may resort to diving if he thinks he will be caught at base.

The first game of the season will be played at the Palisades Amusement park in the new natatorium on Saturday between the Sea Gate and Palisades clubs.

Amateurs Fast Entering For Annual Field Tourney

Handsome Prize to Be Awarded Team Making the Best Score–Several Strong Organizations Are in the Race

The city of Atlanta field and track meet will be held on the fourth of July under the auspices of the Atlanta park department. This field day will be contested by some of the best amateur athletes in the city, and the events will be hummers.

Among the entries there appears the names of quite a few who have made good in the past at their colleges and schools. Lipschutz, Westmoreland, Forbes, Jarvis and Graves will appear in several events. The Georgia Railway and Power company will give to the bona fide organization winning the most points a beautiful trophy. The organization holding the contest for this trophy are the Fifth regiment, Atlanta Athletic club, Seventeenth regiment, S. V. D. fraternity, Marist college, Boys' High school and the Wesley Memorial. All of these organizations are sending in teams and there is quite a rivalry for the trophy.

The points will be awarded as follows: First place 5, second place 3 and third place 1. The rules governing the meet will be the regular amateur regulations of the Amateur Athletic union.

ENTRIES.

To date the full list of entries in the hands of Joe Bean is as follows:

Running High Jump—Ed Jarvis, 5th regiment; Frank Pearson, 5th regiment; Maggie Stallings, 5th regiment; Ed Floyd, Wesley Memorial.

ATLANTA PLAYERS GO FOR SOUTHERN TOURNEY

Grant, Thornton, Smith and Mansfield Will Represent Atlanta in the Southern Tennis Tournament at New Orleans. Smith Will Have to Defend His Title as the Champion in Singles

The annual Southern Tennis tournament will be held in New Orleans this year, at the Country club there. This tournament promises to be the best tennis in the south. New Orleans has been after the much-coveted honor of holding this tournament for the last few years, and they are sure to pull off a good one.

Among the Atlanta cracks who will try their luck down there are Carleton Smith, Eston Mansfield, Nat Thornton and B. M. Grant. Carleton Smith holds the singles title and goes down to defend it against the winner of the tournament. Paired with Mansfield, he will be in the doubles. Grant and Thornton will enter both singles and doubles.

These men should hold their own and have excellent chances of copping the higher honors. They are going up against some very fast men from all over the country south and west, and there will be a few of the eastern cracks entered.

New Orleans boasts of such men as Phelps, McCall, Trema and Russ, all of whom are regarded as dangerous contenders. San Antonio and Dallas clubs will send up delegations, and several western states will be represented by their best players.

The McQuilston brothers, from Mexico City, have been cleaning up everything in sight in the singles and doubles. These two have entered and are dope to be final place men.

In the ladies' singles New Orleans seems to have the call. Miss Murphy, who now holds the title, will be on hand to defend it, and as yet there is no one who seems likely to take it from her.

The locals will have the disadvantage of playing on grass courts. The change from the fast clay courts may hurt their game. But with a little practice to accustom themselves to the conditions, they should not be much handicaped.

The play is scheduled to start Monday. The drawings will be announced later.

ATLANTA STARS, OLD AND YOUNG

Charleston Smith, Ed. Carter and E. Mansfield are referred to as the older tennis cracks, while Hallman, Hall and Sims are the youngsters. The last named trio are yet very young but are playing great tennis and within another year or so promise to be contenders for big honors.

St. Philip's Again

First Baptist won from St. Phillips, at Piedmont park, by the score of 12 to 2. Westmoreland, of First Baptist, made some good catches, while Vinson, of St. Phillips, also made some good catches in left, saving a few hits. Thompson was hit freely by First Baptist.

West Point Wins.

In the first game of a scheduled double-header, West Point Pepperell defeated the Gulf Refining company at Piedmont park by a score of 4 to 2. Both teams played jam-up ball. The Gulf Refining company were strengthened by the addition of Pitcher York, who pitched good ball, keeping all hits scattered, while Johnson, for West Point Route, only allowed one hit, which was a scratch.

Smyrna Club Romps

Smyrna defeated Kennesaw in a very close and interesting game by score of 5 to 4. Features of the game was Britt's pitching and batting of Waddell for Smyrna. Kennesaw played an around good game until the seventh inning, when up in the air. Smyrna would like to have game with any strong amateur team.

Stars of West Hold Tourney

NEW YORK, June 21.—The twenty-ninth annual tournament for the championships of the middle states, open to all comers, will be held under the auspices of the United States National Lawn Tennis association on the turf courts of the Orange Lawn Tennis club, South Orange, N. J., commencing June 23. The events include gentlemen's singles and doubles, and ladies' singles in which Miss Molla Bjurstedt, champion, and mixed doubles for which first prizes have been offered.

Owing to the departure of Wallace F. Johnson, holder of the singles title, and Harold H. Hackett, who, with Lyle H. Mahan, shares the title in the doubles, to England with the American team, there will be no challenge rounds in the singles and doubles at the tournament. Mrs. C. M. Beard will defend her title in the ladies' singles. Entries should be sent to George H. Miles, 378 Turrell avenue, South Orange, N. J., or 45 Pine street, New York City, on or before Saturday, June 21. The grounds may be reached by ferry from the foot of West Twenty-third street, Christopher and Barclay streets, or by Hudson tunnel, thence over the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western railroad to Mountain Station, N. J. The tournament committee consists of Stewart Brown, chairman; Holcomb Ward, C. F. Watson, Jr., George H. Miles, W. A. Phillips, William Barr, Howard McCabe, Graham H. Brewer, John J. Boyd, Francis D. Bartow, E. S. Sanford, Jr., Montgomery Ogden and L. M. Watkins.

Auto Tops Cop

Georgia Auto Tops win again. The fast Fulton team went down in defeat for the second time this year. Mullins and Howard pitched brilliant ball throughout. Slow fielding was responsible for some of Auto's hits. Rhinehart and Wilson featured at the bat. Strengthening the Autos are confident of finishing 1 2 3.

Ismay Sues Jockey Club

LONDON, June 19.—C. Ismay, owner of Craganour, the disqualified winner of the derby, was Wednesday granted an injunction until Friday, restraining the stewards of the jockey club and the stakeholders from parting with the funds in their hands. He maintains that Craganour was the winner of the race and that the action of the defendants in disqualifying the horse was invalid.

Mr. Ismay later decided not to attempt to obtain a permanent injunction.

18-Year-Old Champion

DELMONTE, Cal., June 21.—William Johnston, of San Francisco, an eighteen-year-old boy, won the Pacific coast lawn tennis championship in singles today, defeating John Strachan.

First Handicap In Six Years

NEW YORK, June 21.—Without being let down at any stage of the race save for a mild shake up by Jockey Joe Notter in the home stretch, H. P. Whitney's six-year-old chestnut horse, Whisk Broom II., by Broomstick-Audience, won the revival of the Brooklyn handicap, over one mile and a quarter of the Belmont Park track today, in impressive style. The winner carried 130 pounds. The time for today's race, 2:03 2-5, is a new track record for this distance, and a new time record for the event as heretofore the race was run over a circular track at Gravesend, while the horses today had to make only two turns. The value of today's race to the winner was $3,025. In previous years first money frequently succeeded $15,000. R. F. Carman's Mr. Miller ran second a length and a half behind, and Sam Jackson owned by V. M. McGinnis, was third.

The "also rans" in order, were:

Guy Fisher, La Horo, Colonel Holloway and John Furlong.

Atlanta National Bank Defeats Hallet & Davis

On last Thursday the Atlanta National Bank and the Hallet & Davis teams crossed bats on the Marist diamond. The Atlanta National Bank boys won by the decisive score of 9 to 4. Heavy hitting by the bank boys and the pitching of Goldthly were the features of a rather featureless game. This makes the seventh straight game that the Atlanta National Bank has won and keeps their 1.000 per cent intact for them.

Motor Rider Hurt in Race

(Special Dispatch to The Journal.)

SAVANNAH, Ga., June 21.—While riding in the endurance run of the Savannah Motorcycle club from Savannah to Augusta today W. A. McIntyre was thrown from his motorcycle, three miles from Savannah, and slightly injured. The break on the machine jammed, throwing him off. The rider was badly bruised and dropped out of the running.

W. C. Carraway, another rider, ran into a ditch. He escaped injuries and is reported to be still in the race. George Adams is also out of the race.

In the front of the city hall at the word "Go" from Mayor Savant at twelve bells today the first of an even dozen riders of the Savannah Motorcycle club left here in the clutch of his machine and started the 128-mile endurance run to Augusta, and return, making a total distance which will be covered by Monday morning, when they will return to this city, of 356 miles.

At one minute intervals the other eleven riders departed on the journey, the mayor giving each the signal to be off.

The riders who made the start were:

The prospects of the various developments are anticipated. It is said that

A Praiseworthy Plan for The South's Development.

There are certain vital interests in which all the Southern States, particularly those of the Southeast, have a common cause and which, therefore, they can best promote through organized rather than divided effort. Such, for instance, is the widely manifest need of bringing the South's natural resources more vividly to the notice of the nation at large to the end that they may attract new capital and new settlers for the great, fertile areas of uncultivated land. This is a matter of keen concern to Georgia, to Florida and Alabama, the Carolinas and Tennessee and to every other member of the Southern sisterhood. While each State may accomplish much in this field by working independently of its neighbors it can accomplish a vast deal more by working with them co-operatively; their combined energies will attract more attention and bring more abundant results than scattered efforts could ever produce.

With this end in view there is now being perfected what is known as the Southern Settlement and Development organization. This enterprise had its beginning at Baltimore some two years ago when the governors of sixteen Southern States, together with representatives of trade boards and transportation companies, assembled in that city to discuss plans for exploiting the South's resources and especially for bringing into this section a larger number of desirable settlers. These public leaders realized that the trend of American immigration which once flowed into Canada and the Northeast was turning Southward and that with due encouragement and direction it could be made a source of far-reaching development for the South. The suggestion that a well organized, systematic movement to this end be undertaken met with instant and widespread favor.

The result is that the Legislature of Maryland has appropriated thirty thousand dollars to be used for this purpose. The commercial interests of Florida have subscribed forty thousand dollars and pledges themselves to increase that amount to a hundred thousand. In other Southern States, chambers of commerce and kindred agencies have enlisted in this cause so that within the immediate future, it seems the movement will be well under way and will be producing practical results.

This assistance will be rendered through four channels: one of publicity, one of colonization, another of agriculture and another of industry. Steady, intelligent publicity is as valuable to a State or a section as to an individual business enterprise; this central organization will have unsual facilities for keeping the South's advantages prominently before the country. It will be in continuous touch with the movements of home seekers and will stand ready to aid any State in securing desirable settlers for untilled lands. Its staff of experts will co-operate with the farmers and the educational agencies of a State in the development of agricultural interests; and likewise it will be equipped to render valuable service in promoting industrial growth.

The seriousness and trustworthiness of the organization is shown by the fact that its president is Mr. S. Davies Warfield, one of the foremost leaders in the cause of Southern development. Mr. William H. Manss, vice-president and general manager of the organization, has abundant and brilliantly successful experience in such enterprises. He organized and directed the development department of the Burlington and Quincy railroad and was also prominently identified with the civic industrial bureau of the Chicago Association of Commerce. On his recent visit to Atlanta, Mr. Manss enlisted the hearty interest of business men. It is believed that Georgia will join with enthusiasm in this far-reaching and well considered plan for the South's development.

There seems to be enough available money to keep up several wars.

Banish the Vagrants.

Hot weather seems favorable to germs of crime, as it is to flies and other pests. The simplest preventive against both these evils is to clean out their breeding places.

The police campaign against vagrancy is, therefore, very seasonable and well advised. If the irresponsible loafers, whether black or white, who have no means of honest livelihood and seek none, are forced either to go to work or to leave the city we shall have fewer misdemeanors and far less risk of serious crime.

The places to which habitual vagrants resort should be watched closely and given frequent and thorough cleanings. The police have already made good headway; let the good work continue.

The Western and Atlantic Railroad Convention.

THE ATLANTA CHAMBER OF COMMERCE has very wisely initiated a movement to bring to the public's attention the importance of timely and well considered plans for the future of the Western and Atlantic railroad. The present lease of this road, which belongs to the State of Georgia, expires in December, 1919, a little more than six years hence. It is none too soon to begin an exhaustive study of the many far-reaching questions to be determined. The incoming Legislature faces, in this connection, one of its most urgent duties; for, the Western and Atlantic problem lies at the very heart of the State's material welfare and vitally concerns the practical interests of every citizen. The Chamber of Commerce will call a convention of representative men from every part of Georgia who, after due inquiry and discussion, will offer certain recommendations to the Legislature, which the latter will doubtless welcome as being a consensus of thoughtful public opinion and, therefore, especially valuable.

For the future administration of this great property, two courses are open. One of these is for the State again to lease the road, with certain well defined provisions as to its improvement, operation, and regulation. The other is for the State itself to operate the road. There is much to be said in support of both these plans. It is not now our purpose to discuss their relative merits, other than incidentally and, certainly, not to urge the adoption of either plan in advance of the convention or inquiry by the Legislature.

Those who believe that the road should again be leased argue that by this means the State can derive a large and steady revenue, much larger perhaps than heretofore; that this income, paid monthly, will constitute a rich and ever available fund for the State's educational interests; and that by this plan the Western and Atlantic will remain free from political entanglements. They declare, further, that the lease act can be so ordered as to provide for the improvement and development of the property to an extent hitherto unknown, and this without expense to the State. They object to the State's operating the road on the ground that such a policy would invite the concerted opposition of other lines, who might refuse to exchange business with the Western and Atlantic and thereby reduce it to a merely local road operating between Atlanta and Chattanooga.

The advocates of State operation contend, on the other hand, that the State's original purpose in building this railroad was to serve the people, just as it was the federal Government's purpose in establishing post roads, the postoffice, parcel deliveries and kindred public institutions; the State's prime object, they assert, should not be to make money out of this property but to employ it as a means of giving the people ampler and cheaper transportation service. They deny that State operation would circumscribe the road to local commerce. They insist that the Western and Atlantic would continue to receive a fair share of interstate business and that both the State Railroad Commission and the Interstate Commerce Commission would protect the shipper's right to route his freight as he wished and would effectually prevent anything like a practice of exclusion or retaliation on the part of other lines. They add in this connection, as Hon. Murphey Candler has stated so well in an article appearing elsewhere in today's Journal, that even as a local enterprise the road would still be wonderfully remunerative. Mr. Candler shows that during its last fiscal year the receipts of the Western and Atlantic from purely local business amounted to four thousand dollars a mile and that in addition to this, freight originating at local points along the W. and A. and freight originating at points outside the State but consigned to local points along this road, both of which classes are necessarily routed over the W. and A., make up an additional four thousand dollars a mile, an amount greater than the average gross mileage revenue of the other roads in Georgia. Therefore, it is contended, even if the Western and Atlantic under State operation should be reduced to a local enterprise, without the facilities of interstate connections, it would still be profitable and would give the State a distinct advantage in using its own road to bring about a proper adjustment of rates throughout Georgia.

As we said in the outset, both these plans, that of a new lease and that of State operation, have their strong points; and it will be well for the convention and the General Assembly to study them both in the broad spirit commended by Lord Bacon, "neither to contradict and confute nor to believe and take for granted but to weigh and consider."

Involved in both these propositions is the question of extending the Western and Atlantic road to the seacoast. If the property is to be operated by a lessee, due provision should be made in the lease so that if the road is extended, as it should be, the new line will be taken over by the same lessee on terms profitable to the State. There is also involved in both plans, the question of terminals at Atlanta and Chattanooga, of double-tracking the road between these points and of general improvements in the equipment and the facilities for handling the road's business and increasing its service and value to the State.

These and many other related questions must be thoroughly considered by the Legislature before it can reach well balanced conclusions as to the most satisfactory plan of administering this great property. To that end, the forthcoming convention will be especially hepful; for, it will bring to bear upon this matter the thought and experience of the State's best business men and most public spirited citizens. Furthermore, the convention will serve to arouse public interest in an issue that is among the most important the people of Georgia have ever known. The Western and Atlantic railroad is the State's richest asset, not simply because it is now worth within itself some sixteen million dollars and is earning five per cent net on that sum—an amount sufficient to pay the State's entire public debt and leave many millions in the treasury—but also because of its vital bearing upon freight rate problems and other far-reaching questions of transportation.

To sell this valuable property would, we believe, be almost a crime against the present as well as future generations of Georgians. No suggestion to that effect should be given a moment's consideration either by the convention that is to be called or by the Legislature. The only courses open are that of a new lease upon terms that will assure the improvement of the property, or that of State operation; and, as we have said, whichever of these may be adopted, provision should be made for the extension of the Western and Atlantic to the sea.

On this particular point, there seems to be no room for fair or reasonable difference of opinion. By extending the road to the coast, the State would protect its property by placing it forever beyond the power of railroad combinations to destroy or impair its value. And at the same time it would establish independent traffic connections between interior points and the advantageous ocean routes from the east. Thus the Western and Atlantic, reaching the entire length of the State, would become the controlling factor in our transportation affairs and would be a perpetual guarantee of just and equable freight rates.

In this, as in all other aspects of the W. and A.'s lease or operation, Georgia faces a wondrously rich opportunity as well as a great responsibility. Let us rise to meet them both in a spirit of earnest and thoughtful patriotism. The Chamber of Commerce has opened the way for co-operative service among interested citizens. The convention that is to be held deserves the cordial support of all true Georgians. It will be timely and profitable and, we believe, of inestimable value to the Legislature in working out a sound and progressive policy for the future of the State's road.

It is becoming difficult these days for a millionaire to give away his money.

An authority says that extreme militarism and Socialism are both rife in Germany, but it would be hard to see how one could be rife without the other.

The Growth of Georgia's Schools and Colleges.

A close student of affairs in Georgia remarked the other day that of all the State's resources, its preparatory schools and colleges are developing most rapidly. That is a remarkable statement in face of the extraordinary progress now astir in the commercial, industrial and agricultural interests but it is a true one; and who shall say that the sweep and energy of this material advancement are not due largely, perhaps chiefly, to a great educational awakening?

Certain it is that within the past few years, and particularly within the scholastic year just ended, the schools and colleges of Georgia, whether those that are maintained by the State, the church or by private enterprise, have come to play a wonderfully larger and more productive part in the life of this commonwealth and have won a higher place in the thought of the South and the nation. This is due in part to the broader standards and richer ideals which the schools have adopted. There has been, for instance, a continual advance in curricula both on the part of preparatory schools and colleges, notably women's colleges, so that these institutions now compare favorably with the best of their kind in the north and the east. Furthermore, there has been a constructive tendency to ally the schools directly with the common interests of the people and to make them not merely institutions of learning but also fruitful agencies of service.

Thus it has come to pass that Georgians who in years gone by would send their sons and daughters to preparatory schools or colleges in distant States are now keeping them at home, realizing that here are to be found unexcelled advantages and as wide a variety of choice as any section could offer. More than that, people in other parts of the country are looking Georgiaward for educational opportunities and it is not an infrequent thing to find students from ten or twenty different States in one of these institutions. The significance of these facts to our common life and interests cannot be overgauged; for, enduring progress and true prosperity are, after all, the fruitage of true education.

The growth of our schools and colleges has brought them new responsibilities, to meet which they must have more generous financial aid. Especially is this true of State institutions. The church schools have recently increased their endowments and enlarged their facilities; the schools conducted independently of church or State, though contributing to the interests of both, have done likewise. But our State institutions have been less fortunate in respect to financial aid. They have reached the point where they must receive more adequate support at the hands of the Legislature, if they are to meet the ever increasing demands upon them.

It is perhaps better to be a long time between drinks than between eats.

Again we extend welcome to our approaching visitors, the Georgia legislators.

Carnegie probably realizes that it is harder to give than to receive at this stage.

The thing that must perplex Colonel Roosevelt is how President Wilson can do so much on so few statements.

Thomas Nelson Page

(Savannah Press.)

The president's nomination of Thomas Nelson Page as United States ambassador to Italy is one of the strongest which could be made. Since the day when Washington Irving was sent to the court of Spain and wrote the incomparable Moorish sketches, brightened by the Alhambra book, no more notable mission has been given a literary man. The second son of Major John Page of the Confederate army, the Italian ambassador was educated in the Virginia colleges, practiced law in Richmond, and has written and published stories and essays which have linked his name with Virginia and the south and the republic of letters. "Marse Chan" was the first book and then followed social and historical articles and other books which would make a liberal shelf in the library of light literature. Although a literary man, he is fond of country life as his writings show, and, like John Randolph, of Roanoke, is never happier than when horseback riding in his native state.

He is a man of ample means, has built a beautiful house in Washington, and is a member of the prominent clubs in Washington and New York. He will be the dean of the American diplomatic corps so far as age and reputation are concerned. He has never been in public life, and like the president, himself, soon abandoned law for literature. In spite of the fact that he carries no official title up to this time, he ranks in the minds of all as the first gentleman of Virginia.

What a glorious experience a life in Italy will be for a man like Thomas Nelson Page! Italy with its art treasures and its glorious literature, and Rome with its magnificent traditions, the world has a right to expect sketches more notable even than those of John Hay, who dwelt so long as United States minister to Spain, and who enriched even Spanish literature with the finished pages of "Old Castilian Days."

The Soul of An Artist

Much pain and misery did Strindberg experience in his life, his biography being one long heart-rending tragedy, a tragedy such as moves one unto tears and a deep-felt sense of commiseration. The saddest of them all being this very happlessness, this mystical and supernatural fear which pressed forever, like a heavy weight against his heart and kept him forever enthralled and imprisoned. He forever conceived of himself as the victim of that malevolent will which reigns so sternly in this vale of tears here below. All the sufferings of his sensitive soul did not come fortuitously, but were systematically arranged and deliberately appointed, for his torment. It was all the fruits of that Evil Spirit, which is persecuting him—and all mortals—with fiendish glee and persistence, wreaking on him its malevolent desires. If, to take an instance he is informed of the arrival in Stockholm of a certain Polish artist known to him once upon a time in the distant past, but whose very name he cannot now recall, his diseased fancy resurrects the memory of some minor disagreements, which the two had many years ago, with the result that he begins to believe that this man's mission hereabouts is no other than the taking of his life, so that he shrinks from meeting him, and if he passes, in his occasional rambles through town, a certain house or alley which he thinks he didn't need to pass on this particular trip, it assumes in his mind the proportions of an impending tragedy, the omen of some evil which is in store for him. In such manner did this great man pass his life in suffering from the persecution mania, in eternal and unceasing fear of the spirits and natural forces, fears which were but the offspring of his own diseased fancy which had called them into being. They were forever seeking to pierce his heart with their poisoned arrows, to render his life forever miserable and embittered.—Harold Berman in July Nautilus.

Love's Little World

I.

Where the heartstone embers smoulder
Love's own optics is softly calling;
On her face the lights are falling
As the years grow old and older.

Love's domain is small, but luring—
One sweet face, content and smiling;
But its force is all beguiling
And its strength is all enduring.

It is she, who reads the story
By the fireside, still and lonely
That can make this ingle only
All my wide, sweet world of glory.

II.

Just one little face so tender,
Just these hands, so white and slender
And one heart that still remembers
Makes my bliss, where glow the embers,
Where the hearthstone dreamings smoulder
As the years grow old and older.

Ah! but such a tiny thing
Makes the absent lover sing:
Life is small, I do aver—
Just this room, old love and her.

A City of Gardens

In going about town this spring you have noticed the beauty o fthe lawns, of course, with their well trimmed grass and their luxuriant shrubbery. Thirty years ago there was nothing of this sort in Kansas City. It was ugly, untidy, ilkept. In the last three decades it has been transformed from the ugliest city in the United States to the prettiest.

The reason is that the owner of the small home is making it a point to have a beautiful yard. He plants shrubbery—spirea van Houttei, honeysuckle, Dorothy Perkins and crimson ramblers—and he clips his grass with a lawn cower. The example has spread from one block to another until pretty much the whole town is a garden at this time of the year.

Incidentally, what do you suppose the influence of this orderliness and beauty has been on the character of the men and women of Kansas City?—Kansas City Times.

Quips and Quiddities

A motorist tells this one on himself: Trying out a new car on the road between Cedar Grove and Great Notch he stopped to pick up an old farmer who looked as if he might like a ride and who admitted that it was his first experience in an automobile. The machine was hitting a pretty good clip when it skidded on a soft spot and ran into a tree. Nobody was hurt, but as the ruralite picked himself up he said to the motorist:

"Well, that was going some. But, say, mister, there's one thing I'd like to ask you. How do you stop one of these contraptions where there ain't no trees?"

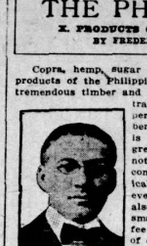
A wealthy land owner in England, affected with the craze for Japanese gardening, invited the Japanese ambassador to luncheon and afterward showed him around the gardens and greenhouses, keeping the Japanese garden till the last as a delightful surprise.

When, after admiring the beauty of all the other gardens, the ambassador was at last taken to the imitation of the gardens of his own flowery land, he held up his hands in enthusiastic delight. "Ah," he exclaimed, "this is wonderful! We have nothing like this in Japan!"

THE PHILIPPINES

X. PRODUCTS OF THE ISLANDS.
BY FREDERIC J. HASKIN.



Copra, hemp, sugar and tobacco are the principal products of the Philippines. The islands also possess tremendous timber and mineral resources, but lack of transportation continues to hamper the development of the lumber and mineral industries. Rice is a leading product but for a great many years the people have not raised enough for their own consumption. The camote a tropical sweet potato, is found in every poor man's garden, which also is true of corn, potatoes, small vegetables and grains. Coffee once was an important article of export but bugs so devastated this crop a decade before American occupation that it never has regained its former status. Many tropical fruits, including the mango, the taste of which is as near heaven as the average human being will get, the orange, banana, chico, papaya and lansone are found everywhere.

• • •

The soil of the islands consists mainly of volcanic rocks enriched with organic matter. A little irrigation induces luxuriant tropical and subtropical growths either indigenous or exotic. The range of products is very wide, including those previously mentioned and about 300 fiber plants of either commercial or local value. A variety of nuts is grown, the most important of which are the cocoanut and the betelnut. The dried kernels of the cocoanut make copra. The betelnut is the common man's and woman's "chaw of tobaccer." Spices such as pepper, cinnamon and cloves grow in many parts of the islands, and with proper cultivation and knowledge of marketing is bound to form a valuable industry. Pineapples do well in the islands even in the wild state. The Hawaiian pineapple is famous the world over, but the Philippine variety could easily rival it in both quality and quantity. Efforts to commercialize the product were begun less than two years ago, when a company was formed in Manila to produce pineapples on a large scale.

The cocoanut palm constitutes a highly important factor in the domestic economy and welfare of the islands. There is scarcely a part of the archipelago in which it does not thrive. Although the greater part of the cocoanut trees are reliciously neglected, they insist upon giving their owners a steady profit year after year. Whenever a cocoanut plantation is given proper care it yields a large and sure income. One of the prettiest parts of the islands is the cocoanut region around San Pablo, Laguna province, within a few hours of Manila. The cocoanut palm has many uses. The milk of the cocoanut is a refreshing drink, and the meat makes good eating. The sap of the tree is the basis of a native wine called tuba. Copra, which became the leading export of the islands in 1912, is the meat of the cocoanut which has been dried by sun or fire. Oil is also extracted and this is exceedingly profitable. Only a few years ago the meat of the cocoanut was supposed to be useful only to soap boilers and confectioners, but it is now known that it produces many food products. A cocoanut oil factory is being built in Manila, but the bulk of the product goes to Marseilles, where it is drawn into dietetic compounds.

Philippine tobacco produces the famous Manila cigars which are becoming so popular in the United States. They have been the steady smoke of the races of the Orient for several decades. The tobacco plant in the Philippines is of American origin. It originally was introduced in the islands from Mexico by Spanish Philliomaires in the latter part of the sixteenth century, and it is believed that certain varieties from the United States were introduced about two decades ago. From the time of its introduction until 1781 the Spanish government did not pay much attention to it, but in that year tobacco was made a state monopoly on the island of Luzon. But this did not prevent independent growers of the Visayans from disposing of their products. The government monopoly expired in 1882. In that year it supplied 50 per cent of the annual budget, but its many evils, including certain forms of slavery, resulted in bringing the monopoly to an end. This led to the growth of flourishing companies, particularly "La Tabacalera," in northern Luzon.

The establishment of free trade between the United States and the Philippines in 1909 gave the tobacco industry another tremendous boost. The islands export from 60,000,000 to 90,000,000 cigars a year to the United States, and are permitted by law to ship in as many as 150,000,000 cigars per annum free of duty. The big factories in Manila turn out millions of cigarettes a day, the best grades being sold at the rate of thirty for 5 cents, American money. The cigarette is one of the necessities of life in the Philippines, and even the government allots each prisoner a certain number each day.

• • •

The great Philippine monopoly is hemp fiber. It is extracted from a species of the plantain family which in growing closely resembles the banana plant. There are many varieties of hemp in Manila, bowstring and Bombay hemp, but none of these compare with the famous Manila hemp. None other in the world compares with it either in tensile strength, lightness or length. Only in the Philippines does it grow luxuriantly in the wild state, and attempts to introduce it for purposes of cultivation in places where closely related species thrive, have met with little or no success. Up to 1825 practically no hemp was exported. About that time primitive but more or less systematic efforts to cultivate it were made and its production rapidly expanded. By 1887 the value of hemp manufactured hemp exceeded that of any other exported product. It continued its pre-eminence excepting in 1892 and 1893 when sugar took the first place and in 1912 when it was eclipsed by a small margin by copra.

• • •

Sugar has been cultivated in the islands for centuries. According to a version accepted in some parts of Luzon and the Visayans, the Chinese introduced sugar and legend hath it that they brought it from Formosa. It is also said that Batavia supplied the proper cane to the Visayans, and that the sugar of Luzon springs from Tahiti stock. The fact that the old-time methods of sugar cultivation are the same as those employed in Formosa and that the same Chinese names of influence are still used strongly corroborates this theory. Five varieties of sugarcane are grown in the islands proper, white, green, striped and the black with white rings at the joints.

• • •

Sugar always has been one of the three leading products of the islands, and the recent introduction of American capital and American methods indicates a marvelous growth of the industry. The most antiquated of machinery has been in use and the product always has been coarse. There are no sugar refineries worthy of the name in the islands, although one or two are found in the sugar centers of the Visayas. A company of big American sugar capitalists operating under the name of the Poole Syndicate owns 55,000 acres on the small island of Mindoro, about five hours from Manila, and are spending $2,000,000 on a refinery and other necessary agencies of the sugar trade. In 1911 the company of Welch, Fairchild & Havemeyer secured control of 25,000 acres of the old Calamba friar estate, just above Manila, and are already doing work which will call for the expenditure of over $1,000,000. Philippine sugar when refined will be as good as any in the world. Under the Payne-Aldrich bill the islands are permitted to send into this country 300,000 tons per annum free of duty, and it will not be many years before they reach their limit. At present such of the Philippine sugar as is exported goes to China, with the exception of a few thousand tons which are shipped to New York.

CORN CROP IMPROVED, SAYS CONNER'S REPORT

Department of Agriculture's Bulletin Shows Better Corn but Poorer Cotton Crop

That the farmers of Georgia are taking a greater interest in crop diversification and in the production of foodstuffs for men and animals, is the conclusion drawn by the commissioner of agriculture, J. J. Conner, in his annual report on crop conditions, according to the report.

The report indicates a gloomy aspect with respect to the production of cotton, which is only 82 per cent of what it was at this time last year. The corn crop however, is larger than last year.

The report of the department is made up from letters received on crop conditions from almost every county in the state. Many letters are received from the several sections, and the report is based on an average taken by the department.

THE JOURNAL LETTER BOX

To the Editor of The Journal:

Now is the season when the voice of the conference and the legislator and, not infrequently, the American tourist abroad, puffed up with an exaggerated sense of national glory, recalls the Chauvinism type of people who work mischief by their unreasoning and unintelligent patriotism. Just how old Nicholas Chauvini would delight in living were he now only a naturalized American citizen instead of a French ghost.

There is no more familiar bit of rhetoric current than that "ours is the greatest nation upon earth." When we seek a patriot we do not find him in the egregiously patriotic American who gives obstreperous utterance to the above sentim ent, both at home and abroad. Ambassador Bayard, when at the Court of St. James, was the representative of this country, telt nimseli frequently called upon to apologize for our Chauvinism. This type of citizen is still common and his clarion notes are still invariably heard in legislative assemblies when any opportunity is offered to draw a comparison between ourselves and other nations.

The egregious patriot aforesaid really believes that our customs, opinions and manner of living, whether viewed from the moral, rationalistic or intellectual standpoint, are a vast improvement on those of any other nation. Every state in the union, however, has a rising population of young and middle aged people who have discovered, congress and the public schools to the contrary notwithstanding, that we do not know everything; that the pathway of national progress is full of perplexities, and that although there is a difference, yet Europe and Japan are not put to sleep by our civic virtues. When the contrary is urged, even for purposes of rodomontade, the best Americans feel ashamed of some of our institutions and refuse to help sympathizing with our ambassadors in their apologetic explanations of "the point of view" taken by said countries.

As an ex-attache of the United States embassy at Paris the writer has heard and seen much of the world.

No American, unless a fool, denies today the force of the national character, whether he may think of the behavior of individuals. It is about time for buncombe and jingoism to yield intelligent patriotism on one side and carping cynicism on the other and give place to soberer self-satisfaction. It is easy enough to get tangled up in the stars and stripes, and holding the American eagle up to the gaze of a weary universe, cry "Hurrah!" but it is quite another thing to command the admiration of the world, secure protection to our citizens abroad by behavoir commensurate with our ambition and self-confidence.

The unconventional American is at a disadvatage now, both at home and abroad, if he has not some of the best social world; he can no longer afford to ignore cosmopolitan usages and to rely solely on a forceful or imposing personality. The world of London, Paris and Berlin, of New York, Boston and Washington has ceased to thrill and is scarcely amused at the shows of merely in the guise of a splendid intellectual buffalo.

Lemaitre correctly said:

"Croire tout decouvert est une erreur profonde, C'est prendre l'horizon pour les bornes du monde."

meaning that it is a profound mistake to think everything has been discovered; it is the same as to consider one's horizon to be the boundary of the world.

Does not Shakespeare say that "Stay at home youths have ever homely wits?" Perhaps some of our congressman, legislators and editors would indulge in less Chauvinism if they would travel a little and "see themselves as others see them."

The recent hasty and uncalled for criticism of our present national administration, and especially the head of it raises the inquiry as to whether some of our big politicians are not advanced beyond the mental capacity of their ancestral pithecanthropes? Chauvinism, egregious patriotism, "tooness of the too" or read American patriotism—which shall prevail? In the language of Irvin's Japanese Boy, Hashimoro Togo, "I ask for to know."

BUTTS COUNTY SPLIT ON CITY COURT QUESTION

JACKSON, Ga., June 21.—No question that has come up in recent years has so stirred the people of Butts county as the matter of the city court of Jackson, the life of which will be decided at the next session of the general assembly.

The county is well divided in opinions as to whether the court should be abolished.

BAR ASSOCIATION AND COURT PAID SPLENDID TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF JUDGE J. L. HOPKINS

Memorial Read to Bar Association and Spread on Minutes of Court as Evidence of Admiration of Bar for Its Deceased Leader as a Lawyer and Judge

At a meeting of the Atlanta Bar association held Saturday Alex C. King read a beautiful memorial to the late Judge John L. Hopkins, which had been prepared by a committee of which he was chairman.

The memorial was ordered entered on the minutes of the superior court of Fulton county "as an enduring evidence of the admiration of this bar for our deceased leader as a lawyer and a judge of our affection for him as a man; of our veneration for his lofty character and intellect."

The committee which presented the memorial was appointed shortly after the death of Judge Hopkins on October 11, and is composed of the following leading members of the bar association: Alex C. King, chairman; John M. Slaton, L. Z. Rosser, Rc. Sandero McDaniel and Robert C. Alston.

The memorial, which as an unusual tribute, is to become a part of the court record, follows:

"John Livingston Hopkins, after a long life of useful service to his family, to friends and to humanity, on the 30th day of October, 1912, finished the course of his earthly labors and joined—

"The Unseen Invisible,
Of those immortal dead who live again
In minds made better by their presence.'

Judge Hopkins was not born but brings him into the fierce light of political prominence. He was spent almost wholly in the discharge of the labors of his profession, in the performance of the duties of the superior court judgship of this circuit; among his family and friends, without parade or noise. Yet his influence, as a positive force making for civic righteousness, has not been limited to one locality.

Supper—Baked pork and beans, cucumber pickles, hot potatoes, bread, coffee.

As a pattern of judicial duty well done, as a type of the learned lawyer who held the high office of judge and friends, without pretense or show, he rendered above its emoluments, as the citizen who never feared to stand for the public good, and his protest against any lowering of public standards, as the champion of the weak—this quiet gentleman made his impress not only on the community in which he lived his unostentatious life; but wielded a potent influence throughout the entire state.

EARLY LIFE.

Judge Hopkins was born in Madisonville, Monroe county, Tenn., on September 24, 1846. His childhood was spent in that neighborhood. After completing the course of its common schools he entered the Hiawassee college for the period of three years. Judge Hopkins read law under the direction of an uncle, H. H. Stephens, an able and learned lawyer, and was admitted to the bar in 1847 at the age of nineteen years.

He formed soon thereafter a partnership with Hon. D. M. Key, of Tennessee, afterwards postmaster general of the United States, in President Hayes' cabinet, and subsequently United States district judge.

In 1853 Judge Hopkins married Miss Elizabeth A. Cooke, the daughter of Dr Robert F. Cooke, of Tennessee, who died March 4, 1870. They are survived by three daughters, Mrs. Mary Hopkins Howell, Miss Charlotte Hopkins, and by their sons, Charles T. Hopkins and Linton C. Hopkins, and by a granddaughter, the child of Alex S. Hopkins, who died a number of years ago.

Seeking a wider field, Judge Hopkins moved in 1857, to Chattanooga, Tenn., where he resided until 1863.

IN CIVIL WAR.

He served for a short time as a volunteer in the Confederate service under Colonel R. J. Morgan. His health however, soon disqualified him for the active duties of a soldier.

In 1865 Judge Hopkins came to Atlanta, which place remained his home thenceforth. Here he began anew the practice of his profession which the war had broken up.

He entered earnestly into the life of the community. We are indebted to some of the lawyers of that period for the fact that he took an active interest in the political contests of that critical period. One of his first contributions to the press was a letter in support of President Johnson's veto of the reconstruction measures of congress. One of the few political speeches he has made after he came to Georgia, was delivered during this time at the request of the Young Men's Democratic club of Atlanta, in Old Davis hall, in support of General Gordon in his race for governor, as the Democratic standard bearer against Governor Bullock.

ON BENCH IN 1870.

In 1870 the resignation of Judge John D. Pope as Judge of the Atlanta circuit created a vacancy and Judge Hopkins was appointed to fill this important and most trying position.

Atlanta was, then in its formative period. Destroyed in 1864, it was still in course of rebuilding. Many disorderly characters had assembled here. Crime was flagrant. It soon became evident that Judge Hopkins was not a passive representative of judicial dignity; but that he was the active power of the justice of the state. Scrupulous to accord to the accused every constitutional right to which he was entitled, unaffected by public clamor for or against one charged with crime, he soon let it be known that no miscarriage of justice would be tolerated, and that society would find the protection of the unflinching enforcement of law and legal procedure at his hands.

The officers of the law were held to a vigilant discharge of duty and before the expiration of his term respect for law and security to life and property had been placed on a permanent basis.

COMMUNITY'S DEBT.

This community owes a lasting debt to Judge Hopkins for this service performed at this critical period of its career. It was a service performed at risk of personal harm which was openly threatened, and only in the face of illness and physical pain which would have overcome a less constant spirit.

Judge Hopkins' great service in the enforcement of the criminal law has caused too little attention to be given to the work done by him on the civil side of the superior court.

As a presiding officer, without apparent effort or hurry, no judge ever dispatched business with more celerity. His charges to juries in intricate cases were models of clearness and were always applications of the law to the particular issues in the case, so that the lay mind could understand them, instead of mere abstract statements of legal principles. Many of the most important litigations in the state were tried by him; notably the first suits between the state of Georgia and the several railroads, over the right of the state to levy ad valorem taxes, in which Judge Hopkins was the pioneer in upholding this right of the state.

HEALTH POOR.

In January, 1876, Judge Hopkins resigned the judgeship of the superior court. His health was at this time quite precarious and he established his residence at a suburban home in Fulton county, at a point now within the limits of the city of Atlanta. There, on a small farm he became a pioneer in the breeding of Jersey cattle, by which the character of the stock has been so much improved. His life with his flowers, his grasses, his cattle were to him a source of the greatest pleasure as well as of the upbuilding of his health. This, however, was but his diversion. Immediately on resigning, he resumed the practice of law and in the year 1876 formed a partnership with Hon. John T. Glenn, under the firm name of Hopkins & Glenn. This firm soon became one of the most prominent in Georgia. During its existence there was little important litigation in the courts of the circuit in which it was not engaged; nor was its practice confined to Atlanta, but extended throughout the state.

In 1888 this partnership was succeeded by the firm of John L. Hopkins & Son, consisting of Judge Hopkins and Messrs. Charles T. and Alexander S. Hopkins. This firm was dissolved in 1899 by the death of Mr. Alexander S. Hopkins, but was reconstructed in 1892 by the admission of Mr. Linton C. Hopkins and remained thenceforth unaltered until dissolved by the death of Judge Hopkins. Judge Hopkins, however, from about 1893, began to withdraw from the more active work of the bar more and more, having the privilege not often accorded to a father of finding in his sons able lawyers worthy successors to his name, with a complete capacity to conduct and extend the large business which his later firm always enjoyed.

For some years as his professional activities became less, Judge Hopkins spent the winters in Florida, in charming home at Clearwater, and the summers at his residence at Mount Airy. During the last years of his life, however, he resided almost entirely in Atlanta.

AUTHOR OF LEGAL WORKS.

While Judge Hopkins thus retired from the active practice of the law, this did not signify the end of his important labors.

While on the bench in the seventies he had published a valuable work on the criminal law of the state—"Hopkins' Penal Code."

In 1902, when upwards of seventy years of age, he again took up the profession his work "Hopkins' Law of Personal Injuries," a second and enlarged edition of which, practically a new work, was published by him in 1912. This was a most comprehensive study, analysis and arrangement of the law of personal injuries and of damages to property by railroad trains, as declared and developed by the statutes and decisions of courts of last resort in Georgia.

In 1893 Judge Hopkins was named by the legislature, with Hon. Clifford Anderson, of Macon, and Joseph R. Lamar, of Augusta, as a commissioner to prepare the code of 1895.

The work was a most laborious undertaking, as the codifiers not only incorporated the statute law which had been passed since the last code revision in 1882 with eliminations of decisions of the supreme court; but made a complete rearrangement of the subjects in the code, greatly altering that existing in former codes.

This code was adopted by the legislature as the code of the state, giving all of its acts effect as a statute, which had not been done with the revisions of 1873 or 1882.

In 1895 Judge Hopkins was appointed by like statute, as the code of Georgia, a revision of the Code of 1895, made by Judge Hopkins alone, incorporating such additions and corrections as had been made in the law of Georgia since the code of 1895.

RETAINED VIGOR.

The wonderful mental activity of Judge Hopkins will be appreciated when it is recalled that this work, as well as the second edition of his "Law of Personal Injuries," was completed by him after he had attained eighty years of age.

In the summer of 1912, he had in contemplation a work on the law of pleading in Georgia, now lost to the profession by his death.

In addition to these labors in the literature of the law, Judge Hopkins never lost touch with the public life of the community. Whenever any vital issue was before the people his timely service was freely and fearlessly given.

As illustrations of his devotion to the public good, without regard to self, we instance the speech made by him in 1887, in opposition to the repeal of the adoption of local option in Fulton county which had been made in 1885. Judge Hopkins had not favored the original adoption, of local option, deeming the measure unsuited to a community of the size and situation of Atlanta. But when it had been adopted and in his opinion its trial had justified its adoption, in the campaign for its repeal in 1887 he made the first political speech he had delivered in twenty years and fearlessly proclaimed that he had changed his former opinion. It is fresh in the memory of us all how in the last gubernatorial campaign, at his advanced age, Judge Hopkins stirred the state by his speeches and letters protesting against dragging the judicial office into politics through the candidacy of judges while on the bench for political office.

THE JUDGE AND THE MAN.

The judiciary was to him a priesthood dedicated to the service of justice, and nothing that could weaken its devotion to that service was to him tolerable.

To estimate the character and life work of a man like Judge Hopkins is no easy task.

To the superficial observer he was the cold, analytical, acute intellect who could dissect a legal proposition as the skilled surgeon could dissect the most delicate organs of the human body, and who was removed from the influence of mere feeling. To those who knew him this was perhaps the least of the man.

His love of beauty as shown by his love of trees and flowers and all nature; his warm human sympathies as shown by his beautiful home life and his devotion to friends; his interest in humanity and all that made for its uplifting; these were the finer and higher traits of mind and heart that revealed the man as he really was.

His record as a judge, his publications as an author of legal works, have fixed securely his place and fame as a learned jurist.

His long career at the bar, his success in most difficult and important causes, his arguments before judges and juries have left behind him the memory of the great lawyer and eloquent advocate.

But great as were his talents and achievements in these spheres, it we look for the supreme trait of Judge Hopkins' character, it is to be found not in the domain alone of intellect, but in the higher realm of the affections not only incorporated the statute law which had been passed since the last code revision in 1882 with eliminations of decisions of the supreme court; but made a complete rearrangement of the subjects in the code, greatly altering that existing in former codes.

This code was adopted by the legislature as the code of the state, giving all of its acts effect as a statute, which had not been done with the revisions of 1873 or 1882.

LOWRY TO PAY $60,000 IN DIVIDENDS JULY 1ST

Directors of Bank Decide to Pay Quarterly Instead of Semi-Annual Dividends

The usual semi-annual dividend of 6 per cent was declared on the stock of the Lowry National bank at a meeting of directors held recently and the dividend has been made payable on July 1.

The same dividend was paid last year, and coming again it is taken as an evidence that there has been little change in the good financial situation generally.

The Lowry National bank has a capital stock of $1,000,000 and a 6 per cent dividend on that amount means that on July 1, $60,000 will be added to the amount of the currency "floating around Georgia."

Another indication of the good financial situation was the decision of the directors at the meeting to pay the bank's dividend quarterly instead of semi-annually as has been the institution's custom in the past.

The quarterly dividends will be paid stockholders on January 1, April 1, July 1 and October 1.

The Lowry National is one of the oldest Atlanta banks and has a surplus, which equals the amount of its capital stock.

REPRESENTATIVE STEWART URGES ABOLISHMENT OF FEE SYSTEM

Editor The Journal: Much is being said now about a revision or a complete change of our tax system. Our capable comptroller general has stated that the present system is nothing more nor less than "passing around the hat for a contribution from the taxpayers." Our able chairman of the railroad commission says "It is based upon voluntary returns and hence its inequalities." There is no doubt we need our system of gathering taxes revised, but as I see it, this is not the only thing we need along that line. I think what we need now is not only something to increase our revenue, but something to protect and conserve our present revenue of the state and counties. Instead of legislating to increase our revenues we should first legislate to check the present waste of our revenues, and I feel sure that we will not only have sufficient funds to meet all demands, but will have enough left to double our old soldiers' pay, increase our public school funds and then have a lower tax rate than at present, based upon our present tax values. Legislation of this sort would not only conserve our revenue which is now being wasted at the rate of a million and a half dollars each year, but in turning this waste in the direction of our old soldiers it would protect the honor and dignity of our great state. For we all know that our school teachers are being shamefully treated, and the paltry sum received by our pensioners is a disgrace upon us and I think if we could do better by them we should quit calling them our pensioners and call them our paupers, because we are begging them when we pay them $5 per month and call it a pension. We are treating them as the rich man treated Lazarus; we allow them to pick up a few crumbs that fall from our table, and the politicians throw salt upon their sores by telling them, amid the plodding of crocodile tears, that they would be glad to pay them more if we had the money.

You will no doubt ask where is this million and a half dollars being wasted, and how can we save it? Why, the legislature and the people of Georgia can abolish the abominal fee system, the useless county treasury and tax receivers' offices, and save one million and a half each year. By local taxation we can turn this waste toward the support of our Confederate soldiers and public schools, which will provide a county pension of the same or possibly more than the state now pays, and also a good amount increase to our local school funds. Where does this money come from? How can you make a million and a half dollars to go in this direction? In answer to these questions I will give you the facts and figures, and will use this (Coffee) county, which is about an average, as an illustration: This county pays the treasurer, in fees, about $2,000 per year; tax collector, $1,500; tax receiver, $1,000; ordinary, $1,500; sheriff, $5,000; clerk of superior court, $4,500; solicitor general, $2,000; solicitor city court $2,500; judge city court (salary), $1,200; county commissioners and their chairman, clerk and attorney, $2,500; county school commissioners and school board, $1,250, making a total in round numbers of $25,000, that go into the pockets of the officeholders of Coffee county each year. Money everywhere, and not a dollar to spend. This county should pay the following amounts to her officers and the following officers are all that is needed: Ordinary, on salary of $1,200; clerk of superior court, $2,200; sheriff, $2,800; county school commissioner and school board, $1,250; tax collector, $1,200; county commissioners and clerk, $1,500. This county's pro rata share of the solicitor general's salary (estimated), $500. Making a total in round numbers of $10,000. Deduct this amount from the amount they now receive in fees, and you have a balance of $15,000 waste money. Deduct from this $2,000 to pay solicitors and judges of city courts, where they can afford these luxuries, you still have the sum of $13,000. Take $10,000 of this amount and give to our pensioners and schools and we still have a nice sum to go toward lowering our present tax rate. Ten thousand dollars saved in Coffee county; so multiply this by 148, the number of counties in the state, and you will have the amount saved from the fee system waste basket in Georgia, which is approximately a million and a half dollars.

Some politicians may say that these are the vaporings of a dreamer. But they are not; they are the cold facts and figures as they stand in my county, and I believe the amount wasted here is about an average for every county in Georgia, and if anyone is dreaming it is the people of Georgia in their quiet and peaceful slumbers under the soothing drops administered by the politicians of our state, and I truly welcome the day when they awake from this Rip Van Winkle sleep and demand their rights by abolishing this abominable fee system and unnecessary offices, which are robbing our old soldiers, our teachers, depleting our county treasuries and burdening our taxpayers, solely for the enrichment of an army of stalfed officeholders.

Some time ago I met an old soldier who had just received his annual hand-out, the leavings from the luxuriant tables of the stall-fed officeholders of Georgia. He said his amount was short $1, leaving him $59, but that he would try and make out. He told me of his sufferings while awaiting the arrival of the amount; he told me of the four years of fighting and sufferings in General Lee's army, of the bullet wounds he had received, and of his return home after the surrender. His description of the condition at that time, while his country was laid waste and in the hands of his enemies, was terrible; but his present condition, in a land of luxury and plenty, among a million sons and daughters for whom he laid his life upon the altar to protect and defend, was deplorable. He was poverty stricken then and no one to relieve his sufferings, is old and worn out now, and hungry, and no one will relieve him, but he is forced to live on the annual stipend of $60 per year, less the $1, which must go to satisfy the damnable, unquenchable thirst of the fee system.

We erect monuments, sing the praises and talk of the chivalrous deeds of these grand old men, but I think it is time we stop all of this tomfoolery and hang our heads in shame, unless we protect and care for them and relieve their distress. Let's give them money instead of bread, for those marble slabs will not relieve their hunger nor will their chivalrous deeds furnish raiment for their naked backs. Let's erect for them a tower of gold dollars that will equal in size, if necessary, the tower of Babel. Feed them upon the fat of our land and clothe them with our costliest raiment, so when the day arrives for them to start upon that march whence they will never return they cannot justly utter for our benefit the words of the disappointed poet:

"Come not when I am dead
To cast thy foolish tears upon my grave,
And trample 'round my fallen head,
And vex the unhappy dust thou wouldst not save."

We can increase the amount of our pensioners' pay, and can do it without hurting anyone or increasing our tax rate. The officeholders will not be hurt, as they will be placed on salaries in keeping with the offices they hold. It has been the apparent desire of our lawmakers for the past few years to increase our pensioners' pay, but lack of funds prevented. So I respectfully submit my proposition to conserve our state and county revenue, when in going to waste, by abolishing the fee system and all unnecessary state and county offices, and turn this waste fund toward the increase of our public school and pension funds, by giving each county the right to pay her pensioners these waste funds or any amount the see fit to, in addition to the state pension. I shall introduce a bill to this effect, and I cannot see where the legislature could spend time on a more profitable and honorable matter. I do not believe that there is a member of the legislature who will not agree that our old Confederate soldiers need more pay. And there are not many who do not think the fee system is, and it should be abolished. I invite the cooperation of all my colleagues, as well as every well-wisher, in the settlement of laws along this line. Respectfully, C. E. STEWART.

AS LIGHTNING SNAPPED, CARS STOPPED AN HOUR

Storm Yesterday Afternoon Threatened Heavy Damage, but Did Little

A severe lightning storm, accompanied by a terrific cannonade of thunder, visited Atlanta late yesterday afternoon and stopped all traffic on the street car lines for an hour, from 5 until 6 o'clock.

The storm commenced at about 4:30 o'clock, but did not grow so severe as to make traffic on the trolleys dangerous until half an hour later. No damage was done to the plant of the Georgia Railway and Electric company nor to any of its rolling stock. The cars were stopped simply as a protection to passengers from lightning.

DODGEN SAYS NEGRO'S CHARGES ARE ARSURD

James H. Dodgen, the young attorney recently indicted by the grand jury on the charge of larceny after trust, involoving a fee transaction with James Wilson, a negro, declared Saturday that the negro's charges are absurd and that a trial will prove quickly that there had been no double-dealing on his part while acting as Wilson's lawyer.

He said that the negro owed him, Dodgen, a fee of $20 for defending him, and gave a bill of sale for his house furniture.

At auction, the lawyer maintains, this furniture brought only $3 and the court costs of the sale ran up to $6, leaving him $2 for his fee.

Does Your Town Want to Grow?

IF it's a town with the push and the pride to want to get ahead, the first thing to do is make it a good place to live in.

¶ Is it the kind of place the young fellows will stick to and be proud of and want to rear their families in?

¶ Is it the kind of place visitors will really enjoy visiting? Is it the sort of town you men and women think really worth while.

¶ If it is lacking in CORRECT SANITARY CONDITIONS, it will never get over into the growing column.

¶ Sanitary living is the right of the people. It is the just inheritance of the little child. It is the safeguard of the population.

¶ If there's a lurking-place for disease in your home, your family is in danger.

¶ If your town has a breeding place for sickness, you and your neighbors will have to pay the price.

¶ If your town lacks the proper Sewerage facilities, it's in danger.

¶ If the water supply is contaminated, or exposed to contamination, the health of your people is menaced.

¶ If your lighting is inadequate, out-of-date and cheerless, your boys and girls will be the losers. Darkness isn't good for the morals any more than for the eyesight.

¶ Just as talk with you about what your town needs. It's our business to better and boost the town that is ailing. We've cured and cheered more than 300. We'd like to tell you who they are and what we did for them.

Meaning of Education

H. J. Pearce, Ph. D., President Brenau College.

The etymological significance of the term education has comparatively little bearing upon the meaning of the term as commonly used. In this change there has been something lost and much gained.

We have gained in that we have abandoned the time-worn psychological theory that a child is born with certain "faculties," which merely must be "drawn out" (educated), and we have reached the conclusion that you can only "draw out" what you "put in," and that the "putting in" process is quite as important, indeed more important than the "drawing out" process.

The history of educational practice, if not of educational theory, will show a decided oscillation from one extreme to the other. Now, all energy and effort is directed to the "putting in" process; and again it is to the "drawing out" process.

There are even today certain types of educational institutions which seem to see in the boy or girl only a vessel designed for the purpose of storing up knowledge. There are possibly no institutions that hold to the opposite practice, but there are many individuals who believe that every man's inborn powers will develop without reference to his knowledge of science or literature or philosophy, and that the best educated man is he who has become best adapted to his environment, who has found his place in our social and economic systems.

The greatest achievement of modern pedagogy is the foundation of the principle of correlation between impression and expression.

Whatever may be one's views as to the ultimate nature of mind, there is no doubt that the nervous system is the medium through which it operates in its relation to the material world. And it is through our comparatively recent knowledge of the mechanism of the nervous system that the full significance of the pedagogical principle under discussion has been revealed.

This nervous system is made up of three different sets of neurones, or nerve elements—the afferent, the central and the efferent.

The afferent neurones are the nervas which originate in the various sense organs, as skin, eye, ear, etc., and travel various lengths relayed by nerve cells and terminate in a frazzled end in the spinal cord, or brain. The function of the efferent neurone is to gather impressions from the outer world of every sort and transmit the same to the central system. It is impossible for any human being to receive any impression from outside his body which is not mediated by an afferent neurone.

The end of the nerve fiber is frazzled like the cracker of a whip. This frazzled end of the afferent neurone terminates in the central system (spine or brain) near a nerve cell of a central neurone, which takes up the impression and transmits it to a higher center, and education in part at least consists in establishing definite relations between these incoming stimuli and its outgoing response, which is mediated by the efferent neurones.

This central system of neurones is infinitely complicated. It constitutes the great mass of the spinal cord and also the brain. Its function is to receive the impressions from the afferent neurones and connect or associate them with each other and with the outgoing neurones, which are called the efferent neurones.

These efferent neurones originate in the vicinity of the frazzled ends of the central neurones in the form of a nerve cell. This cell is sometimes called a "motor" cell, and the neurone a motor neurone. Its frazzled end terminates in a muscle which controls the movement of some portion of the body, as hand, foot, lip, tongue, vocal chord, etc.

The anatomy of the nervous system may determine in a measure the relation of afferent, central and efferent neurones for the normal individual, so that beyond certain limits associations are practically impossible, but within these limits there is a very large variety of possible connections.

If we reduce education to its simplest terms we may say that it consists in the establishment of right relations between the incoming stimulus (the effernt neurones) and the outgoing response (motor neurone) by means of the central system (brain). Impression and expression are the two cardinal points in every successful pedagogical system.

The recent popularity of vocational studies is likely to cause the emphasis to be placed too much on the side of expression. The demand for practical results from an education may be carried to an extreme. A hasty co-ordination between a certain set of impressions and a certain set of responses or expressions may result in a skilled mechanic, a crafty business man or a smart lawyer, at the sacrifice of rich possibilities of other co-ordinations and associations which would broaden sympathy, enlarge vision and enable character, without in any way diminishing efficiency.

The Modern College a Model College

By William S. Cox, President Cox College.

Seventy years ago students came to college by private conveyance or the public coach. Today they come in vestibuled trains in a single day from adjoining states. No less striking is this contrast between the olden means of transportation and those of the present day of steam and electricity, than that between the colleges of those days and our great modern institutions of learning.

We are living in an age of advancement. The goal towards which all education leads is perfection in usefulness. The great end for which a college course prepares is efficiency in one's chosen work. The test applied in all educational plans and processes is: Is it practical? Does it increase one's usefulness, success and happiness in the world? This is the public demand which the wise pedagogue must heed. Hence the revolution in type and method.

One consideration among many that may be mentioned is its environment. It is generally agreed that the best school of life is life itself. The great colleges and universities are placed in or near the large cities where the busy streams of life may furnish firsthand material for the student. To one studying science, constant illustration of the subject is found in the manufactures and trades; to the student of languages, the foreign tongues are attractive, and the best linguists are found in the large intellectual centers; to one interested in history, there is history making every minute of the day before his own eyes and recorded by the great daily papers; for the student of fine arts there are lectures, recitals, concerts, endless forms of entertainment and instruction by the greatest artists. Thus, the school of observation is a large factor in the modern college.

In the matter of equipment, the modern school must furnish apparatus of a very different sort from that of a few years ago. The modern student works with things rather than theories. Library, museum, laboratories, telescope are among the countless appliances of the modern college. The old controversy of mental versus manual has resolved itself into the sound pedagogic principle of mental by manual, to be stated later in life as manual by mental.

In regard to courses of study, the influence of the practical is more felt than anywhere else. Abstruse metaphysics, the embellishments and embroideries of education have been replaced by the practical side of knowledge, the facts rather than the fancies of life. Broader, however, is this new curriculum, for the pert saying that the educated man must know something about everything and everything about something is now considered sound pedagogics. In modern times we specialize in training for specialists in the professional world as well as in the mechanical and scientific.

The vital element of the school is its faculty. The heads of the school are no longer chosen for erudite scholarship, silver-tongued oratory, polished and affable address alone. With his intellectual achievement he must also combine mental alertness, vigor, business capacity, executive ability, sound judgment, decision and force of character in order that the school produce the best results. For instructors, men and women are needed who understand moral processes as well as mental, men and women who are not so far removed from youth that they cannot feel its thrill and enthusiasm, cannot sympathize, encourage, develop. The purpose of teachers of moral and intellectual worth is to develop the young for the future generation. We live indeed in a great period of the world's history, and yet we will have greater questions to answer in the future than we have today. We need strong minds equipped with the best education to cope with these great problems. Hence the scope of the modern college is a model college.

But, pardon me, may we look a little to the future of the modern college and may we anticipate its wonderful result on the future generations. Well has Lord Bacon taught the inductive method, and the modern idea is to eliminate the effete scholasticism of past ages and develop along lines of practical utility.

Knowledge is no longer taught theoretically alone, but with a view to applying it practically.

He lives in a dead period who looks upon the heroes of Greece and Rome as models of citizenship. The greatest achievements are yet to be, for most truthfully has the poet written:

Mourn not for past ages, with its great heroic men
Who dwell in history's pages, and live in poet's pen;
For the grandest times are before us, and the world is yet to see
The greatest worth of this old earth, in the men that are to be.

Convict Made Pets of Mice

(London Chronicle.)

An interesting story of a convict and his two pet mice is told in the report of Captain Hanson, the prison commissioner of London.

Captain Hanson said the convict, who was imprisoned at Parkhurst, had two pet mice, was unable to take his pets. Captain Hanson but was ordered to another prison, where he promised to have them cared for and himself went to the cell for the mice.

"Never shall I forget the parting scene," continued the officer. "The man took each of the mice, calling them by name, kissed them, and then put them in a little box he had lined with flannel, and with them a piece of bread as a piece of cheese he had saved."

THE PROBLEM OF THE SCHOOL HOW SHALL WE MEET IT?

By Dumas Malone, Teacher in Andrew College, Cuthbert, Ga.

The problem of the school bears a remarkable similarity to the problems of the church and of the home. Each of these three institutions, home, church and school, seeks to provide and to provide for life in its truest sense, hence the problem of each is how best to make such provision.

It would be impossible for any one to say with any certainty that the school of today is or is not adequately preparing for life those who come within its walls. One can but have his opinion about it. There are some things, however, which would indicate that there do today many people who do not think that the school is providing an adequate preparation. Whether or not there is justice in this criticism is another question. It might be interesting and profitable, though, to consider some of these things which indicate dissatisfaction.

There is a belief prevalent among men that one who is highly educated is impractical. Many readers of this article will doubtless remember what dire predictions of failure were made for Woodrow Wilson when he first entered public life. The fact that he was a university man, that he had been a college professor and then a college president caused many people to believe that he would be utterly unable to cope with the problems of politics. How could he be so practical? Such a belief is an indication of how well some people think the school is preparing for life.

There are, furthermore, some people today who are openly criticising our system of education. In a recent issue of the Ladies' Home Journal there was an article with this title, "How Can the Public School Make Good?" Intimating that the public school had not made good. Under the title just given, there was run in smaller type this statement, "It must be adjusted to the requirements of actual life," intimating that it is not now so adjusted.

It is certain, furthermore, that our educational system has not yet rendered any large proportion of our people efficient in their work or happy in their living. It does not take a very close observer to see that the majority of women in domestic life are filling their places inefficiently. Nor does it take very close observation to see that the majority of people have missed and are missing the highest enjoyments of life. The trite, well rounded living! By now our educational system has reached to a greater or less extent nearly all of our people, but it has not yet rendered them efficient and happy. Of course, we can never expect to render every one efficient and every one happy, but there is some question in the minds of some people as to whether it is doing as much as it should.

There is another thing in which I am sure. There is a tendency among those engaged in any profession to cling to the traditions of the profession. There is some movement in our country to reform legal procedure, almost every one says more about the need of such reform than the lawyers do. There is today more or less effort to change the methods of the church; considerable opposition to such change is usually found among the ministry. So it is not unnatural that teachers should seek to retain their educational methods after these have outlived their usefulness. Common, everyday business man is perhaps more likely to see the defects in our educational system than the average teacher is. The fact that a thing has so long been done in a certain way won't have much effect upon a business man's idea of it, but it will upon a teacher's.

Now I would not have any one feel that I am setting myself up to criticise and condemn the school. I simply want to suggest that education, like everything else, is open to criticism and improvement. And I would like for every reader of these words to adopt with me as a working principle the policy of criticising nothing without offering or being ready to offer some definite suggestion to solve the difficulty. We must not destroy unless we can replace with something better. Along this line I would suggest a definite lines of meeting the situation which has been described, making some specific application, since I am engaged in that work, to the education of girls in high schools and higher institutions.

In the first place, if the schools are going to fit the people to live, they must teach them things which will help them in their actual living. The first improvement must be made in the subjects which are taught.

A considerable proportion of the women who are high school or college graduates engage in teaching either as a temporary or permanent occupation. Many more become teachers of their own children in their own homes. Almost all have or will have a vital interest in the school, as it contributes to the life of the family, the community and the state.

So the institution for girls and women which is sufficiently advanced to do so ought to offer its pupils something definite to prepare them for these different phases of educational work. Every woman ought to be familiar not only with general psychology, but with the psychology of the child; every woman ought to be familiar with the principles, if not with the history of education. For those who expect to teach in the schools, provision should be made for instruction in the principles of classroom management.

Most women, through the major part of their lives, have very intimate relations with the life of a home. The schools ought to teach them some of the things which a homekeeper ought to know. I have never believed that any schools ought to give much attention to the teaching of methods of work. These must always be largely devised by the individual to meet any particular situation. And I don't know that it is of such vital importance to teach a girl how to cook. But I do think she should be taught something of the chemical make-up of foods. A school could hardly be expected to give great attention to teaching girls the details of the management of the children. It does seem, though, that the schools ought to teach girls something of the physical and mental nature of the child, so that they may have some satisfactory basis upon which to formulate their own methods. No wise man would want any one to raise poultry for him who did not know something about them. How much more important it is that those who rear children should be familiar with the material with which they work!

Now do not understand me to mean that nothing else besides such subjects as have been mentioned ought to be taught. There are many subjects whose utility is not so obvious, but which, nevertheless, have real utility. The knowing how to "do stunts" on the parallel bars and the flying rings will never in itself be of great practical value to a boy. He doesn't expect to "do stunts" for a living. But the training of the body which these exercises give will be of considerable value to him in his living. When algebra pupils of today get out into the world they are not likely to find any problems of hare and hounds, or dog and deer, or of water flowing into a cistern from different places. But they are going to find problems which require clear, accurate and logical thinking and the fact that they have solved problems in algebra will fit them to solve problems in life. So we must not think that because the utility of a subject is not obvious that that subject has no utility. Subjects of greater utility might in some instances be found, but there are practically no subjects now offered by the schools which have not some real utility.

There are many studies, furthermore, which are necessary for the general development and broadening of a person. A knowledge of good literature, for instance, may not make a girl a better cook, but it will make her a finer woman. A knowledge of history is not necessary for one to be a good housekeeper, but it is very desirable to make her a broad woman and an efficient home-maker. The same is true of many subjects which might be mentioned in this connection. They are essential for the broadest development and the truest womanhood.

To solve the educational problem, therefore, we must make in the next few years a decided change in the school courses of study. Courses of real utility are going to be emphasized. When we think of utility, however, we must bear in mind that the utility of some courses, while very great, is not entirely obvious, and we must bear in mind that many courses have great general value without having any definite bearing upon one's specific work.

We cannot say now that all education or even the major part of it consists in supplying or acquiring knowledge. To be efficient and happy, people must have something else besides knowledge. They must have something which will insure their using knowledge rightly. They must have character. Education, then, is more to help people to be something than it is to help them to know something. Now the sort of things which a person studies has much to do with determining the sort of person he is. Perhaps the government of the schools, though, has more to do with the making of the character of the pupils even than the things which are studied. So not only are there going to be changes in the courses which are offered, but there are going to be changes in the government of the school.

Some time ago I saw on the cover of a copy of the Saturday Evening Post a picture which was characteristic of the old style school. A boy was shown with a slate upon which he had drawn a horrid picture. Under it he had written "Teacher." The teacher was a middle-aged man with spectacles and a very forbidding appearance; his hand was a bundle of switches. The expression on his face as he looked over the boy's shoulder at the drawing showed with what indignation he viewed the crime. It was a very amusing picture, but it portrayed a scene such as one rarely sees today. A somewhat different spirit has come or, at least, is coming into the school.

Some where, sometime, an idea got into the minds of school children that teachers were a sort of legitimate enemy of theirs. The pupils felt it their bounden duty, as some still feel, to do just as little work and just as much mischief as possible without being brought to account for it. And the whole understanding is undoubtedly due to a failure on the part of both teacher and pupils to appreciate fully the purposes of all school government. The pupils thing that the teacher is seeking to indicate his authority and rebel against it. If the pupil realized that the whole purpose of the teacher is to help him, I think this feeling would be largely eliminated.

Where a teacher is an autocrat, as most successful ones under our present system, unfortunately must be, even though the character of his class room be perfect, there is a tendency for this antagonism to be increased rather than diminished. And there is little opportunity afforded the pupils for that development which comes from regulation of self.

There is an undoubted tendency in modern education toward self-government. This has made very marked progress in the colleges in the regulation of student affairs outside the class room. Perhaps it may some day invade the class room itself.

Certain it is that some system of self-government would be a distinct improvement over our present system. This would, in time, largely eliminate the unfortunate antagonism between teacher and pupil and would give the pupil that true development which comes from having a voice in his own government.

In the school of the future, government is going to be made such as will best develop the pupil; it is not going to aim primarily at securing the absolute supremacy of the teacher. In the ideal school which I have in mind, the teacher and his pupils are going to be the best of friends. The teacher is going to make the pupils' development the supreme aim, so he is not going to be tyrannical, but will always try to be "square" and honest. The pupils are going to know that it is all for them, so they are going to give the teacher a "square deal."

The problem is, then, to make education prepare for life. The situation may be summarized under three heads; first, there is a common belief that education renders one impractical and there is today much outspoken criticism of the schools; second, the schools have not been reformed sufficiently considerably part of our people efficient and happy; third, there is an undoubted tendency among educators, as among other classes of workers, to cling to traditional courses and methods after these have outlived their usefulness. In considering the situation, the general principle upon which we must work is to criticise only when we have some definite improvement to suggest. The improvement of the school system will come along two general lines; first, courses of greater utility are offered; second, the development of the pupils will be more clearly recognized as the aim of all school life and there will be a tendency away from dictatorial authority on the part of the teacher toward self-government on the part of the pupil.

Such is the problem of the school. To all who are interested in the life of the individual and the state, it brings a challenge. Such are some suggestions for its solution. May he be privileged to see the day when they, or others which are better, will be universally recognized and adopted!

Open Air Schools Prove Beneficial

By Llewellyn D. Scott, Co-principal Washington Seminary, Atlanta

LLEWELLYN D. SCOTT. Washington Seminary.

There is probably no subject in all the field of educational thought that has engaged more of the attention of school men in recent years than the physical welfare of school children. The conviction is growing that the school should minister to the physical as well as to the mental side of the child, and that physical soundness in children makes for efficiency in study. Physical defects are perhaps the strongest factors in producing irregular attendance, truancy, backwardness and withdrawal from school; and school authorities are trying to discover and to correct these defects.

Evidence of this is found in the introduction of medical inspection, dental examination and treatment, the improvement of sanitation and school buildings, and provision of special rooms and schools for the more pronounced types of the physically weak and unfortunate.

But up to this time the efforts made by school authorities for the physical well-being of the child have been remedial rather than preventive; curative rather than conservative.

Among the remedial agencies employed, the open-air schools are of special importance in results obtained. The first city in the country to establish an open-air school for tuberculous and anaemic children was Providence, R. I., in 1908. Since that time the movement has spread to many parts of the country, including such leaders in educational endeavor as Boston, New York, Rochester, Newark, Pittsburg, Chicago, Cincinnati, Oakland, New Orleans, and, more recently, Atlanta.

In all the cities mentioned, so far as I can ascertain, except in Atlanta, the open-air schools are established almost solely for the care and training of children known to be physically weak and defective. This is doubtless as it should have been in the beginning of this movement.

But is it not of equal importance that we should now do equally as much for the protection and conservation of the health of children who are physically strong and efficient, as well as to try to cure those who have developed alarming symptoms?

During the past twelve months I have had excellent opportunity of observing, in the school with which I am connected, the results of the open-air school on girls of average physical health. In the summer of 1912, when the Washington seminary was equipping a new academic building, opportunity was afforded of carrying out our ideas of an open-air school.

Briefly described, the plan is as follows: The school building is surrounded with cement porches or terraces, fifteen feet wide, and without roofs. These porches are divided by wooden partitions into sections or rooms corresponding in size to the class recitation rooms, from which the porch rooms are entered. Top awnings are provided, where needed, to break the glare of the sun.

In all seasonable weather, which is about seven of the nine school months in this climate, the recitations are conducted in the open-air porch rooms. If the weather is too cold or rainy, the classes recite in the adjoining recitation rooms inside the building. In this way the students are never unduly exposed to the cold.

The results of this open-air plan in school work have been noticeably good: First, in the regularity in attendance, which, during the past session, was the best in the history of the school. Second, in the almost entire absence of truancy. Third, in the better average work and class standing, and fewer pupils failing in their studies. Fourth, in the marked impovement in the general health, and the almost complete absence of any cases of contagious diseases among the 300 pupils. Fifth, the spirit of cheerfulness and contentment among the pupils of all ages and grades.

In the light of this experience, it is my deliberate judgment that school boards and private institutions cannot in any other way so well expend money for school equipment as in providing for open-air schools of one type or another, both for the physically weak and those of the physically defective children, and for the consevation of the health of the psically sound.

Bailey-Mell

JACKSON, Ga., June 21.—The marriage of Miss Minnie Lee Bailey and Mr. George Edwin Mallet, which occurred Wednesday evening marked the most brilliant event in the season's social calendar. The ceremony, which was performed by Rev. M. S. Williams, took place at the First Methodist church at 9 o'clock.

The church was beautifully decorated, an altar of palms and ferns with pink hydrangea forming an effective back ground for the bridal group. Suspended over the altar was a large wedding bell of white tulle and smilax, which formed the center of the pyramid continued with graduating pedestals on each side. These pedestals, draped in white and trimmed with smilax, were connected with festoons of tulle and smilax caught with a huge butterfly bow and capped with silver candelabra holding white tapers. Tall baskets filled with pink roses crowned other pedestals and columns and all through the greenery were clusters of pink roses. The posts of the choir rail held a candelabra and a drapery of smilax and tulle formed a beautiful frieze about the choir loft and chancel rail. Preceding the bridal party marched the Jackson Riffles, of which the groom was a former captain. Miss Viola Slaughter presided at the organ, playing Mendelssohn's wedding march as a processional and during the ceremony she played softly and sweetly Barcarolle, from Tales of Hoffman, which was followed by Lohengrin's wedding chorus as the party left the church.

The bride was attended by her sister, Mrs. Eva Rey Bailey, as maid of honor, with Mrs. Leonard E. Shealey, of Oglethorpe, and Mrs. Robert Joseph Carmichael as matrons of honor. Her bridesmaids were Miss Jane Ham, Miss Pauline Mallet, Miss Mary Newton and Miss Nina Harris. The groom was attended by Dr. H. Quinn Fletcher, of Chattanooga, as best man, with Mr. Hugh Mallet, Mr. George Haines, of Augusta, Mr. Jack Wall, of Macon, and Mr. Joel Mallet, as groomsmen. The ushers were Mr. Thomas H. Buttrell, Mr. A. Hooper Carmichael, Mr. William Mallet, Hall and Mr. Frank Smith Carmichael.

Master Alice Carmichael acted as ring bearer, carrying the ring on a large pink rose and little Miss Martha Watts, the pretty flower girl, carried a basket of pink rose petals strewing them before the bride.

Miss Eva Rey Bailey, as maid of honor, wore an exquisite gown of white crepe de chine with chantilly lace and pearls and carried a bouquet of pink roses. The matrons of honor were lovely in white crepe meteor with trimmings of rhinestone and chantilly lace. They carried pink roses. The bridesmaids were all attractive blonds wearing pink crepe meteor draped with chantilly lace and trimmed with rhinestones, with girdles and sashes of sea foam green. They carried pink carnations.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of white ivory alteuse the skirt slightly draped and the corsage combining rose point lace and pearls. The filmy folds of her wedding veil were caught with a chaplet of orange blossoms, the veil falling over the graceful court train which was embroidered in pearls. Her bouquet was of orchids with a shower of valley lilies.

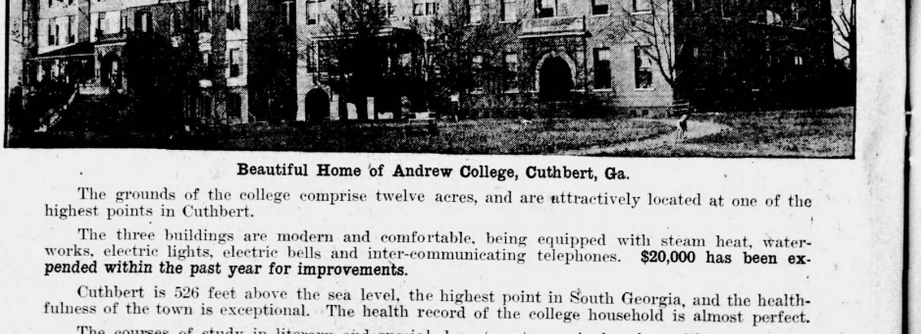
ANDREW COLLEGE

A DEMOCRATIC, CHRISTIAN HOME SCHOOL FOR GIRLS



Beautiful Home of Andrew College, Cuthbert, Ga.

The grounds of the college comprise twelve acres, and are attractively located at one of the highest points in Cuthbert.

The three buildings are modern and comfortable, being equipped with steam heat, waterworks, electric lights, electric bells and inter-communicating telephones. $20,000 has been expended within the past year for improvements.

Cuthbert is 526 feet above the sea level, the highest point in South Georgia, and the healthfulness of the town is exceptional. The health record of the college household is almost perfect.

The courses of study in literary and special departments are in keeping with modern tendencies in education, and are under the direction of teachers who are thoroughly qualified for their work. Courses in home economics and normal training are a feature. The officers and teachers number 17.

The cost is low, ranging from $178 to $196 for board, tuition and general fees. Additional charge is made for music, art and expression.

The president, his family, and all except one of the teachers, live in the college home. All know all the pupils by name, and take a personal interest in each. Since the boarding patronage is limited to 120, real home life is possible.

The spirit of the school is democratic and the atmosphere is Christian in a true sense. It is a wholesome place for a girl to live and grow in.

SOME REASONS FOR SELECTING A MILITARY SCHOOL FOR A BOY

By Colonel J. C. Woodward, President of the Georgia Military Academy.

The purpose of education is the symmetrical development of the whole boy in body, in mind, in heart—the growing and ripening of that full-orbed experience which fits him for his place in the social order and enables him to do successfully his part in the world's work. The fundamental requirement is a wholesome nature and discipline of all the physical, mental social, and spiritual powers during the plastic period of youth.

CHARACTER THE FIRST ESSENTIAL.

Character is the foundation stone of business success, financial strength, happy home-making, and every noble end. The elements of character are truth, honor, courage, self-control, purity of thought and action, and correct relationships with one's fellows. Therefore the most sacred and imperative duty resting upon parents and teachers is so to environ the boy as to lead him to define clearly these elements of character and thus encourage and enable him to incorporate them into his life.

THE YEARS OF YOUTH TOO PRECIOUS FOR EXPERIMENT.

The boys of today are surely the men of a great tomorrow. Charged by every law, human and divine, with the responsibility of a son's education, and guided by parental love and aspiration in giving to the world offspring worthy of our blood and the family name, every parent must go the limit of his resources in finding that school and those teachers who can with greatest hope of success lay a guiding hand upon the son during these golden years of greatest plasticity, pilot him through all the dangers which infest youth, and finally establish him in that splendid physical poise and perfection and those rich qualities of head and heart which constitute the glories of noble manhood.

HOW DOES THE MILITARY SCHOOL SOLVE THIS GREAT PROBLEM?

Emerson has said: "The first requisite of a gentleman is that he be a good animal." We may say without fear of controvertion that, in all ages, the man of vigorous physical constitution, other things being equal, has been winner in the struggle for position, honor and usefulness. What has the military school to offer in accomplishing this first requirement?

PHYSICAL COMFORT, SANITATION, BRIGHT SURROUNDINGS.

Every boy should certainly have the comforts of the home he leaves—pleasant surroundings, cheery, well-lighted, warm rooms, sanitary toilets and attractive baths, pure water and clean premises. These encourage application and study and are based upon the first hygienic principles of the military school of highest standards.

CHOICE FOOD SUPPLY.

Proper food paves the way for clean habits and induces vigorous growth of body and mind. Therefore the well-regulated military school provides a choice, varied, abundant, wholesomely-prepared diet. The morning meal should offer a bottle of fresh sweet milk and at least one other meal should be accompanied by a glass of buttermilk. With the passing of the months, we see the cheeks grow ruddy, the eyes flash luster, the muscles stand out and become firm, the step elastic and the body erect.

SPACIOUS, ATTRACTIVE PLAYGROUNDS.

When we remember that the play instinct in its noblest forms—physical prowess and boyish pride in the muscular symmetry of God's noblest creation, a perfect man, is culminating, the spirit of chivalry dawns in a military atmosphere and leads the normal, healthy boy into the charm of all wholesome physical activities, such as tennis, track, baseball, football and basketball. Seclusion is a boy's deadliest foe, for there solitary vices, secret self-abuse, cigarettes, etc., claim their army of victims. The military school leads the boy into a study of the laws governing body building and conservation of energy, carries him into the open with his comrades, teaches woodcraft, strategy, mapmaking, costrammentation, field sanitation, first aid to the injured, and gives him a confidence and ability to care for himself and others. All this presupposes and requires spacious, attractive play and drill grounds.

SOME PERSONAL ASSETS ATTAINED ONLY IN MILITARY SCHOOLS.

Military takes no time from a boy's regular academic studies. It does utilize his waste hours. It develops a manly, independent, self-reliant nature, system and punctuality in work, graceful form and bearing, personal neatness, polished manners, quickness of intellect, poise, attention, broad shoulders, deep chests, healthy lungs, strong physique, power of endurance, ability to lead and command. Who can compute the value of these assets in a young man's life? Yet they can come only through that training offered in the high-class military school.

COURAGE AND GALLANTRY.

The weakling, whether physical or moral, ever sells in the market of men at a tremendous discount, while gallantry always brings a premium. These qualities flourish in the military school.

TRUTH AND HONOR.

These twin virtues are emblazoned upon the escutcheon of every true soldier's life. They take deep root in the soil made fertile by the "esprit de corps" of the military campus.

INDUSTRY AND PERSEVERANCE.

In a well-appointed military school every hour of a student's life is given to certain duties which must be performed within the prescribed time. This leads to the habit of industry, system, perseverance.

HIGHEST TYPE OF CITIZENSHIP.

Taught daily to recognize constituted authority, in the home, in the school, on the drill field, and standing at "parade rest" every afternoon while his band plays the "Star Spangled Banner," and his nation's emblem is lowered from the flagpole, thus reminding him of what it has cost to give the flag its birth and place among the great every boy is trained to patriotic love for his flag and devotion to his country, the ideal citizen-soldier, never encouraging war, but ready, if need be, to defend his home and native land—a patriot.

"Breathes there a man with soul so dead
Who never to himself has said,
This is my own, my native land?"

WASHINGTON SEMINARY, NESTLED AWAY IN ATLANTA'S PRETTIEST RESIDENTIAL SECTION, OFFERS MANY NEW AND UNIQUE EDUCATIONAL FEATURES AND ADVANTAGES

BY S. S. HOWLE.

Washington Seminary for thirty-five years has been a great factor in the development of higher education for young women. It is one of the best known limited boarding schools in the south and its day school features have attracted pupils from the very best homes of Atlanta each year. During the past week I made a personal visit to this school that I might acquaint myself with its general plan of work, equipment, etc. I was deeply impressed with every feature and found that there are many unique and distinctive methods employed in this institution that belong to no other college in the south. There is an exclusiveness about the home-life that is unusual. The open-air school rooms, adjoining every housed room, where pupils enjoy the outdoor air and sunshine while doing their textbook work. Domestic science is now added in the history of educational work in the south, complete in all it phases, is made a part of the recognized course and each student must complete this before she is awarded a diploma as a graduate of the institution. These are a few of the entirely new features. There are many others, besides the branches of work prescribed by all of the recognized large schools and colleges of our country, all of which are embodied in the curriculum of the Washington Seminary.

LOCATION AND SURROUNDINGS.

The location of Washington Seminary, 1374 Peachtree street, Atlanta, is one of the most beautiful of any school in the entire country. The school is situated within, but near the limits of the city, in one of the loveliest, most attractive and desirable residential sections, directly on three electric lines, connecting with all parts of the city and its suburbs.

The private grounds, belonging to the institution, consists of three acres. Wide pretty lawns, walks, shade and ornamental trees and playgrounds afford freedom, freshness and healthfulness of the country, while a few minutes ride on the electric cars brings one into the very heart of Atlanta, in contact with people of affairs and opportunities for knowledge and culture.

Thus there are a happy combination of the advantages of both country and city, with the disadvantages of neither. The institution stands on a high elevation, more than eleven hundred feet above the sea level, which gives it a climate bracing and healthful, free from climatic extremes in the winter and summer, thus affording incentive for outdoor life throughout the year.

BUILDINGS AND EQUIPMENT.

The impressive, Colonial-style, two-storied home, nestled away among pretty shade and ornamental trees, approached by broad cement walks and surrounded by large beautiful lawns, is one of the most costly and attractive residences in the city. It was built a few years ago for a private home. Many citizens of Atlanta have asked the management if this lovely mansion was to be turned into a school building. Here is the answer that has been given. No, the big spacious handsomely furnished house is to be the HOME of part of the faculty and the boarding students. The school building, one of the most modern in design and equipment, is rapidly being constructed in the rear of the home." Those who have visited this home are unanimous in pronouncing it one of the most elegantly furnished and complete in every detail and appointment.

The parlors, living room, recreation room, dining rooms and halls are finished with artistic taste, while the bed rooms, for the most part, are arranged in suites with dressing rooms and private baths. The house contains twenty-three rooms and is built around a central, open-air court, about fifty feet square, which insures light, sunshine and excellent ventilation in every room. The residence stands two hundred feet from the street in its own private park, which is shaded, covered with blue grass and inclosed by a hedge five feet high. These surroundings insure the privacy and freedom of the grounds and the occupants of the home are not subject to the gaze and stare of the public passing on the public thoroughfare two hundred feet away. The grounds afford space for all favorite games and pastimes, and their beauty is an incentive to open-air recreation.

The school building is separate from the home, but connected with it by a covered way about thirty feet in length and of harmonizing design.

This building, perfectly new and modern in respect to comfort, light and sanitation, contains the study halls recitation rooms, music rooms, art rooms, gymnasium, shower baths, etc.

A distinctive feature of the school building is the arrangement for open-air class rooms. The building is surrounded on two sides by wide porches; these are divided into sections corresponding to the inside class rooms from which the porch rooms are entered. In all seasonable weather, which is about seven of the nine school months in this climate, the classes are conducted on the porches, thus securing real out-of-door class work. The effect of this upon the health of the students is admirable.

DISTINCTIVE FEATURES OF WASHINGTON SEMINARY.

There are many peculiar and distinctive features embodied in the method of training offered at the Washington Seminary. A handsome catalogue has been compiled, which embodies all of those features that commend the institution strongly to parents in the selection of the best school for their daughter. This catalogue will be mailed free to any one interested in the institution. So many are the features that it is impossible to deal in detail with each in this article, but briefly summarizing they are as follows:

First—The division of classes into small sections to secure individual attention to each pupil, and to adapt the instruction to personal needs.

Second—The number of boarding students is limited to about twenty-five whereby the school is a real home with parental care of the students in providing for their comfort, health and training.

Third—Four elective courses of study leading to graduation. The school period is the testing time, the time for trying out different powers, the time for forming life purposes. Consequently the opportunity is provided for the pupil to test her capacity in a fairly large number of relatively diverse kinds of work.

Fourth—Flexible system of classification, whereby the student is not forced rigidly into a uniform grade, but is allowed to enter the class in each study for which previous preparations fits her—the only just plan.

Fifth—Special college preparatory courses for students expecting to enter the Class A colleges, such as Vassar, Wellesley, Randolph-Macon, Goucher, etc. Certificates from Washington seminary admit students to such colleges without examinations.

Sixth—Practical course in Household Science to train girls for the duties and responsibilities of home-making and home-keeping.

Seventh—Physical training in well-equipped gymnasium to secure healthful development, bodily vigor and correct habits of life.

Eighth—Non-sectarian, but distinctly

Christian influences.

Ninth—Moderate cost. Investigation will show that the charges made for a course in this institution is remarkably low.

AIMS AND METHODS.

Washington Seminary aims to give its students a course of training approved by the most progressive educators.

The courses of study have been so arranged as to furnish the best facilities for a liberal education, and to return to society intelligent, able-bodied and capable women. Hard work is to be secured not by insistence upon uniformity of tastes and interests, but by the encouragement of special effort along lines that appeal to the individual. Hence, this institution offers four different courses of study, leading to graduation. In all of these courses, certain subjects are considered necessary, and are therefore required, while a considerable latitude of choice is given the student in the selection of the remaining parts of the course outlined in the catalogue.

There are no large classes in the school. Classes are divided into small sections so that the average number of students in each class shall be small. The school is provided with a large number of teachers, an average of one teacher to every fourteen pupils, which fact makes this individual method of work possible, and permits each pupil to advance in each subject just as rapidly as is consistent with her ability and industry.

It is interesting to note here the fact that no one teacher is placed in charge of one particular grade. Each pupil has the instruction of separate teachers on the various subjects taken.

KINDERGARTEN.

The courses of study as prescribed by this institution embrace a large field of work in educational pursuit. "Come let us live with our children," is an admonition we would all gladly heed, but in these busy, stirring times but few parents have time to devote to the culture of their children in the earlier years of their life. Realizing these conditions and at the same time the vast importance of training children in their early years this institution has established a Kindergarten in its system of education. In the Kindergarten the child receives systematic development in three ways. First the body is developed through the muscles and senses. Second, the mind is developed through the training of the emotions, the affections, the reason, the judgment and the will. Third, the soul is developed through the training of the worship and the training of the faith. The Kindergarten is in charge of experienced teachers and this work is made an important factor in the school. Children from four to six years of age are admitted.

PRIMARY.

Realizing that the Primary department is of the greatest importance in any system of education, the Washington Seminary has made this one of the very strong features of its work. The curriculum outlines a five-year course in this department and embraces many new features.

The intermediate department also receives due consideration and the work offered in this department corresponds to the sixth, seventh and eighth grammar school grades.

ACADEMIC.

The course of study in the Academic Department, leading to graduation, extends over a period of four years above grammar school grades. These studies and requirements are outlined in detail in the catalogue.

Other courses offered include the college preparatory, elective or special courses, advanced English Course, Post-Graduate, Science, Physical Training, etc.

The School of Music offers many superior advantages to the student of music and the courses prescribed include Harmony, Theory and Musical History, Piano, Pipe Organ, Violin, Voice Culture and Chorus work.

The School of Art is in charge of Miss A. C. Butler, who studied at the Chicago School of Art, the New York School of Art, and was a pupil of Chase. The methods used here are those used in the best art schools of New York and abroad. The course of instruction given includes charcoal, pen-drawing, water-color and oil-painting.

The School of Expression is under the direction of a very able instructor, not only a teacher of highest ability and success, but a platform reader who has won distinction throughout the country. Great stress is given every phase of study pertaining to work under such department.

HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE.

I was particularly impressed with what considera.ion is given domestic science and household science by this institution. The purpose of this course, which is required of all candidates for graduation, except those in the College Preparatory course, is to give girls a practical knowledge of and training in the arts of home-making and home-keeping. The course includes lectures, study and practical work in food production and manufacture, with excursions to manufacturing plants in order to learn something of the preparation of the various staple foods. Foods and Food Values; in this part of the course practical application of scientific principles is made in the cooking of foods and the planning and serving of meals; the nutritive value of foods is studied and dietetics planned for infants, children, the sick and others of the home. Sanitation; this part of the course embraces lectures on matters pertaining to the sanitary conditions of the home, affecting the health of its occupants, such as surroundings, equipment, cleaning process, disposal of wastes, etc.

IN CONCLUSION.

There are many most interesting and appealing features connected with Washington Seminary that have gone unmentioned in this brief story. The institution has issued a handsome catalogue embodying every detail of the school. This catalogue will be mailed to any one interested on application to J. D. Scott and E. B. Scott, presidents Washington Seminary 1374 Peachtree street, Atlanta, Ga., Phone Ivy 447.

Brenau, South's most Progressive College

BY Mary Carter Winter

BRENAU TENNIS GIRL

SINCE 1878, when Brenau College, Gainesville, Ga., was first chartered, the college has grown from a small, obscure seminary, with thirty students, to a great college for women, with an attendance of four hundred students or more from all parts of the world. It has assumed first place among the colleges of the south, and is steadily advancing along the most progressive educational lines.

Its growth has been phenomenal, but so logical that needed modifications of ideals and customs have been made naturally and without radical changes.

Brenau bases its claim to leadership on several distinctive innovations.

It was one of the first colleges for women to recognize the need of training young girls for their special duties as women, and led the movement for comprehensive education in domestic science and related studies by accrediting such studies among the regular college courses.

As early as 1898 Brenau had adopted the system of self-government in the student body—a system which is now being recognized by many other colleges, both for women and men; and which, since its establishment, has proven most successful.

Brenau's unit system, originated several years ago, is peculiarly advantageous, as it enables girls of varying mental endowment to complete the college course within the time best suited to their needs. Those who are especially gifted or mature may finish the prescribed work within three years instead of four, while those who work slowly because of ill health, or poor natural endowment, may finish in five years without embarrassment. The average girl under this system will make the required credits in the usual four years.

INTERESTING INNOVATIONS

Brenau leads also in its recognition of the necessity of familiarizing the students with the everyday things they will need to know when no longer sheltered by college walls.

How many times one hears some laughing or disparaging remark about a woman's inability to understand banking customs, postoffice regulations and business procedure in general. The Brenau girl has opportunity to acquire practical knowledge of these everyday things in a matter-of-fact way.

Brenau has a bank of its own, which is legally chartered and run according to the usual banking laws. Thus the students learn by practical experience how to make deposits, write checks, and keep tab on their bank balances. Also it provides a safe depository for money and valuables.

Brenau has a postoffice, modern and complete in every detail. It contains about a hundred boxes with combination locks and the usual delivery window.

Such innovations have a practical value in education and supplement literary and artistic development.

They are but a few of the many things which combine to make Brenau an unusually fine college for women.

AN "A-1" COLLEGE

The Conservatory of Music is one of the finest in America. Under the direction of Otto Pfefferkorn, composer, concert pianist and teacher, it offers unequalled opportunity for acquiring technical skill and an intellectual understanding of music.

Through the addition to the faculty this year of Gustav Louis Becker, the noted musician, who will direct the newly established normal department, the scope of the conservatory is materially broadened.

Another advantage is that Gainesville is so near to Atlanta that the students have opportunity to hear grand opera by the artists of the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, who annually come for a week's festival of music; as well as other events of educational and artistic value.

Brenau has an art school second to none in the south. Sketching, painting, pottery, metal work, wood carving, basketry, stenciling, interior decoration, all have their place in the work of the art student.

The Brenau School of Oratory is the largest for the study of literary expression in the south. Oratory graduates are entitled to admission to the senior class of the Emerson School of Oratory, at Boston, the foremost in America.

BRENAU'S FACULTY.

The Brenau faculty is composed of forty-four men and women who have studied in the universities of the world. Some have graduated from Berlin universities, from the University of Wuerzburg, from Paris, from London and American universities of note. Some have been with the college for years. Their work has become a part of themselves, the expression of their ideals and hopes. They have mothered so many girls that they instinctively know how to reach the best in each, and to each they give a part of their love and interest.

The students feel the Brenau atmosphere. They respond to the wishes and ambitions of their protectors and grow to strong and gracious womanhood.

When a girl goes to college she leaves the supporting influence of home surroundings and home love. It is the duty of the college to supply them.

At Brenau she enters a refined and cultured environment. She is associated with men and women who have in mind always the ideal Brenau Girl—that is, the Ideal Woman. Every influence lends itself to her development.

THE TRAINED NURSE'S DUTY

A trained nurse looks after her health—keeps her well instead of curing her when sick. Athletics, gymnasium work and pleasant excursions supplement the benefits of light, well ventilated and comfortable rooms for dormitory and class uses.

Whole-hearted comradeship with several hundred girls trains her to respect the rights of others and to recognize the necessity for a few fundamental laws. Brenau is a little world in itself wherein the student learns the meaning of justice, fair play and helpfulness.

Thus are strengthened her ethical and moral nature, while the influences of church and Y. W. C. A. form permanent religious standards.

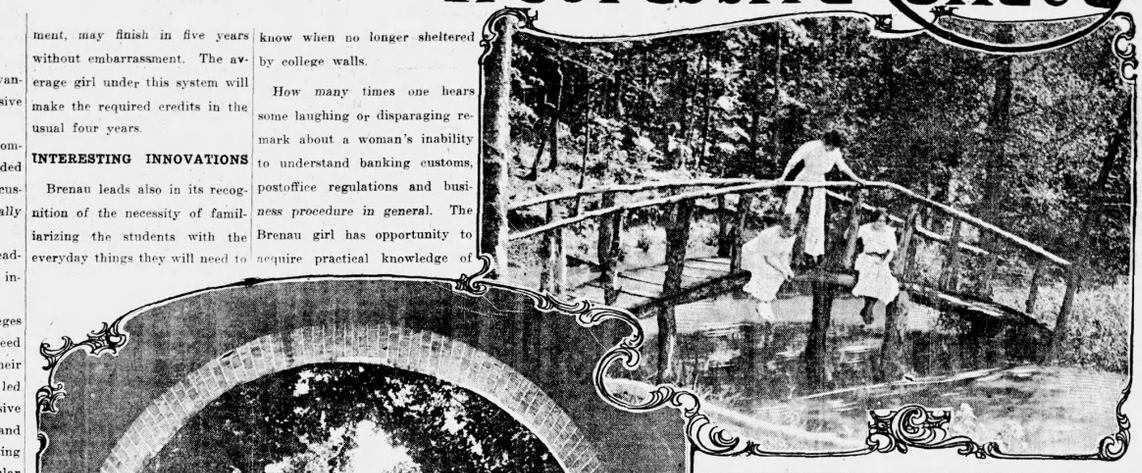
The Domestic Science Department creates a new and interesting viewpoint towards everyday things, training not the cook, the dressmaker, or milliner (though the work will prove valuable to any who may adopt professions of the kind); but the head of a household.

Brenau's distinctive features are too many to be enumerated. The best way in which to secure a more comprehensive idea of the college, is to send for the beautiful illustrated catalog; or, better still, pay Brenau a visit and see for yourself. You will like it.



A SCENE IN BRENAU PARK

Brenau Park is filled with pretty vistas. It is a natural growth of trees and shrubs, and every improvement is in keeping with the rustic atmosphere. The graceful bridges, spanning arms of Lake Lanier, and the Country club on the banks of the lake are picturesque additions to the woodland environment.

YONAH ENTRANCE

Brenau, with its beautiful buildings and large campus shaded with old oaks is like a picturesque old-world estate. The archway shown above is particularly lovely. It is the entrance to Yonah Hall, the main building in a group of thirty-two.

THE JAPANESE ROOM

The Japanese room is the most beautiful parlor in a series of four representing foreign countries. Its furnishings and decorations have been imported from Japan, and the Italian parlor, Egyptian room and East Indian room are also filled with curios from abroad.
